Toronto, June 13.—It developed at the Government enquiry into the collapse of the Farmers' Bank yesterday that the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co. assumed a loan of $55,000 to the bank during its organization stage. This amount was given in conjunction with a loan of $25,000 by the Trusts & Guarantee Co. James John Warren, manager of the latter concern, gave the above facts to the royal commission, presided over by Sir William Meredith, at a session in Osgoode Hall. Mr. Warren said that the insurance company was to receive for the loan a consideration of fifty-five-eightieths of the $1,000 bonus and interest at ten per cent.

Referring to the loan, Mr. Warren said, when questioned by Investigator Hodgins, that it was the first time he had met Travers, when he was approached for financial assistance to start the bank on its career. "He impressed me as a man of some standing," said he. The money was to be used in the organization of the bank and about $100,000 had been spent to buy up notes of the provisional directors, and Travers wanted the loan to replace it. He was to make up the difference of $20,000 himself, at least that was the understanding. The witness said that J. R. Stratton had brought Travers to him. Travers said during the interview that the banks were unfriendly, as they did not wish any more banks, and one trust company had turned him down. An inducement of $1,000 bonus for the loan was offered and ten per cent. interest.

"If there had been no inducement we probably would not have advanced the loan," said the witness. The impression was that the loan was being made to Travers personally and not the bank. Travers had promised to pay off the debt in a month. After he got the bank organized he said he would discount the notes and pay us back," said Mr. Warren.

"He said he had three-quarters of a million dollars in farmers' notes scattered through the country," continued the witness.

"Of course this was all moonshine," suggested Mr. Hodgins.

"Don't know that it's fair to call it that—not fair to the moon," was the answer.

The enquiry was adjourned until to-day, when Mr. Warren will be recalled to the stand.

GIRL SOUGHT TO STRANGLE BABY

Brockville, June 13.—Mabel Willard, aged 19 years, a domestic, was arrested here and taken to Ottawa on a charge of attempting to murder her three weeks' old baby. She took it to an institution there, but refused to comply with the condition that she remain with it nine months before its adoption. Subsequently the child was found deserted in a thicket near the home with a handkerchief tied tightly around the neck and life almost extinct.

Ten Years and Lashes for Assault.

Vancouver, B.C., June 13.—Frank Nelson and William Dawson were arrested Tuesday night for robbing and assaulting John Larsen. Both pleaded guilty yesterday morning and were sentenced to ten years and twenty lashes each.

Two Canoeists Drowned.

Vancouver, B.C., June 13.—Martin Nash and Harvey Lablanche were drowned by the upsetting of their canoe near Powell River Tuesday. The young son of Nash was rescued.

PRESIDENT AND ROOSEVELT MUST FIGHT TO A FINISH

Special to the Review.

Chicago, June 13— Many delegates to the Republican Convention, who arrived in the early hours of to-day talked of the advisability of a dark horse candidate for president, in the hope of bringing to the party harmony and success. The leaders, while hoping that some solution of the problem may be brought forward at the eleventh hour, apparently feel that the lines of battle between Taft and Roosevelt have been so sharply drawn and such high feeling has been aroused that the fight will have to be fought to a finish between the two candidates.

It was a day of Taft victories conclusively. In the cases of California, Arizona and Michigan contests the Roosevelt forces made a fight and voted their full strength against the Taft delegates. In the California case they secured a roll call, losing 16 to 37; in the Arizona contest they failed to get a roll call, and in the Michigan cases none was asked, although they voted against seating the Taft delegates at large.

The contests settled yesterday in favor of Taft were: Arizona, delegates at large, 6; California, fourth district, 2; Louisiana delegates at large, 6; first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh districts, 14; Michigan, delegates at large, 6; Mississippi, delegates at large, 4; first district, 2. Total 40.

Third Party Is Urged.

Los Angeles, June 13.—When the Californian delegation to the Republican national convention at Chicago arrived here yesterday and learned that two of the delegates had been deposed by the Republican national committee in favor of Taft contestants, resolutions were adopted condemning the national committee and talk of the creation of a third party was freely indulged in.

Newspapers supporting the "progressive" wing of the Republican party greeted the delegation with editorials, urging them to support a third party movement if Roosevelt should not be nominated, and the resolutions pledged the delegates "to go the limit" against "those who are putting through the anti-Roosevelt program at Chicago."

Roosevelt For Women's Suffrage.

Oyster Bay, N.Y., June 13.—Theodore Roosevelt announced yesterday afternoon through Judge Ben B. Lindsay of Denver that he is in favor of women's suffrage in this country, and that the platform which he will submit to the Chicago convention will contain an unequivocal declaration to that effect.

Teddy Is Roused.

Oyster Bay, N.Y., June 13.—"They are bolting from the Republican party at this moment," said Col. Roosevelt last night of supporters of President Taft on the Republican National committee.

The colonel was aroused to a "fighting mood by the news which reached him yesterday over his private wires from Chicago. He denounced with all the emphasis he could command the action of the national committee in declining the contests for seats in the national convention from Kentucky, Arizona and California.

HEARST VERSUS TAFT

Everyone has heard of W. R. Hearst, he of the millions in money and the string of yellow American newspapers. All of us, too, can recall how earnestly Mr. Hearst worked last summer in support of the Reciprocity Pact and how he carried the fight right into Canada and flooded this country with his saffron sheets. Mr. Hearst has not changed his mind, for he believes as strongly as ever in Reciprocity as a bargain advantageous to the Americans, and as the first step in the political absorption of Canada.

But just now Mr. Hearst is in a particularly ill-temper, and in the June number of his magazine he lambasts President Taft, heaping upon that gentleman opprobrium so intense that the strictures indulged in by Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the Montreal banquet appear mild in comparison.

It was not ever thus. Before the last general election in Canada Mr. Hearst blared forth the praises of President Taft, whom he heralded in the blackest of type as the greatest statesman the Republic to the south of us has ever produced.

Then why this change? Mr. Hearst has simply the same reason for animadversion as Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and that is that Mr. Taft has broken faith with the parties in the pact, and has shown up the true inwardness, the real motive, of the deal by the indiscreet publication of the "adjunct" letter to Col. Roosevelt, a letter which Mr. Taft himself marked "Confidential," and then violated that confidence himself by giving the epistle to the public.

The bitter truth which Mr. Hearst feels himself obliged to swallow is that now the cat is fairly out of the bag, and the last shred of the veil torn from Canadian eyes, it will be a difficult matter to carry on any further negotiations along the same lines. Then he is further incensed by the furore the Taft letter kicked up in England, and the bad feeling that has been engendered in that quarter. He also quotes Sir Gilbert Parker to show where Mr. Taft's letter has left the United States in English estimation.

In a word, Mr. Hearst, deeply chagrined and baffled in being disappointed in the accomplishment of one of his many hobbies, feels that it is useless to go forward with a game of cards after the other party has had a square look at what he holds in his hands. And while he talks the lower House of Congress refuses by a big majority to repeal the Reciprocity Treaty, thus proving more clearly than ever the fact that a large proportion of the American people still hope that a commercial arrangement so favorable to themselves may yet be made.

A QUESTION OF VEROCITY

It seems to be a question of veracity, between ex-Finance Minister Fielding and David Henderson, M.P., for Halton, as to whether the latter protested against the issuing of a certificate to the Farmers' Bank, when that matter was before Mr. Fielding's Department. Mr. Henderson has stated emphatically that he did protest and those who know him best will be inclined to give his statement unqualified credence. His own constituents are satisfied that he did just what he claims.

Mr. Henderson has for over a quarter of a century represented one of the wealthiest rural ridings in the Dominion and when the Farmers' Bank was in the formative stage, its promoters found a splendid field for their endevors among the rich farmers of Halton. All sorts of representations were made to men who had no knowledge of banking. Farmers who had probably never drawn a cheque in their lives were appointed directors, simply as a blind, and were paid $20 a day to attend meetings of the board. It was in that county that the defunct bank made its richest haul.

While the promoters were at work Mr. Henderson was alive to the danger to his constituents and it is a matter of public record that he protested vigorously against the issuing of a charter to the financial institution which was being built up on so flimsy a foundation, and propped by promises, which, in the very nature of things, any man with a knowledge of business methods, knew were impossible of fulfillment.

INTER-IMPERIAL TRADE

Delegates from Boards of Trades in all parts of the British dominions, in session in London yesterday, by the overwhelming vote of 122 to 9, pronounced in favor of Inter-Imperial preference, by adopting a resolution to that effect introduced by the Toronto Board of Trade.

The Borden Government's trade policy is in accord with this decision and Bonar Law, leader of the Unionist party, has but lately expressed his concurrence in the same issue. If the Asquith Government is indifferent to a question of so grave importance to the future of the Empire, that Government may yet learn that it is mistaken. If the successful carrying into effect of this policy depends upon the return of the Unionist party to power that return may not long be delayed.

The Congress yesterday also declared itself in favor of closer trade and political relations between Canada and Newfoundland and the British West Indies in view of the opening of the Panama Canal. In this, too, the policy of the Borden Government is upheld because a move has been made in that direction and consummated already in the case of the West Indies.

NOTE AND COMMENT

And to think that Col. Roosevelt does not feel duly grateful for the one lone contested delegate that the other side allowed him.

May Yohe, the actress, by disappearing for over a week and having detectives searching for her, has the old "stolen diamonds" racket as an advertising job beaten to a frazzle.

Some newspapers talk about that $100,000 fortune left by the late C. M. Hayes as though it were a mere trifle, barely sufficient to keep a man out of the poor house.

"I'll knock the big smoke stiff," says Pugilist Flynn referring to his coming fight with Johnson, the colored champion. The prize fighters are really becoming as personal and crude in their remarks to each other as are the presidential candidates.

Saskatchewan Methodist parsons have been recommended by Conference to abstain from dabbling in real estate. Will so many innocent victims of that game before them as terrible examples, the pertinent advice should not be hard to follow.

Hon. George E. Foster said in an interview in London yesterday that Canada feels no soreness over President Taft's attitude on Reciprocity. A nation that comes out of such a conflict unscathed and triumphant seldom does feel anything of the kind.

Close on the heels of the Montreal banquet came two elections, one in Kootenay, B.C., and the other in South Simcoe, the government winning both without a contest. The Liberal spirit must be surely broken when it shrinks from even a pretence at a fight.

GILCHRIST BAY

Special Correspondence

Gilchrist Bay, June 13—A number of the campers are moving into their cottages for the summer.

Mrs. W. Carveth and Miss E. Drain attended the big concert held at Warsaw, May 24th.

We are pleased to hear that Mrs J. Drain is recovering from her recent illness.

Mr. Thos. Miller met with quite a loss by the burning of one of his stables near White Lake.

A number of our girls and boys went to the city last week to attend Howe's circus.

Mr. Wm. Miller of Lakefield passed through this place on his way home from Fitzgerald's camp, where he had got his foot badly cut.

The Lord may know the best a good woman thinks, but not even the devil can know the worst a bad man thinks.

LAKEFIELD

Miss Maude Beavis spent a few days last week visiting friends in Peterborough.

Miss C. Clementi, of Peterborough, is the guest of Miss D. Hilliard.

Mr. O. L. Gregory, of the Traders Bank staff, is spending a couple of weeks visiting friends in Guelph.

Mrs. Dunn and Mr. G. Dunn, who have spent the winter in Cuba, are visiting in the village.

Miss M. Alford spent Sunday at Selwyn.

A St. Paul's Lawn Tennis Club was organized and the following officers were appointed:

Hon Pres.—Rev. J J O'Brien.
President—Mr. N Legault.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. C S Noble.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. H J Young.
Committee—Miss E Kennedy, Miss M. Kennedy, Miss Garvey and Mr. J. Garvey.

A very delightful evening was spent on Friday evening by the members of the Anglican Young People's Association at the home of Mrs. Harry Fitzgerald. The evening passed quickly in a very pleasant manner until luncheon hour. The guests then proceeded to the dining room where a very dainty luncheon was served.

The second baseball game of the season of the Town Baseball League was played on Friday evening on the Agricultural Grounds, between the Lakefield High School and the village club. The game was most exciting as it ended in a tie, the score being 5—5. Dr Gibson acted as umpire in a very able manner.

Miss Melessa Alford gave a dinner to a number of her friends on Tuesday afternoon, June 4. The guests were conveyed to the third island in Mr. Wm. Blewett's launch. The afternoon passed rapidly in different romps and sports. After supper the party went for a sail up the lake, returning about eight o'clock.

A new cement and stone sidewalk is being constructed at the St. John's old Sunday school. The sidewalk is being made to correspond with the old decayed look of the church. The church is one of the oldest buildings in this vicinity, it being erected 70 years ago. In the summer it is a very beautiful and picturesque sight as it is nearly all ivy clad. The sidewalk makes a great improvement to the appearance of the property.

The third baseball game of the league was played on the Agricultural Grounds Monday evening between the village Clerks and the Oddfellows. The game was very interesting and exciting. The Clerks played a very good game but were not victorious, the game ended with a score of 11—4 in favor of the Oddfellows.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 12.—There was less demand for Manitoba spring wheat from foreign buyers, but the bids from London for low grades would bring back cost, while for the high grades they were 1½c to 2c per bushel below cost. Cables from London stated that all the flour mills have shut down and vessels were returning to this port with all their grain on board on account of the strike. The local demand for oats was better and sales of 100,000 bushels of No. 2 Canadian western and sample grades were made to arrive. Flour is quiet but firm. Millfeed steady. The butter situation is unsettled, owing to the more liberal arrivals. Cheese is steady with a better demand from over the cable. Eggs fairly active and demand for provisions fair.

Corn—American, No. 3 yellow, 84c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 55c to 55½c; do., No. 3, 50c to 51½c; extra No. 1 feed, 51½c to 53c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 12.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market receipts for the week ending June 8 were 825 cattle, 00 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 1600 calves. The supplies on the market this morning for sale consisted of 700 cattle, 00 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 1400 calves.

A firm feeling prevailed in the market for cattle at the increase in prices noted earlier in the week. Demand was good and an active trade was done. Really choice steers were scarce and sales of such were made at $8.25 to $8.50, good at $7.75 to $8, fair at $7.25 to $7.50 and the lower grades at $6.50 to $7 per cwt. Good to choice butcher cows were strong and prices were steady. Choice sold at $7.25 to $7.50; good, at $6.50 to $7, and common all the way from $4.50 to $6. Bulls were firm at $7.30 to $7.75 for choice and the lower grades sold from that down to $4.50 per cwt.

Supplies of small meats were larger than they have been of late for which the demand was active and sales of old sheep were made at $5 to $5.50, spring lambs at $5 to $6 and calves at $3 to $10 each. There was no further change in the hog market, the feeling being easy the recent decline in prices on account of the liberal supplies coming forward and still lower prices are anticipated in the near future.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, June 12.—Cattle—Receipts, 4,000; market strong, mostly 10c higher; beeves, $6.10 to $9.40; Texas Steers, $6.50 to $8.25; western steers, $6.50 to $8.25; stockers and feeders, $4.30 to $6.90; cows and heifers, $2.90 to $8.30; calves, $6 to $8.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 23,000; market dull, 5c to 10c lower; light, $7.15 to $7.62½; mixed, $7.20 to $7.60; heavy, $7.15 to $7.60; rough, $7.15 to $7.25; pigs, $5.25 to $7; bulk of sales, $7.45 to $7.55.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 20,000; market steady to 15c lower; native, $3.85 to $5.25; western, $3.60 to $5.25; yearlings, $5 to $7. Lambs, native, $4.50 to $8; western, $4.75 to $8.25.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

"Unfortunately, our points of view are erreconcilable," went on the Frenchman airily. "I might claim that the term adventurer, as applied to me, is a harsh one. You may inquire where and how you choose in Paris, and you will find no discredit attached to my name. But that phase of the difficulty is now of no consequence. Let us keep to the main issue. Some three months ago I made the acquaintance of a lady fitted in every respect to fill my ideal. I was on good terms with her father, and by no means distasteful to the lady herself. Given a fair opportunity, I thought I might win her, and I was puzzling my wits to know how best to attain that most desirable end when Fate apparently opened a way. But you have no doubt observed in life that while one can seldom misinterpret Fate's frowns, her smiles can be damnably misleading. Sometimes they are little else than malicious leers; it was so now, and I quickly found that I had erred badly in thinking that I had been vouchsafed a golden opportunity——"

"Can't you spare me some of this theorizing?" broke in Medenham with a cold impatience. "You happened to send for me at a moment when I was exceedingly anxious to meet you. The fact that I am here in response to your request stops me from carrying out the special purpose I had in view. That can wait, though not very long. At any rate, you might save yourself some hair-splitting and me some exercise of self-restraint by telling me what it is that you want."

"A thousand regrets if I am boring you," said Marigny, leaning back in the chair and laying the cigarette on the mantelpiece. "Yet bear with me a little while, I pray you; these explanations are necessary. A sane man acts with motive, and it is only reasonable that you should understand my motive before you hear my project."

"Ah, then, there is a project?"

"Yes. You have stepped in between me and the realization of my dearest wish, of my main object in life. You are, I take it, a soldier and a gentleman. There is a way by which men of honor settle these disputes—I invite you to follow it."

The fantastic proposal was made an air of dignity that robbed it of any inherent ludicrousness. Greatly as he despised this man, Medenham could could not wholly conceal the wonder that leaped to his eyes.

"Are you suggesting that we should fight a duel?" he asked, smiling with incredulity, yet constrained to believe that Marigny was really speaking in cold blood.

"Yes—Oh, yes. A duel—no make believe!"

A curious change came into Marigny's voice at that instant. He seemed to bark each staccato phrase; a vindictive fire gleamed in his black eyes and the olive tint shadowed beneath the pink and white of his skin.

Medenham laughed, almost good-humoredly.

"The notion is worthy of you," he said. "I might have expected it, but I fancied you were more sensible. Surely you know enough of my world to realize that such a thing is impossible."

"It must be made possible," said Marigny gravely.

"It cannot—I refuse."

"I am partly prepared for some such answer, but I shall be just to you in my thoughts, Viscount Medenham. I know you are a brave man. It is not cowardice, but your insular convention that restrains you from facing me on the field. Nevertheless, I insist."

Medenham threw out an impatient hand.

"You are talking arrant nonsense for what purpose I can hardly conceive," he said, frowning with vexation at the tragi-comedy into which he had been drawn. "Frenchmen, it is true, regard these things from a different standpoint. That which seems rational to you is little else than buffoonery to me. If that is your object in seeking an interview, it has now been accomplished. I absolutely decline to entertain the proposition for a moment. You have certainly succeeding in lending an air of drivel to a controversy that I regard as serious. I came here filled with very bitter thoughts toward you, but your burlesque has disarmed me. It is only fair, however, that I should warn you not to cross my path again, since one's sense of humor may become strained, and that will be bad for you."

His attitude seemed to betoken an immediate departure, but Marigny looked at him so fixedly that he waited to hear what the other had to say. He was quite determined now to keep Cynthia out of the discussion. Even Vanrenen's letter need not be mentioned until he had seen the millionaire in person and disabused his mind of the inept inventions with which the Frenchman had perplexed him.

"I don't take your refusal as final," said Count Edouard, speaking very slowly, and choosing each sentence with evident care. "I was at pains to explain my position, and there now devolves upon me the disagreeable duty of telling you what will happen if you do not fight. You English may not care to defend your honor in the manner that appeals to a more sensitive nation like the French, but you are vulnerable in your womenfolk. I now tell you quite frankly, that if you do not abandon your pretensions to Miss Cynthia Vanrenen, I shall make it my special business in life to ruin her socially."

Medenham listened more in amazement than indignation.

At first, the true significance of the threat left him unmoved. In his ears it was a mere repetition of the bogey raised by Vanrenen, and that was the wildest nonsense.

"I really do not think you are responsible for your words," he began.

Marigny swept aside the protest with an emphatic gesture.

"Oh, yes, I am," he said, his voice low, sibilant, menacing. "I have laid my plans, and shall pursue them with a complete detachment. Others may suffer—so shall I. I have practically reached the limit of my resources. In a month or less I shall be penniless. What money I could scrape together I devoted to the furtherance of this marriage-project, and I am well aware that when you meet Mr. Vanrenen, my poor little cobweb of intrigue will be blown into thin air. You are quite a desirable parti, Viscount Medenham—every condition points to your speedy and happy union to the lady of your choice. It is, however, a most unfortunate and lamentable fact that she also happens to be the lady of my choice, and I shall revenge myself on you, through her, in the way best calculated to pierce your thick British hide. The future Countess of Fairholme should be superior to Caesar's wife in being not only above suspicion but altogether removed from its taint. I am afraid that it will be my task to tarnish her escutcheon."

"You miserable rascal," cried Medenham, stung beyond endurance by this extraordinary declaration of a vile purpose, "why should you imagine that I shall allow you to sit there and pour forth your venom unscathed? Stand up, you beast, or must I kick you up!"

"Ha! You are ready to fight now, my worthy Viscount! But not in your costermonger fashion. You cannot, because I have your promise. You see I have taken your measure with some accuracy, and hard words will not move me. I mean you to understand the issue clearly. Either you meet me under conditions that will ensure a clear field for the survivor, or I devote myself to spreading in every quarter most likely to prove damaging to Miss Vanrenen the full, though perhaps, untrue, but none the less fascinating story of her boating excursion on the Wye at midnight."

He did then spring to his feet, for Medenham was advancing on him with obvious intent to stifle the monstrous accusation by force.

"No! No! you will achieve nothing by violence," he shouted. "You are not so much my physical superior that I cannot defend myself until assistance arrives, and I will ask you to consider what manner of gloss will be placed upon your actions if I drag you before a magistrate for an assault. Why, man, you are absolutely at my mercy. Ah, touche! You felt the point that time. Que diable. I gave you credit for a quicker wit, but it is gratifying to learn that you are beginning at last to see that I am in deadly earnest. When I strike there is nothing half-hearted behind my blow; I swear to you that I shall neither relent nor draw back. If ruin overwhelm me, Cynthia Vanrenen shall be involved in my downfall. Picture to yourself the smiles, the whispers, the half-spoken scandal will cling to her through life. Who will believe her when she says that she was ignorant of your rank when she started out from London? The incomparable Cynthia and the naughty Viscount touring their thousand miles through England with Mrs. Devar as a shield of innocence! . . . Mrs. Devar! . . . Can't you hear the long and loud guffaw that would convulse society as soon as her name cropped up? Ah, you are writhing under the lash now, I fancy! It is dawning on you that a peril greater than the sword or bullet may be near. Dozens of people in Paris and London know, or guess, at any rate, that I was Cynthia Vanrenen's suitor, but as many hundreds as there were dozens shall be told that I cast her off because of the taint placed on her by your silly masquerading. You have no escape—you have no answer—your marriage will only serve to confirm my words. Do you hear? I shall say . . . But you know what I shall say. . . . Now, will you fight me?"

"Yes," said Medenham.

A spasm of hate and furious joy struggled for mastery in Marigny's face, but he showed an iron resolution that almost equaled the coolness of the man whose scornful gaze might well have abashed him.

"I thought so," he said—"under terms, of course?"

"Terms, you beast! The only terms I ask are that you shall stand before me with a sword in your hand."

"A sword!—is that quite fair? You Englishmen are not proficient with the sword. Why not pistols?"

"I think you are right," said Medenham, turning away as if the sight of him was loathsome. "You deserve the death of a dog; it would dishonor bright steel to touch you."

"We shall see," said Marigny, who having achieved his purpose, was now apparently unconcerned as to its outcome. "But it would be folly to fight without arriving at an understanding. I shall try to kill you, and I am sure you will admit that I have striven to force you into an active reciprocity in that respect. But one might only be wounded—that is the lottery of it—so I stipulate that if fortune should favor me, and still you live, you shall agree to leave me in undisturbed possession of the field for at least six months after our encounter."

Medenham still refused to look at him.

CURED OF THIS HORRIBLE DISEASE

Edmonton Girl saved By "Fruit-a-tives"

EDMONTON, ALTA., Nov. 20th 1911.

"I had been a sufferer from babyhood with that terrible complaint, Constipation.

I have been treated by physicians and have taken every medicine that I heard of, but without the slightest benefit. I concluded that there was no cure for this horrible disease.

Finally, I read of "Fruit-a-tives" and decided to try them, and the effect was marvellous.

The first box gave me great relief, and after I used a few boxes, I found that I was entirely well.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that ever did me any good for Chronic Constipation and I want to say to all who suffer as I did—Try "Fruit-a-tives—" why suffer any longer when there is a perfect cure in this great fruit medicine"

(MISS) E. A. GOODALL.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy in the world made of fruit and the only one that will completely and absolutely cure Constipation.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Woman's World

Mrs. Isabella Goodwin, First Woman Detective.

MRS. ISABELLA GOODWIN.

For the first time in the history of New York's detective department a woman has been made a first grade officer. This honor was recently bestowed upon Mrs. Isabella Goodwin, who was raised from the rank of police matron to that of acting detective sergeant, with a salary of $2,500.

Mrs. Goodwin won her spurs through her clever work in running down the band of taxicab robbers in New York city who recently obtained $25,000 from runners of a well known Gotham bank.

Mrs. Goodwin's husband, before he died sixteen years ago, was a roundsman. After his death she became police matron, at the same time doing odd detective jobs of work for various officials of the detective force.

About two years ago she became regularly attached to the staff. Mrs. Goodwin outranks her son, who is a second grade detective.

Woman's Leap Into Reality.

There is no doubt that the type of woman is changing beyond recognition and that any mid-Victorian who might arise again—with the exception of George Meredith and John Stuart Mill—would rub his eyes in amazement at the modern female whom he would find on platforms and in council rooms, in operating theaters and in city offices—wherever, in short, there is serious business on hand.

Just now we are celebrating the centenary of Charles Dickens, the creator of Dora Copperfield and Little Nell, of Miss Squeers and Kate Nickleby, runs an article in Lady's Pictorial. I wonder what he would have thought of the young person of 1912 who climbs the Matterhorn, pilots her own aeroplane, beats masculine champions at golf and travels alone through wild and desert places?

For, with her usual deliberateness, her intuitive grasping of natural and fundamental laws, woman has instinctively set out to improve her physical type before she makes great demands upon her brain.

The result is that we see around us a race of young athletes, intent upon increasing their stature and specially apt at all games which demand muscle and skill. The new generation is not beautifully frail, but singularly self reliant and upstanding. Above all, it has banished the word sentiment from its vocabulary.

Charles Dickens' idea of a woman who worked or who took an interest in public affairs was a Mrs. Jellyby, a ludicrous and untidy person who neglected her home and filled the dusty house with pamphlets. This, however, was not the great novelist's fault. He was seeking for comic types and had not the larger vision of a Meredith, who, already in the sixties of the last century, was drawing a gallery of women folk unmatched save in Shakespeare's plays.

Moreover, all the Victorian novelists save Meredith had similar prejudices and convictions about women. Thackeray was in reality no better, though he wrote about society, while Dickens described those inimitable back parlors. To Thackeray a clever woman (if she were English, for his French ladies were allowed more latitude and more Gebildung) must, of necessity, be a woman of doubtful moral character.

Beatrix, Becky and Blanche Amory are all wheedling, alluring young things with brains, so they must needs all end badly, rather to the readers' indignation. This attitude toward the feminine sex was indeed a survival of the roast beef and port wine period, when John Bull was a very domineering person and suffered no pretensions on the part of his women folk. Indeed, did they show any signs of a mentality of their own he annihilated them socially by dubbing them "bluestockings."

A Voter at Least.

Aunt Spinsterly—I hope that your opinions uphold the dignity of our sex, Mamie, and that you believe that every woman should have a vote?

Mamie—I don't go quite so far as that, auntie, but I believe that every woman should have a voter.

NAVIGATION NOTES

Lindsay Post—Tuesday evening the fishery patrol boat Naiad, Capt. Carson in command, steamed into Lindsay port after doing patrol work on other stretches of the Trent waterway.

That Captain Carson is doing good work in running down lawbreakers is evident from the fact that he had with him about 1,500 feet of net, which he had seized. The captain is a terror to evil doers and sweeps down on them then they least expect it. As a result of his efforts the law is pretty generally observed.

HOW TRAVERS SECURED THE LOAN OF EIGHTY THOUSAND

Hon. J. R. Stratton Introduced Him to James J. Warren and the Deal Was Made, on the Strength of Which Travers Secured a Certificate—Subscribers' Notes Were Given as Collateral.

At the session of the Farmers' Bank investigation held in Toronto yesterday the mystery as to how Travers secured a loan of $80,000 to give the institution sufficient capital to secure a certificate from the Treasury Board, was cleared up. Mr. James J. Warren was the witness who tendered the explanation and here is given the substance of his testimony as published in the Toronto News:

Mr. James J. Warren, who was managing director of the Trust and Guarantee Company, in 1906, was the first witness when the inquiry resumed. Mr Hodgins examined him at length in regard to the $80,000 loan which figured so prominently in the opening of the bank.

Mr. Warren said that Hon. J. R. Stratton had brought Travers into his office, having met him at the King Edward Hotel. This was late in September or early in October of that year.

"I had never met or heard of Mr. Travers before," said Mr. Warren. "Travers said he had been connected with the Merchants Bank for 20 years and had now been retained by the provisional directors of the Farmers Bank to complete organization which had been in progress for a long time and his predecessors had spent $50,000 cash on it.

He was seeking an $80,000 loan to replace that $50,000 with the bank and provide further funds, and that he had purchased or agreed to purchase from the provisional directors the subscribers' notes and it was on these he wished to negotiate the loan.

NO SECRECY ABOUT IT.

Mr. Warren said Mr. Stratton was present at the interview and heard it all. Neither of them was surprised at Traver's request. Travers was very frank. There was nothing of the 'you must not say this or you must not say that' about it. He said that he had offered the loan elsewhere without success. The banks, he stated, were unfriendly as they did not want any more banks. Travers offered the $1,000 bonus and 10 per cent. interest.

According to the Toronto Star, Mr. Warren said in his testimony that Travers told him about "the private business" in Peterborough, where another bank "sort of drew away" his branch in Peterborough, taking his manager and most of the deposits in one day, forcing him to meet unexpected demands.

"I said at the time that it was not a nice thing for a bank to do to a young bank," added Mr. Warren.

When ex-Finance Minister Fielding was on the stand the other day he said with reference to the loan above referred to that he recalled a conversation he had had with Mr. Geo Burn, of the Bank of Ottawa, and that Mr. Burn had suggested that Mr. Fielding could secure some information with regard to the Farmers' Bank from Hon. J. R. Stratton, then President of the Trust and Guarantee Company, of Toronto, who was in Ottawa at the time. This was in reference to money borrowed from the Guarantee Company and not paid back at that time. Mr. Fielding had not seen Mr. Stratton and did not consider it his business to do so.

As bearing upon this point, according to the report of the proceedings in the Toronto Globe, Chief Justice Meredith asked Mr. Fielding:

"If you had known that a portion of the capital was raised by borrowing money which was to be afterwards paid back would you have advised the Treasury Board not to have issued the certificate?"

"Assuredly," was Mr. Fielding's emphatic reply according to the same report.

It is now clear how Travers secured the loan which enabled him to obtain a certificate from the Government.

Travers told Mr. Warren that no regular bank would advance him the money. If he had never been introduced to the managing director of the Trust and Guarantee Company the chances are he would not have raised the necessary capital and the certificate to the Farmers' Bank would never have been issued.

In regard to the deposit account whereby circulation of the Farmers' Bank could be paid out over the counters of the Trust Comapny. Mr. Warren said it was to some extent owing to Travers' claims that the other banks were set against the Farmers and was returning the circulation to the bank as fast as they got it.

COL. CLEGG WOULD FAVOR AN EXCHANGE OF WAR TROPHIES

Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, has not yet decided to grant the request of the Boston Historical Society for the return of the cannon captured by the British and now at the Citadel in Quebec. Col Hughes is in communication with the United States War Department, but has not yet indicated what his final decision is likely to be.

Among military men all through the country, the sentiment seems to prevail that the trophy should be kept where it is, at least until some offer of an exchange is made by the Americans.

Col. Clegg, who commands the local militia, said to the Review this morning that in his opinion it would be a mistake to return the gun. The Boston Historical Society, was he said, to be credited with the best of intentions but the cannon is worth as much historically to Canada as to the United States and perhaps more. Col. Clegg expressed himself as, perhaps, favorable to an exchange of war trophies because of the one hundred years of peace, but thought that as this had not been suggested in this instance the cannon in question should be kept because of its historical significance.

On the lawn in front of the City Hall in Detroit, Mich., there are displayed half a dozen cannons which were captured by Commodore Perry when in the war of 1812-14 he defeated a detachment of the British fleet in Lake Erie, and made himself and that event famous in history more by the dispatch which he sent to headquarters announcing the result than by the engagement itself. These cannons are one of the sights proudly called to the attention of visitors.

How would the United States War Department consider a request for the return of these relics?

There has always been a dispute as to which side won in the Battle of Bunker Hill. McLaughlin, the American historian, says of it:

> "The world knows the result. Beaten back in two desperate assaults, the British finally captured the redoubt when the provincials had run out of ammunition. It was a victory dearly bought, and though the Americans were for the moment overcome by mortification, their brave resistance to disciplined troops was of great moral effect."

Despite the obvious implication that if the American supply of ammunition had not failed, the result might have been different, this sets at rest the question of who was victorious.

Similar requests have been preferred before and were refused both by Sir John Thompson's administration and by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

OBITUARY

Mrs. James Herbert

The death took place in Emily township on Tuesday of Mrs. James Herbert, aged 98 years, 11 months, death being due to the infirmities of old age.

The deceased was born in King's County, Ireland, and came to Quebec when twelve years of age, settling at Rawdon. She was married at the age of eighteen, her husband predeceasing her 27 years ago. At that time Rawdon was nothing but a dense forest, but the young couple set to work with indomitable energy and hewed out a home for themselves.

On the death of Mr. Herbert, Mrs. Herbert moved to Ontario, and has lived in Emily for the past five years. To their union were born a large family of children, only four of whom are living:—Mr. Robert Reed, of Peterborough; William Herbert, of Montreal; Mrs. Fred. Veals, of Franklin; Mrs. Charles Veals, of Omemee.

The deceased had a sister who died in Montreal, aged 101 years.

In religion the late Mrs. Herbert was a Methodist. She has over 100 descendants, 50 grandchildren, nearly 70 great grandchildren and one great grandchild. A photo was taken of five generations about two years ago.

The funeral was held from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Charles Veals, Lot 1, Con. 3, Emily to-day, at 1.30 o'clock, and proceeded to Riverside cemetery for interment.

Mrs. R. E. Harrison

The news of the death of Mrs. R.E. Harrison (nee Miss Mabel Harding) in Lamont Alta., on Tuesday, June 11th, has been received with deep regret by the friends of the family in this city. Mrs. Harrison was married four years ago. Mr. Harrison had been engaged in a drug store here, and afterwards moved west. After their wedding they moved to Lamont, where Mr. Harrison is in business. Mrs. Harrison's death was in childbirth, and the news was a shock to her relatives and friends. Mrs. Harrison was widely known in Peterboro. She is survived by her husband, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Harding and her sister, Mrs. Robt. Cotton.

The funeral was held to-day at Lamont, Alberta.

DEATH OF MR. CHAS TUCKER

Had Travelled Extensively for Sherwin-Williams Paint Co.

The death of Mr. Charles Tucker son of Mr. Thomas C. Tucker, Reid st. took place yesterday morning at his home. Mr. Tucker has been ailing for some time, having had a paralytic stroke some two years ago on his return after a trip around the world.

Mr. Tucker was for many years a valued employee of the Sherwin Williams Paint Company, first as one of their representatives in Canada and then later as foreign representative. His duties were to place agents in South America, South Africa and the West Indies, a position calling for much executive ability. It was while working in the tropical countries that his health became impaired and on his return home from South Africa, some four years ago, he had a stroke of paralysis, from which he never fully recovered.

That Mr. Tucker's services were highly valued by the Sherwin Williams Paint Company, is shown by the fact that they have paid his salary ever since his illness.

He is survived by his father, Mr. Thomas C. Tucker, and his sister, Miss Elizabeth Tucker, at home here, and by a brother, Mr. John T. Tucker of Winnipeg.

The family will have the deepest sympathy of a large number of friends in their bereavement.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 543 Reid street on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

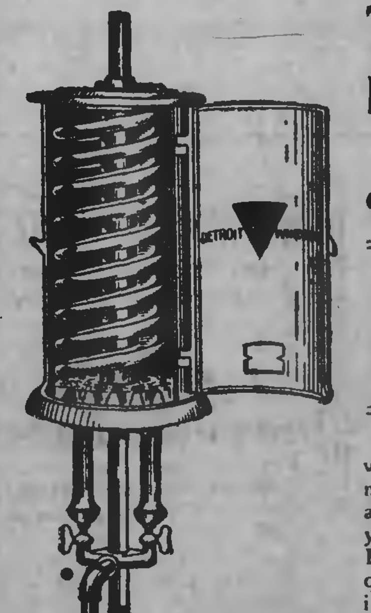
CLOSING CONCERT AT CONSERVATORY

The final rehearsal of the Conservatory of Music orchestra in preparation for the closing concert, Tuesday June 25th, was held last night. The concert will be given under the auspices of St. James' church, in the Conservatory of Music Hall.

The feature number of the program will be Webber's Overture, "Der Frietschutz."

You Don't Have to Start a Fire in the Coal Range When Someone Wants a Bath

IT'S no longer necessary to hustle around gathering up paper, carrying up wood and lugging up coal every time somebody wants to take a bath. You no longer need to heat up your kitchen, in fact the entire house every time an extra quantity of hot water is desired.



THERE'S AN EASIER WAY
USE AN
GAS
Water Heater

This heater occupies but very little space. It is connected to your kitchen boiler and is operated as easily as your gas range. The IDEAL Heater heats water very quickly—enough for a bath in 20 minutes.

This Heater Will Not Overheat Your Kitchen

We have an IDEAL connected and in operation at our office. We'd be glad to show it to you if you'd pay us a visit. If that isn't possible, have us send a representative to tell you more about it.

HON. CLIFFORD SIFTON UNABLE TO COME TO PETERBORO TOMORROW

Word has been received in the city that Hon. Clifford Sifton will not be able to come to Peterborough to-morrow through illness, and the meetings which were to have been held in the Collegiate Institute have been indefinitely postponed.

Dean Fernow has been advised and he and Hon. Mr. Sifton will visit Peterborough at a date to be announced later.

FIRST BAND CONCERT IN VICTORIA PARK TOMORROW NIGHT

The 57th Regimental Band, by kind permission of the officer commanding, will render the first band concert of the season to-morrow evening in Victoria Park. The program will be commenced sharp at eight o'clock, to enable the band to finish early owing to the coolness of the atmosphere at ten o'clock.

The following program has been selected:

March—Lincoln's Sentenio.
Overture—Raymond.
Selection—That Flying Rag.
Russian Folk Songs — "Fantasia," with tubular chimes.
Intermezzo—Hobomoko.
March—Selected.
God Save The King.

SHUNTING AT NIGHT TO BE ELIMINATED AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE

Trainmaster McMillan, of Lindsay, is in the city to-day in the interests of the Grand Trunk Railway system, in connection with the noise of the trains on Bethune street and near Nicholls Hospital. His visit is the result of correspondence with some of the aldermen, and he talked with Ald. Gordon and Mayor Bradburn concerning the noise nuisance. The trains have in the past been running through the city at a high rate of speed.

The company have arranged to eliminate the night shunting in the districts where it will disturb the residents.

LABOR UNIONS IN CANADA

The Department of Labour at Ottawa has issued a special report on the subject of labor organisation in Canada, the general nature of which is set forth in the opening sentences of the introductory chaper. "The aim of the present report," it is there explained, "is to present in concise and convenient form, a statement showing the details of labor organization in Canada. The subject is one that has not perhaps in the past received the attention it has merited. The extent and variety of interests concerned, and the elaborate system of organization which has been evolved are little realized by the public in general, and are not closely appreciated, in all probability, by many of those who are themselves sometimes participating in the work here indicated formally in facts and figures. The information presented will be of particular value to employers and employees of all classes, but will also be of deep interest in other circles. Labor organization is to-day attracting a closer attention than perhaps at any previous time, whether in Canada or elsewhere.

Briefly, it may be stated that there are 1741 local unions in Canada, of which 1531 are international in character and the remainder are associated with central bodies having no affiliation outside the Dominion. Ontario bulks largely in trade unionism, claiming 700 local unions out of 1,741 in Canada. British Columbia comes second with 234 local unions, and Quebec is third with 205. The other provinces divide the honors as follows — Alberta 153, Nova Scotia 138, Manitoba 118, Saskatchewan 84, New Brunswick 73, Prince Edward Island 7. These figures as to Provinces include all local unions whether international or otherwise; in Prince Edward Island there are respectively three international and four national bodies. The special strength of unionism is necessarily in the larger cities and the four largest cities in Canada comprise between them about one-fifth of the local unions, proportioned as follows: Toronto 105, Montreal 95, Winnipeg 79, Vancouver 76. Other cities rank in number as follows: Hamilton 48, Ottawa 47, Quebec 42 Victoria 42, Calgary 40, London 35, Edmonton 33, St. Thomas 28, Fort William 28, Lethbridge 28, Port Arthur 27, Halifax 22, Moosejaw 21, Saskatoon 21, St. John 20. It is interesting to note in these figures the prominence taken by western cities and how far in some cases they have, relatively speaking, outstripepd the older eastern cities in labor organization.

The toal estimated membership in Canada of trade unions is 133,132, the Canadian international roll reaching 119,415, the remainder belonging to purely Canadian unions.

The Graduating Exercises in connection with the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses will be held on Tuesday evening, June 18th, at 8 o'clock, in the Collegiate Institute Hall. The public are cordially invited to be present.

MAY BE FATAL

James Dunn Fell Down Stairs at Repair Shop

What may prove to be a fatal accident occurred this afternoon at a quarter to three o'clock when James Dunn, an elderly man fell down the stairs leading to William Anthony's shoe shop, opposite Comstock's furniture establishment. The old man had been in the shoe shop and in leaving it he fell from the top of the flight to the bottom of the steps. In the fall, his face was badly cut and he sustained an injury to the skull. It was thought too that his arm was broken. His condition is serious.

Medical aid was summoned and he was taken to Nicholls Hospital in Belleghem's ambulance.

The injured man came to this city about a week ago from Norwood. His home was orginally in Cobourg. He is 66 years of age.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS GIVE MEMBER SEND OFF

About twenty-five members of the Knights of Pythias dropped in at the residence of Mr. Frank Jacobi on George street last evening and during the course of social intercourse presented him with a case of pipes and a K. of P. jewel, accompanied by a nice address. Mr. Jacobi left today for his home for a week or ten days before proceeding westward.

Mr. Jacobi has held many offices with the K. of P's and the members evidenced their regret at his departure in the above appropriate manner. Mr. F. R. Clarke made the presentation and Mr. T. W. Wilson read the address.

In a few sincere remarks Mr. Jacobi expressed his keen regret at the forced severance of the ties binding him to the local Society, and spoke of the many pleasant recollections he would bear away with him to his new home.

The evening was enlivened with musical numbers, followed by games and refreshments.

WHO'S COMING AND GOING

Trainmaster MacMillan, of Lindsay is in the city to-day on business.

Mr. Douglas Johnston, of Campbellford, is in the city, the guest of friends.

Dr. Bruce Hewson, corner of Charlotte and Stewart streets, has returned from New York, and will resume his practice.

Mr and Mrs. W. J. Gadd and daughter, Nellie, left on the 11.17 this morning to sail on the "Empress of Ireland" to-morrow for a visit to England.

INCREASING THE POPULATION OF PETERBOROUGH

A meeting of the Imperial Re-union Association was held last night, and it was decided to go ahead with the matter of assisting certain families of mechanics in this city to come to this country. The work of the Association is shaping up well. Only families whose male members are in Peterborough will be aided by the Association, and the families will be brought to this city only.

SOCIAL HELD BY THE LADIES OF ST. JAMES

A very enjoyable affair was held on Tuesday evening when the young ladies of the Cheerful Workers' Bible Class of St. James' Sunday School held the first strawberry social of the season, on the spacious lawn of the church.

The ladies must have found out how to get on the right side of the weatherman as the weather during the afternoon and evening was ideal. Everything that could be done to make the social a success was accomplished by those in charge, and they had their reward. The ladies are certainly to be congratulated. The George street Sunday School Orchestra added materially to the enjoyment of the evening, as trios, duets, vocal selections and full orchestra numbers were given in an exceptionally pleasing manner.

Case Goes to Jury

After consuming two and half days, the case of Collier vs. Brown went to the jury this afternoon about three thirty.

Mr. Kerr commenced his address to the jury about two o'clock, after which Mr. Medd, summed up the case for the plaintiff.

Judgment had not been given at time of going to press.

DANGERS OF DOCTORS.

The Medical Practitioner Daily Risks His Life From Disease.

"Is there any danger in a doctor's life?" asked a London magazine contributor of a general practitioner.

"Danger?" said the medical man. "Why, a doctor is always in danger. No other occupation is so risky, and as a matter of record, the deathrate among medical men is extremely high.

"You wouldn't care to go into the room of a man suffering from smallpox, would you, to feel his pulse, put your head close to his chest, to listen to his heart, examine his tongue, etc.? Any doctor may be called upon to do that, and he does it without hesitation.

"Smallpox is the most virulently contagious of all diseases. As Professor Osler says, those who are exposed to the infection are almost invariably attacked unless they are protected by vaccination. Of course, we are so protected, but, nevertheless, many a medical man has met his death attending smallpox patients.

"Diphtheria is no less fraught with risk for the medical attendant. It has proved fatal to hundreds of doctors and nurses. Suppose I am called to a child ill with diphtheria, one of the first things I do is to open the child's mouth and examine its throat. It frequently happens during this operation that the patient coughs into my face, and I never know, when that occurs, whether I am not going to become a victim myself. I have to swab the throat with a sponge; perhaps, when the breathing becomes obstructed, to perform tracheotomy, and put in a tube. With the greatest care, I cannot always be sure of escaping infection.

"As a rule, a busy doctor cannot take any precautions of much value. In these cases, the prudent man will stand facing the patient as little as possible. In a hospital he would probably wear a linen overall, and, on leaving the ward, wash his hands and face in some antiseptic solution. But how am I to do there in private practice? No, we have to take the risks.

"Then there's influenza, which is always with us. You know how an epidemic spreads like wildfire, and, as might be expected, doctors are probably the most numerous victims

"Typhus, or spotted, fever has now almost disappeared from England, but some years ago, when an epidemic broke out, both doctors and nurses suffered terribly. No disease has killed more doctors than this. And, remember, it is a disease of the poor and ill-nourished. Doctors suffered solely because of their contact with patients. In a period of twenty-five years, out of 1,250 physicians attached to Irish hospitals and infirmaries, no fewer than 550 died of typhus fever.

"We are exposed to many other infections, and not the least of them is the risk connected with post-mortem examinations. The doctor performing one of these may accidentally cut himself—he may tear the skin against a piece of bone, or, what is quite as bad, he may have a slight scratch on his hand of which he is unaware. Then, if the subject of the operation contains any dangerous germs, it is all up with the doctor. Within a few hours he suffers from collapse, intense nervous depression, vomiting, fever and delirium. In twenty-four hours he may be dead of blood-poisoning. Of course, in performing a post-mortem the doctor should wear rubber gloves, but, like so many other followers of dangerous occupations, he frequently omits this precaution."

WHITE CAPS TIED GAME IN THE EIGTH, BUT LONDON BATTED TO VICTORY IN NINTH

Cockneys' Scored Four in First Innings—Osborne Twirled Effectinely till the Ninth, When the Visitors Took Six Runs With Six Singles and Three Bagger

Playing their usual brand of corner lot baseball, the White Caps took another tumble yesterday afternoon at the Oval, Frank Bowerman's Cockneys finishing to the front with an 11-6 score.

But it was a great game of baseball.

There were plenty of nice fielding plays, all kinds of batting and the errors arrived at a time when they added a whole lot of interest to the game. The White Caps as usual blew up in the early stages of the contest: in this case it was the very first round and then also as usual they landed on earth again. While the aviation program was being pulled off the visitors sent four men across the pan. It was enough to win any ordinary game, but yesterday's affair was baseball all the time and it was not certain till the fatal ninth, which team would be the winner

DERR STARTED

Johnnie Derr started to twirl for the Petes. He hit the first man and fanned the next, Cocash, a former New York Giant singled to right and Powell, who followed with a double hit in the first run.

Brant, next up for London, drove one to Byrnes, who fumbled and threw low to Trout to get the runner at the plate. The ball took a bound getting away from the catcher and two runs were scored. Nicholls walked and Osborne replaced Derr. Neal singled and Speer drove a grounder at Templin, who fumbled, and another run came in from third. Hynes sent out a fly to Jimmie Beard and he doubled the runner at second. There were three hits four runs, two errors and two left on bases

The Petes coudn't do anything with Hynes till the sixth, he having held the locals to three singles in as many innings The sixth however looked good for a dozen runs.

Beard was safe when his grounder found a hole at short. Swartz followed with a two bagger and Barthold keeping up the good work slammed out another two sack hit, sending in Beard and Swartz. Johnnie Derr, had, during this joyful spell, been coaching at third and as Byrnes came to bat, Templin took the job. Byrnes forced Barthold and Tully forced Byrnes. Trout was safe on an error at third, of his grounder. Osborne struck out. Two hits, two runs, three errors, Trout left on base.

The Terrors added another in the seventh. Nasher grounded out and Templin worked for and drew a pass. Beard smashed the ball to deep left for a double, but Templin speeded around the next two bags and home. It was a long hit for Beard and fast basework for his manager. Swartz and Barthold fanned. One hit, one run And there was some more to come.

After the first, Osborne had it all his own way, the Londoners being unable to solve him for runs. In their half of the eighth the visitors took their fifth tally, after two were out Brant having walked and gone to third on a wild pitch while Hynes was batting, he came home when the London twirler, with two strikes, connected with one breaking right across and hit out for two sacks. The third went out on a grounder to Templin. Base on balls, two strikeouts, one hit, one run.

TIED AT THE EIGHTH.

Peterborough evened up the score in their half, and it looked like a sure win as Hynes seemed to be slowing up. Byrnes tried hard, but sent a long fly into the mit of the left fielder, Tully was hit and Trout singled. Osborne came across with a neat sacrifice, and Nasher dropped one behind the third base, driving in Tully and Trout. The ball was played to the plate, but went wild. Speer recovering, however, to get Nasher going into third. With the heavy end of the batting list ready for action, this looked like very poor base work on the part of Nasher. It also showed the lack of proper coaching.

It was Good Night in the ninth.

There was six singles, five of which were consecutive and one triple, and they netted six runs. Nasher did a very foolish thing, when, in the most barefaced manner he blocked Powell, but he was called safe on interference by Nasher. Seven hits, no walks, no errors, six runs.

The Petes got one back in their half, Barthold sending Beard home on a long sacrifice fly.

ROOTING FOR THE HOME TEAM MAN FELL TO HIS DEATH

Special to the Review.

—Camden, N. J., June 13.—Dreaming he was a baseball fan and "rooting" for the home team, Wm. Collins, aged 48, went too close to the 4th storey window of his hotel, walking in his sleep last night. He lost his balance and fell to the pavement below, landing on his head and back, fracturing the skull. He will probably die.

SOME JOKE THIS; LONDON CLUB WOULD KILL LEAGUE

Special to the Review.

London, June 13.—Officials of the London baseball club announced today that rather than pay a fine of two hundred dollars imposed by President J. P. Fitzgerald, they will disrupt the league by dropping out. The fine was assessed because the London club issued a number of passes last year contrary to regulations.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Several times Osborne got two strikes on a batter and then grooved one over. Hynes made his three bagger in this manner.

◆

Without any apparent cause Trout threw to Barthold in the eighth, and the first baseman, not expecting the throw, escaped being hit by dodging. It so happened that the ball was not in play, a foul having been hit, and the runner was brought back to first.

◆

The fans pay their money to see the games, and the Directors pay the salaries, but the fans can't figure out why another pitcher can't be warmed up in case of emergency.

◆

Derr was jerked at the proper moment. Now wouldn't it have been lovely to see Jimmie Beard take a turn in the ninth.

◆

Byrnes the new shortstop had two clever plays to his credit. He went far behind second base for a fly and made a pretty stop of a liner over second. He got the man at first on a running throw.

◆

◆

Marquard was taken out of yesterday's game to make way for a batter, but is credited with his 13th straight win.

◆

Ottawa fell down at Berlin, the champs, winning 6—4. Bartlett twirled the last three innings for the Busy Bees.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

LETS HAVE PEACE

To The Editor of The Review,

Dear Sir—I do not think that any good end is being served by the recent discussion in your columns regarding the judges of the baby show.

I think the controversy should cease. The Summer Fair has been admittedly a success, and though dissatisfaction perhaps with reason has arisen in some quarters with regard to the solutions made by the judges of the baby show, because of their lack of practical experience, the lesson learned may stimulate them to think seriously of the ripe enjoyemtn and supreme happiness to be derived from the blessedness of the life of the benedict which the present controversy is more likely to frustrate than to hasten.

I would therefore respectfully commend these thoughts to your correspondents, in the hope that they may rather than continue their argument, unite in one effort to show the judges the error of their several ways, which, as you have said, is not a crime only a misdeamour, but easily corrected.

PEACE-MAKER.

DECORATION DAY

At a meeting of the decorating committee of Otonabee and Peterborough Lodges of Oddfellows, it was decided to hold Decoration Day on Sunday, June 23. It is expected that a Past Grand Officer will be here for the occasion.

NEW GOVERNMENT LEGISLATION WILL BE OF GREAT ASSISTANCE TO THE LOCAL BOARDS OF HEALTH

The appointment of a health officer for this district, in accordance with Government legislation, is considered by Dr. A. W. McPherson, the local M. H. O., to be an excellent step. The local health officer was asked this morning by a Review representative if the establishment of the office here would interfere with his own duties to any extent.

"No it will not affect us in any way" he replied, but on the other hand, it will materially assist in the settlement and adjusting of unhealthful conditions in adjoining municipalities wherein we have no jurisdiction."

For example, if there is a case of scarlet fever or some other similar disease in Norwood, not being properly treated or prevented from conveyance to others, the presence of the Health Officer will immediately be responsible for the correct treatment of the case. With his headquarters in Peterborough, he will be able to reach any adjoining section in the district in a very brief space of time.

The health officer will be to be about the same as the Provincial Health Officer. The new office will be subject of course to the supervision of the Provincial Board. As district medical officers, they will however, have wide powers.

Only cities of 50,000 population and over will be exempt from the authority of the health officer in the various divisions.

Their duties will be to supervise all matters affecting public health. They will not interfere however with the duties of the local Board of Health as long as the performance of that body's duties are being satisfactorily carried on. Where a municipal health officer is discovered to be lax in his duties, the district officer has been vested with authority to supersede him.

The intention is to inaugurate a general cleaning up of the provinces, with a view of making it as free as possible from communicable diseases

LANDLORD'S COLLECTOR BENT ON MAKING SEIZURE WAS CHASED OUT OF THE HOUSE BY LADY TENANT

A rent collector in police court this morning charged a woman residing on Stewart street, with forcibly ejecting him, when he went to her place for the purpose of making a seizure of household chattles. The agent is a small man and admitted in court that he would not under any consideration think of resisting a woman. On the day in question, the landlord's deputy went to the house and asked for the rent which amounted to about $20. His evidence in court this morning was that defendant said she would "shoot him if he didn't get out." This threat had no effect, as he entered the house, seated himself on a chair and commenced an inventory of the household effects. This procedure aggravated defendant, as the complainant said, the woman then came over and tried to grasp his note book. She then grabbed him by the shoulders, but finding her strength inadequate, she brought in a broom, poking him towards the door. On the door step, when the door was slammed in his face his elbow fractured the glass in the window.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defendant, and John Green for the landlord who was present together with his collector.

The woman and her husband are living apart, and the finances of the woman are in a rather depleted state. The case was adjourned for a week to allow the counsel for both parties to come to some terms of agreement. The landlord made a very liberal offer, offering not to demand the rent now due on condition complainant would vacate the premises within three days.

CLAIMS ARISING FROM BUCKHORN DAM WILL RECEIVE CONSIDERATION

Mr. Burnham, when seen by a Review representative regarding the article in the Times this morning on the Buckhorn dam, said that the statement is made that the dam is at fault, and it is intimated that a space allowed by the old dam for the water to get away has been lessened in the new dam, which was constructed by the late Government and opened last year.

If this is true it will, of course, raise the question of damages again and the people affected may rest assured that the present government will give a just and sympathetic treatment of their claims.

Mr. Burnham, however, declined to express any decided opinion upon the case, as he said he had no authority from the Department of Railways and Canals to do so.

However, he thought as anybody else would probably think, that since the question was raised, it would be unwise to ignore it. It was something that could not be ignored—an injustice to the people who are now proceeding to assert their claims. It was only proper to state that their claims would receive consideration, which they merited.

WHAT THE NEW GOVERNMENT IS DOING FOR THE FARMERS

A Minature Post Office to be placed at Every Farm Gate in Canada by Extending Rural Delivery—Substantial Encouragement to be Given to Sheep Farming East and West.

By a decision arrived at only a couple of weeks ago, according to statements made in an interview with our representative in Ottawa the other day, the rural mail delivery service of Canada is to be improved within the next few months to the extent of providing at every farmer's gate all the facilities necessary for transacting general postoffice business. When the courier drives up to the mail box in front of a farmer home, he will be prepared to sell stamps, issue postal notes or money orders and to accept letters of registration. If the proposed new system works out successfully, it will no longer be necessary for the farmer to visit the postoffice, excepting in cases of specially important business.

The advantages of the rural delivery service are now open to all farmers who show by application or general petition that they are desirous of it. Formerly only those farmers whose homes lay along a regular country mail route could obtain the privileges of delivery at their gates. Since the establishment of a rural mail delivery branch of the Post Office Department early in the year however, it has been decided to receive applications from farmers along any road irrespective of its proximity to a postoffice or rural mail route.

The popular opinion among farmers not served by mail delivery, that the Government will take the initiative is very erroneous. The Postoffice Department has never yet sent a proposal by letter or representative to any community of farmers suggesting the establishment of a delivery service, but rather every highway sharing in the privilege owes gratitude only to its own enterprise. When a petition is received at Ottawa the granting of it is considered, and if a decision is arrived at favorable to the farmers the route is at once established. If the Postmaster-General does not appreciate the intended force of the claim it is withheld, but not blankly refused for a six months or a year the petition may be granted.

Parliament last session appropriated $200,000 to be expended upon the extension of rural mail delivery routes, which according to the statement of Mr. A. Bolduc, Superintendent of the Rural Delivery Branch, is a sufficient sum to provide for the establishment of 400 additional routes. It is not probable however that that number will be established this year but it is likely that fully that many petitions will be granted and the routes in operation within a year's time. As many farmers have not made application for delivery service as the department had anticipated and the only reason given is that they are not aware of the fact that they are expected to take the initiative in the matter. Until the appropriation is expended, all petitions mailed to Ottawa stand a fair chnce of favorable consideration, since the department has all the facilities for the extension of the service and more mail boxes are manufactured than can be distributed.

To say it is the aim of the Postoffice Department, to place complete postoffice facilities at the gate of every farmer in the Dominion is a sweeping statement, but nevertheless true, according to the words of a prominent official. This may never be accomplished to the letter, he said, but it is the slogan of the department, and time alone is required to make it a realization. Those farmers who do participate in delivery privileges, will of a certainty seldom, if ever require a visit to the postoffice. The courier will carry a receipt book and give farmers wishing to transfer money by mail a postal note or money order receipt. The farmer will be obliged to trust the courier with an open letter, and upon arrival at the postoffice he will transact the business for the farmer and mail the letter for its destination. The system will work out similarly with respect to registered mail matter, the courier giving the farmer a receipt at his gate and being afterwards wholly responsible as a carrier of His Majesty's mail.

There are at present about 367 rural delivery routes in Canada, representing approximately 20,000 King Edward boxes. This number is divided among the Provinces as follows; Ontario 205; Quebec, 29; Nova Scotia 13; New Brunswick 27; Prince Edward Island, 32; Manitoba, 17; Saskatchewan, 12; Alberta 10; British Columbia, 11. The province of Ontario has been most largely indulged, purely for the reason that it tendered the most applications. The awakening to the advantages of the service as manifested in the petitions received has been about 80 per cent. greater during the past year. In the eastern Provinces it is not evidently an issue and few applications are received from communities there. In the west, even where settlement permits the number of applications made has been very small, but in British Columbia, the feeling is growing and a large number is looked for this year. The average cost of a route to the Government is about $500 — the only cost to the farmer $3 for a mail box. A limit of 25 miles is put on the length of delivery routes.

AID TO SHEEP FARMING.

Two years ago the prospect of any extension of sheep raising in Canada appeared very remote. Except in the case of breeders of pure bred flocks, the prevailing attitude regarding the possibilities to be attained through a development of the industry was largely one of indifference and unconcern. To-day, however, a very great change in point of view is manifested, particularly on the part of farmers interested only in the breeding and rearing of market sheep. This change has doubtless been brought about on the one hand by the increasing domestic consumption of mutton and lamb. On the other hand, however, it has with equal certainty been hastened and confirmed as a result of the investigations of the Sheep Commission of the problems confronting the sheep farmer in this country and of the manner in which a decadent but attractive business might be revived.

The interest awakened by the latter movement on the part of the Federal Government was further strengthened by the suggestive lectures delivered by Mr. Ritch during the early months of the present year at meetings attended by him in the Martime provinces and later at meetings attended by Messrs. Ritch and MacRae in the Provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. "The Government is doing something" was the appreciative comment of a Western sheep man, after the conclusion of one of the recent lectures, and this statement is expressive of the temper of sheep growers, both in the east and in the west, who are gratified to know that in their interests something definite is now being undertaken.

PRETTY JUNE WEDDINGS

PASKINS—TURNBULL

At the Knox Church Manse, yesterday morning at 11.30 o'clock, Rev. H. J. Keith united in marriage, William Arthur Paskins, of Peterboro, late of Southampton and Eunice Sophie Turnbull, also late of Southampton.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of witnesses, and Mr. and Mrs. Paskins will reside in the city.

DIXON—ROBINSON.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Robinson, lot 12, con. 13, Otonabee, witnessed last evening an exceedingly pretty wedding, when their second daughter, Evelyn, was married to James E. Dixon, also of Otonabee, the ceremony being performed by Rev. William Johnston, of Keene, Ont.

Only a few of the intimate friends of the nuptial parties were present.

A very large number of gifts were received, the young people being extremely popular in Otonabee.

JOHNSTON—FEIR.

An exceptionally pretty wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon at two o'clock, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. I. Feir, when their daughter, Miss Euphemia Feir, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. R. H. Johnston, of Omemee, son of Mr. James Johnston, of Omemee. The Rev. H. J. Keith performed the ceremony. The bride was charmingly attired in a beautiful white marquisette dress trimmed with real lace, over white silk. As she entered the room an exquisite wedding march was played by Miss Clendenan, of Peterborough. She was given away by her father, and carried a beautiful bouquet of large white roses. The bride wore the customary bridal veil caught with lilies of the valley.

The bride's three sisters, Misses Olive, Estella and Ruby, becomingly attired in white and pink muslin dresses, and carrying bouquets of pink and white carnations, acted as bridesmaids.

The bride's travelling dress was of blue whipcord and she wore a large picture hat to match.

The groom's present to the bride was an attractive gold brooch set with whole pearls. The bride was the recipient of a large number of costly and useful gifts.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Johnston drove to Omemee, where they will reside.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

An Immovable Feast.

What is known as the Calendar Reform Bill—a measure now being put forward, and supported by several well-known members of Parliament—will turn our present topsy-turvy system of dividing the year into one of perfect order.

Under this bill, the year is to consist of 364 days only. New Year's Day is to be a day by itself—neither December 31st nor January 1st. Incidentally, it is to be a Bank Holiday.

Under this arrangement, and with the odd day apart, the remaining days are to be divided into two months of 30 days each, and one month of 31 days.

Easter Sunday, which at present depends upon the moon for its date, will, if the bill becomes law, cease to be a movable feast, and will always fall on April 12th. January 1st will always fall on a Wednesday.

As for Leap Year, the proposers of this new calendar suggest an extra day in June every fourth year.

Boiled Salad Dressing.

The following boiled dressing is very nice with tomato jelly, fish salads and fresh green salad herbs and with a bit of onion or watercress makes a delicious filling for sandwiches. It may also be used on bread or rolls when a butter boycott has been called: Beat two eggs together, add a tiny pinch of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, half a scant teaspoonful of ground mustard and half a cupful of milk. Mix well and then stir in a quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Cook the mixture until it thickens, taking care to stir it constantly to prevent curdling. Upon removing from the fire let it cool and then add a few drops of olive oil.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

Fancy Hems and Featherstitching on Sheer Summer Gowns.

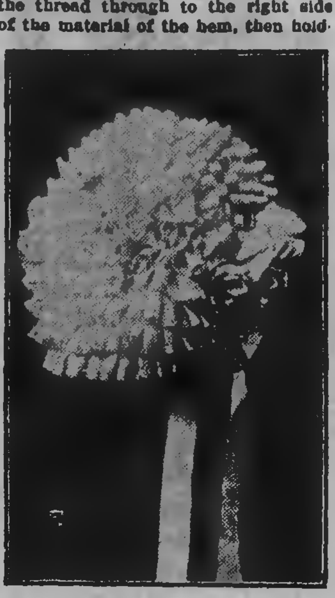
Many women who are fond of needlework do not possess the skill to work some of the embroidery designs that are now so fashionable, but almost any one with a little practice can do feather stitching neatly and rapidly.

With this stitch you can secure many effective designs with very little labor, and it is an ideal way to finish the top of hems on any sheer material.

When French knots, "birds' eyes" and eyelets are combined with the feather stitching lovely effects are possible.

Such borders are particularly attractive on summer gowns, but can be used on anything from the finest lingerie to curtains, heavy cushions and table covers.

Birds' eyes are made by drawing the thread through to the right side of the material of the hem, then holding it down with the left thumb (as you would for buttonhole stitching), inserting the needle in the hole it has just passed through and taking a small stitch, pulling the thread through until the loop formed is the same length as the stitch you have taken; then take a stitch at the outer point to hold the loop securely.



BABY BONNET MADE OF RIBBON.

Dainty little daisies can be made of the birds' eye stitch by making the first stitch long enough for the petal. After taking the second stitch draw the needle through the first hole made, which will be the center of the flower.

Then make a second petal, pulling the needle through the center hole to form each petal.

A line of these little flowers placed just inside the feather stitching on the edge of the hem will make a delightful finish to any gown. Featherstitching applied in scallops, with a tiny daisy at the top of each or in the center of each scallop, is another dainty way to trim a hem. Perfect scallops are easily made by drawing a perfect circle on the stiff cardboard and cutting it out, then dividing it exactly in half. Now lay these two half circles on the material end to end and draw a fine line around the outer curved edge, keeping the straight edge even with the edge of the hem.

Repeat this process all the way along the hem and do the stitching over the mark.

Very fine mercerized cotton is used for this work. White material worked in pale colors is beautiful, and for variety you may do the featherstitching in one color and the row of daisies or eyelets of a contrasting shade.

Fagoting is sometimes used instead of the featherstitching, and with a little practice you will be able to design different patterns for yourself, suiting the work to the need of your material or the article being made. Quite different, though within the realm of needlework, is the making of a baby's cap of ribbon like the pretty little piece of head covering seen in the illustration. Loops of inch wide white satin ribbon are bunched, arranged in loops very evenly over the usual cap foundation of white silk. A lace frill frames the baby face.

THE BASEBALL SITUATION

After its all over, its a very easy matter to find fault, but all the same there should be some organization in the coaching department of the team. The lack of proper coaching has been in evidence since the opening of the season, and yesterday's game was no exception. One hears a whole lot, as the players discuss one play and another. Its "Why didn't you wait?" etc. Now, why should they call each other down? Manager Bowerman did all the talking for his team, and he could get away with it for the simple reason that he wasn't on the field making errors with his players.

The best of baseball tossers will make mistakes, but the majority of fans will agree with the writer that it is impossible to give Peterborough a winning team under present conditions. The material is here, but there must be an iron hand used if the situation is to be saved.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Mower, a catcher, and White an outfielder, have reported to Manager Templin. White was billed to play in to-day's game. Another pitcher is coming.

Walter Jayes is returning to Yankeeland this week, probably to-morrow. Jayes made a good impression on the fans.

Falls Man's Death a Swindle.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 13.—Relatives of Harry Ward, the Falls man whose death was announced in a cablegram from the British consul at Buenos Ayres, May 21, to-day believe they may have been victims of a clever swindle, and that Ward is still alive.

Three cablegrams appealing for money purporting to be from the British consul were received, and $775 wired by them. Instructions were sent for immediate shipment of the body home, but nothing further has been heard by relatives here. They appealed to the authorities, and the matter is now in the hands of the Attorney-General.

CONVICTS WHO TRIED TO ESCAPE ARE GIVEN 17 YEARS

Judge Madden Passes Sentence on George Brown, Harry Kelly, Arthur Bonnar and Frank Jones For Assaulting Guards—Bonnar's Remarkable Defence Has Marked Effect on Judge.

Kingston, June 14.—Two years hard labor for escaping and seventeen years for assaulting penitentiary officers, was the severe sentence imposed upon each of the prisoners, George Brown, Harry Kelly, Arthur Bonnar and Frank Jones by Judge Madden yesterday in the Court of General Sessions: Jones and Kelly, with Bonnar and Brown, assaulted their keepers and boldly walked out of the big prison in broad daylight on April 29, and were afterwards captured.

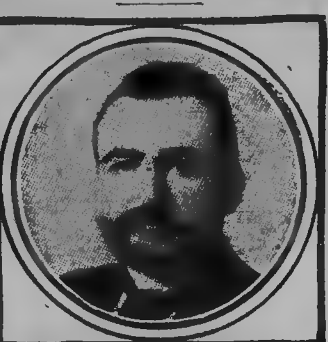
Kelly and Brown pleaded guilty, but Bonnar and Jones sprang a surprise by pleading not guilty. Each one conducted his own case, and they put the guards from the penitentiary through a close cross-examination, the judge complimenting Bonnar on the way he had conducted his case. He is a polished young Englishman, and with a great flow of language, and he made an eloquent appeal on his own behalf, and helped Jones in his case. Both also addressed the jury, which, however, found the evidence straight against the prisoners and took very little time in returning a verdict.

Bonnar has also to stand trial on a charge of assaulting Guard Caughey in Toronto on March 12 at the time the prisoners tried to escape from the train and Brown must answer to the charge of assaulting Deputy Warden O'Leary at Toronto station. These cases were held over until the December sessions to allow the prisoners to secure witnesses.

The plea made by Bonnar for a chance to make good, was one of the best every heard in the court house. Judge Madden was much impressed with him, and said he would keep tab on him, also stating that he would allow him the privilege of applying for the Governor-General's certificate for suspended sentence, on this last charge after he had served his present terms.

Jones and Kelly are serving 15 years for attempted murder in Winnipeg. Bonnar seven years for horse stealing, and Brown eight years for kidnapping Miss Gladys Price, a school teacher of Hinch, Ont., near Snow Lake, Manitoba.

COUNT TISZA SHOT AT IN THE DIET



STEFAN TISZA

Count Stefan Tisza, President of the Lower House of Hungary, had a very narrow escape from assassination in the Diet. He was fired upon three times by Deputy Julius Kevacs, who then shot himself, probably with fatal effect.

Count Tisza was unscathed. Kevacs was one of the most militant members of the opposition and was included in those were ejected from the Chamber recently because of disorderly conduct. He was suspended for several sittings.

ARE SURE SCOTT REACHED POLE

London, June 14.—Two members, Cheetham and Clissel of Commander Scott's Antarctic expedition arrived at Plymouth Wednesday night.

The men said they were confident their leader had reached the South Pole, and added that but for the early formation of ice Scott would have reached home this year.

They were greatly disappointed to learn that Amunsden had first reached the pole, but pointed out that fine weather and a good route were great speed factors in the Norseman's success.

MARRIAGE LAW DECISION TO BE ANNOUNCED MONDAY

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, June 14.—In the Supreme Court this morning the chief justice announced that the answers to questions submitted by the government re Lancaster marriage bill would for certain necessary reasons not be announced to-day as expected, but on Monday.

PHILADELPHIA SURGEONS RESTORE BLIND MAN'S SIGHT

Special to the Review.

Philadelphia, June 14.—Owen Harris, a machinist, who has been blind for seven years as a result of a flare back from the furnace in the shop where he was working, is once more able to see as a result of a daring operation at Medico, Chirurgical Hospital. A patient came in with his eye so badly injured it had to be removed. Harris was sent for and the tissue was stripped from the eyeball that had been removed from the injured man and was placed over one of the sightless orbs of Harris. Physicians then kept Harris in a dark room for eight days and when the bandage was removed he could see a little.

SEPARATE SCHOOL FOR BABY CITY

Berlin, Ont., June 14.—The separate school board have accepted a tender of $23,000 for the erection of a four-roomed brick school in the north ward for accommodation of the lower form scholars of the west and north wards. It is to be ready for occupation at the beginning of the new year.

Berlin, Ont., June 14.—Mayor W. H. Schmalz has received a number of letters of congratulation from other cities on the elevation of Berlin into cityhood, among these being from Toronto, Hamilton, Guelph and Galt.

NOMINATIONS IN NEW BRUNSWICK

St. John, N.B., June 14— Nominations in the Provincial elections took place yesterday, and the Government secures one seat by acclamation. Mr. McIntyre, one of the Opposition in Northumberland withdrawing. A downpour of rain all over the Province interfered with a large attendance at the hustings.

The campaign, which bid fair to be dull at the first, now promises to be lively, and both sides profess confidence in the result on June 20. Polling in Gloucester county is deferred until June 21.

There were forty-six seats in the New Brunswick Legislature at dissolution, besides two vacant ones, newly created. The parties stood—Government 34; Opposition 12.

The Hon. John Morrissy, Commissioner of Public Works, in the Flemming Government, who is running in Northumberland, is a Liberal. His three colleagues on the Government ticket are Conservatives.

WORKERS TO ASK FOR MORE RELIEF

Cleveland, O., June 14.—The substance of a report containing recommendations on industrial conditions which will be submitted to both National parties for incorporation in their platforms was made public at yesterday's session of the 39th national conference of charities and corrections. The report was written by Owen R. Lovejoy of New York, as a result of three years of investigation by a committee of social workers.

In part, it recommends an eight-hour day; abolition of night work for women and children, minimizing of night work for men, publication by employers of wages they pay, prohibition of the manufacture of poisons dangerous to workers, when harmless substitutes are possible; no child under 16 to work, insurance against unemployment, a workingmen's compensation act, women not to work in standing positions.

COMPANIES WIN SUIT

Ottawa, June 14.—A sequel to the scandal in connection with the Printing Bureau was enacted in the Exchequer Court yesterday morning when Mr. Justice Cassels handed down judgment in the case of three companies which furnished supplies to the bureau on orders from the late Frank Gouldthrite, then superintendent, who drowned himself in the river near Detroit.

The cases were those of the Gresham Blank Book Co., the Heslop Paper Co., and the Rogers Manifold & Carbon Paper Co. Each recovers against the crown the value of goods received by the Department, but fails with respect to claims to recover on goods ordered by Gouldthrite, but which were not accepted or received by the Department.

SIX PROMINENT CANADIANS RECEIVE HONORS FROM KING

Roblin, McBride and Dubuc Are the June Crop of Knights and Prof. Macoun, John McDougald and William Henry Walker Get Two C.M.G.'s and an I.S.O. Respectively—The Awards In Britain

London, June 14.—The King's birthday honors were issued last night. The Earl of Carrick, Earl Marshal Sir Wm. Gustavus Nicholson, Sir Francis Allston Channing, who was born in the United States, and Sir Thomas Borthwick are created barons of the United Kingdom. Carrick's earldom is Irish, and the English peerage gives him a seat in the House of Lords.

Rodmond Phalen Roblin, Premier of Manitoba, and Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, are made knight commanders of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, while John McDougald of the Department of Customs, and Prof. James Melville Macoun, of the Department of Mines, Canada, are appointed companions of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; Joseph Dubuc, late Chief Justice of Manitoba, knight bachelor, and William Henry Walker, of the Department of External Affairs is given the imperial service medal.

The birthday honors differ from those bestowed at other times, inasmuch as they are bestowed by the King personally with direct recommendation from other sources.

Sir Rodmond Phalen Roblin has been Premier of the Province of Manitoba since 1900. He is the son of James Platt Roblin and Deborah Roblin, both of Dutch descent, and was born on Feb. 15, 1853, at Sophiasburgh, Prince Edward County, Ontario. He was educated at Albert College, Belleville, Ont., and removed when a young man to Winnipeg, where he became engaged in the grain business. After sitting several years in the local House on the Opposition side, he became leader of the Conservative party. In 1900 he was called upon to form an administration which was sworn into office on Oct. 29 of that year, with Mr. Roblin as Premier and President of the council. He has remained in power ever since.

SIR RODMOND P. ROBLIN.

Sir Richard McBride, LL.B., K.C., is 42 years of age, and the youngest man to have ever held the honored position of Prime Minister. He is a native son of British Columbia, and became Premier of the province in 1901, when he was only 31 years of age.

He was born in New Westminster, B.C., on Dec. 15, 1870, and is the son of Arthur H. McBride, formerly warden of B.C. penitentiary, and Mary Darcy, both Irish. Premier McBride was educated at the public and high schools of New Westminster, and received his higher education in Dalhousie University, Halifax, N.S. On Sept. 23, 1896 he married Margaret, the youngest daughter of Neil McGillivray of New Westminster, and is now the father of five children.

SIR RICHARD M'BRIDE.

He contested New Westminster district unsuccessfully at the Dominion general elections in 1896, and was elected to the Legislature in 1898. 1900 and 1903 for Dewdney, and at the general election in 1907 for Victoria City. He was appointed Minister of Mines in the Dunsmuir administration when he was 30 years old. In 1903, when the House met, he became leader of the Opposition, and on June 1 of the same year, he was called on to form a Ministry. He has swept the province every election since.

The Hon. Joseph Dubuc, B.C.L. (McGill), LL.D. (Toronto), late chief justice of the Circuit Court of the King's Bench of Manitoba, was born in St. Martin's, P.Q., on the 26th of December, 1840. He was admitted to the Quebec Bar in 1869. In 1870 he went to Manitoba where he was later elected to the first legislative assembly of that province. In 1871 he was superintendent of the Catholic section of the Provincial Bureau of Education for Manitoba. From 1872 to 1909 he has filled many positions in the provincial service, having been Attorney-General for two years and chief justice for six years. He was a member of Parliament for three years.

John McDougald, commissioner of customs, was born in Blue Mountain, Pictou, N.S., the thirteenth of March, 1848. He was educated at the grammar school, New Glasgow, N.S., and was later in business for some time in the town. In 1872 he married Margaret J. McLeod of Westville, N.S., by whom he had two sons. He was justice of the peace and county councillor for Pictou County for a number of years and was returned to Parliament from that county from 1881 to 1896, when he resigned to take the position of commissioner of customs.

Prof. James J. Macoun is assistant botanist and naturalist in the geological survey branch of the Department of Mines. He was born on Jan. 30, 1863, and entered the federal service in 1898.

William Henry Walker, B.A., is chief clerk in the Department of External Affairs at Ottawa. He was born in 1864 and entered the federal service in July, 1887.

HON. S. H. BLAKE DEPLORES MATERIALISM IN CHURCH

Toronto, June 14.—"We fought against the running of steamers to Niagara Falls right along, but in spite of this they are to come. Now there is to be the incursion from the United States, where they have much more of the continental Sunday than we have. Then we have the week ends. People go away as soon as possible on Saturdays and do not come back till the Monday, thus neglecting the interests of the church, which they seem to forget. Added to these, we have the neglect of parents toward the Christian teaching of their children and ignorance and immorality rampant. What is the synod going to do about these things?"

Thus did Hon. S. H. Blake address the Anglican Synod at the yesterday afternoon session, at the conclusion of the reading of the report of the committee of the state of the church, which, he said, showed serious decension in spiritual life.

"What is the true state of the church?" demanded Mr. Blake. "Does it stand four square against these introductions of the world? Parents have not time to teach their children. Families do without morning and evening prayer. I believe that prayer in the house in the morning cannot help but have the greatest effect for good. The fact that there is not true recognition of God in the house instills tendencies in the children for disrespect for parental authority. Why does not the church demand that the standards of the church should not be lowered?

"We are living the life of heathen. The worship is materialism and commercialism. Are we going to let the church sink to these low levels or are we going to devise some means whereby the worship of God shall be established every day?

"We are losing the Lord's Day. It is slipping through our fingers, and that cannot be done without the greatest injury to our race and the greatest danger to our country.

"When the church shall have brought about the spirit that should prevail the world will say this is indeed a religion of Jesus Christ.

"I wish I had strength enough that I might talk on this subject the rest of the afternoon," concluded Mr. Blake in a broken voice as he sat down.

The conclusion of his address was followed by several minutes of prolonged applause on the part of the synod.

A resolution along the lines indicated was presented by the speaker. It was seconded by Mr. E. D. Adkins and unanimously carried by standing vote.

DOUBLE POISON KILLS TWO MEN

Special to the Review.

St. Joseph, Mo., June 14—Two young men, Phillip Scheibe and Henry Elmore, last night dared each other to swallow strychinne in their beer. Both were found dead in bed this morning.

Special to the Review.

Macon, Ga. June 14—It is reported that four persons were killed and twenty eight injured in a wreck on the Central Railway of Georgia, near Fort Valley, this morning.

PRESBYTERIANS HAVE ADJOURNED

Special to the Review.

Edmonton, June 14— The General Assembly of the Presbyterian church finished its business last night and adjourned.

In view of the approaching union of the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Congregationalist churches, a recommendation was passed asking the Hymnal Committee to confer with the Hymnal Committees of the Methodist and Congregational Churches, in the matter of securing, if possible, a common book of praise.

Dr. Dey, for the Robert Murray Memorial Fund Committee, reported that they will favor a plan to raise the sum of $2,000 to found a prize to be awarded to a theological student for the best essay on religious music and its place in public worship.

ANOTHER ATTACK ON PRESIDENT

Washington, June 14.—Charging that President Taft had misused the $25,000 traveling expenses fund voted yearly by Congress, Chairman Fitzgerald of the House appropriations committee yesterday bitterly attacked the President during consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. He declared the President on his recent western trip had mulcted the accompanying newspaper and secret service men in spite of protests to bolster his depleted funds.

"It is deplorable," he said, "to have to state these facts to this House and to this country."

RECEIPTS FOR BERLIN'S TAG DAY

Berlin, June 14—Complete returns from the tag day collections last month, have been reported to the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Berlin-Waterloo Hospital, amounting to $338.04.

COL. ROOSEVELT WILL GO TO THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

CHILD CRUELLY SLAIN

SIGRID EKSTROM

Sigrid Ekstrom, a pretty six-year-old girl, was found cruelly murdered in the cellar of her home in New York city. The little one had been choked to death after a struggle with her assailant. The police are seeking an aged man who was seen giving the child a penny several hours before she was found dead.

Special to the Review.

New York, June 14—Shortly after noon to-day, Theodore Roosevelt announced that he would go to Chicago to lead the fight in the Republican Convention for his nomination as presidential candidate for the Republican party. He will leave New York at 5.30 this afternoon over the New York Central.

Chicago, June 15.—Eight delegates for Col. Roosevelt and eighteen for President Taft marked yesterday's gains of the two chief rivals for the Republican Presidential nomination, from the decision of contest cases by the Republican national committee. In addition the committee settled disputes between rival Roosevelt factions in two districts of North Carolina, thus settling the colonel's title to votes from those sections.

It was a day of Roosevelt victories, but victories achieved with the full acquiescence of the Taft majority on the national committee.

Missouri's contests, which threatened another battle between the Taft and Roosevelt factions, in which the lines would be closely drawn, were compromised so effectively that the committee were unanimous in giving Roosevelt eight and Taft six of the contested delegates from that state.

The decisions yesterday were: For Taft, 2 each from the second, third, fourth, sixth, seven and eighth Mississippi districts; two each from the third, seventh and fourteenth Missouri districts. Total, 18.

For Roosevelt: Four delegates-at-large from Missouri; two each from the first and fifth Missouri districts, two each from the third and ninth North Carolina districts. Total, 12.

At the end of a week of constant work over the contested delegations, the committee, has given President Taft a total of 159 delegates and Col. Roosevelt a total of 13.

While the national committee was disposing of the Missouri contests, Roosevelt delegates in Chicago were assembled in the Congress Hotel listening to a speech by William Flinn of Pennsylvania, who urged "that every man must do his full duty and not give up the fight."

Several hundred men were in the room cheering when news reached the fringe of the crowd that Missouri had been won for Roosevelt in the national committee.

"If Theodore Roosevelt is not wanted by the convention for President of the United States next Thursday," Senator Dixon, Roosevelt's manager, declared after a few introductory remarks, "you can back me up against a wall and do anything you want with me."

As he spoke the Senator folded his arms and further emphasized his statement by leaning against the wall. After he had been cheered until he raised his hand for silence, Senator Dixon proceeded to declare that the Republican national committee could not possibly get enough delegates for Taft to nominate.

"The members of the national committee cannot stand the strain of public opinion, which is with us, much longer," he declared. "And you will be the national committee to choose the standard-bearer a few days from now."

Another French Crew Deserts.

Havre, June 14.—The French liner La Provence arrived yesterday and immediately docked. A number of firemen and sailors, who had learned of the inauguration of the strike, left the ship.

M. Delcasse, the Minister of Marine, has informed the company that, in event of the defection of La Provence's crew, Saturday, they would be replaced by bluejackets. It is understood that the Cabinet has under consideration measures to prevent sudden desertions of ships' crews at the moment of departure.

OFFICERS FIRED ON STRIKERS

Special to the Review.

Perth Ambery, N.J.— A thousand striking laberers stormed the plant of the American Smelter Refining Co. this morning. Officers fired on the mob, and with one killed and three wounded, the strikers fell back.

GHOULS WRECK A CEMETERY IN SOUTH OXFORD VILLAGE

Special to the Review.

St. Thomas, June 14—The village of Delmer, twenty miles east of here in South Oxford, is excited over the discovery that during Wednesday night the local Cemetery had been desecrated by smashing or overthrowing more than one hundred tomb stones, making the graveyard look as though it had been visited by a cyclone. Footprints discovered in the cemetery are being carefully guarded until the arrival of the provincial police.

TELEGRAPHIC PARAGRAPHS

The rural corps' camp at Niagara closed with a sham fight and military tattoo in the evening.

The Congress of Chambers of Commerce agreed to a motion urging cooperation in Imperial defence.

One hundred and forty-five waterways engineers from various countries were entertained in Toronto yesterday.

High Constable Hopkins of Elgin resigned because the County Council would not allow him traveling expenses.

A scratch on his finger caused the death of Marchion Marazza from lockjaw yesterday at Niagara Falls. He injured his finger several days ago, but thought nothing of it.

A strong force, composed of Turks and Arabs, with artillery, attacked the Italian positions at Tripoli on the night of June 11. The Turks were driven back with heavy losses.

The jury at Goderich yesterday brought in a verdict of not guilty on the perjury charge against George Marron of the Patterson House, arising out of the recent inquiry.

The U. S. House yesterday adopted the conference report on the army appropriation bill which would legislate out of office Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army.

Housewife's Money Her Own.

Buffalo, N.Y., June 14.—Judge Hazel, in the U. S. District Court, has handed down an opinion in which he holds that money saved by a housewife from her expense account cannot be seized by her husband's creditors.

Some time ago M. C. Simon filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, declaring that he was insolvent both as an individual and as surviving member of the firm of Meyer & Simon, of Rochester. Mrs. Meyer, widow of the deceased member of the firm, had $4,000 in Rochester banks, which she had saved from her allowance of $75 a week for household expenses.

The referee decided that the money should go to the creditors. Judge Hazel reversed the referee's decision.

Strikes at Perth Amboy.

Perth Amboy, N.J., June 14.—Deputy sheriffs and the strikers of the American Smelting & Refining Co. clashed again yesterday, and although the officers all declare they shot in the air, one of the strikers was wounded.

Yesterday afternoon the ranks of the strikers were increased by about seventeen hundred men, women and girls from the Perth Amboy Tobacco Co. and Maurer & Co.'s fireproofing wroks.

OTTAWA'S HEAVY WASTE OF WATER

Ottawa, June 14.—Startling discoveries have already been made by the experts of the Pitometer Company of New York, who have been engaged for the last few days in making tests of the water mains to find out where the leakage is taking place.

One leak was found on Somerset street, in Dalhousie Ward, which alone was responsible for no less than 71,000 gallons loss of water every twenty-four hours. Many other leaks have been discovered in the western portion of the city.

When Detectives Disagree.

Los Angeles, June 14.—The respective claims of Detective William J. Burns and Samuel L. Browne, chief of detectives, attached to the district attorney's office, to some $50,000 reward money, offered for the arrest and conviction of the dynamiters who blew up The Times' Building, are expected to become involved to a considerable extent in the trial of Clarence S. Darrow for alleged jury bribery. Both men have employed attorneys to look after the collection of the rewards.

Montreal Fining "Mashers."

Montreal, June 14.—This city is suffering from a plague of 'mashers," over thirty of them having been caught and sentenced since the month began. Yesterday morning two were fined $10 each or two months in jail.

Mexican Rebels Routed.

Torreon, Mexico, June 14.—General Blanquet, one of the federal commanders, is reported to have completely routed General Argumedo with his rebel army near Pedrisena, fifty miles from here.

FRENCH DEPUTIES REMOVE DUTY ON FOREIGN WHEAT

Lady Charged With Perjury.

Windsor, June 14.—Owing to the contradictory nature of her evidence, in spite of warnings from the bench, Miss Mary Brown, principal crown witness in a serious charge against B. Brooks, was taken from the court room at Sandwich and locked up for perjury, on orders of Judge McHugh, who was hearing the case.

She was kept in custody for several hours, and then released awaiting action by the crown attorney. Brooks, the prisoner, was acquitted as the result of the breakdown in the evidence.

Bond Issue Illegal.

Mexico City, June 14.—The Mexican Foreign Minister declared yesterday that the Chihuahua bond issue was illegal, as the State Legislature were without power thus to treat with foreigners. Legislators sanctioning the action were answerable to the federal courts as revolutionaries.

Paris, June 14.—The Chamber of Deputies yesterday passed a bill admitting wheat free on condition that an equivalent weight of flour is exported from France by the importer within three months, or an equivalent weight of biscuits within four months.

The high price of wheat and its scarcity have been causing considerable apprehension in France, and it is believed that this action will temporarily relieve the market.

A Birthday Tragedy.

Buffalo, N.Y., June 14—When Frank McDonald, morgue keeper, uncovered a body Wednesday night he saw that it was his own sister-in-law, Mrs. James McDonald, who was killed by a switch engine. She was the mother of eight children. Wednesday was her birthday and she had gone out to purchase supplies for a birthday party.

HALF A VOTE

A correspondent asks how it happens that in a national convention in the United States a candidate, as often is the case, receives half a vote.

The fractional support referred to is the result of a contest in the seating of delegates. Suppose a state is entitled to twenty-five representatives in a convention and two sets of delegates, one for Taft and the other for Roosevelt, claim the distinction. The committee may be unable to decide and compromise the matter by seating both delegations and giving each man half a vote. On a division Taft would secure twelve and a half votes, while the same number would go to Roosevelt. Of course such a vote would have no effect on the final issue, but both sides would have the satisfaction of a place on the floor.

UNION AT HOME

The delegates to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church have given a practical illustration of their faith in the maxim that in union there is strength when they decided to apply that principle to the organizations within their own fold. At the instance of Rev. Dr. A. S. Grant, superintendent of missions, it was resolved to amalgamate into one body the different mission committees of the church. Thus the Home Mission, the Augmentation and the French Evangelization Committee are to be united.

At present these three committees work independently of each other. Each makes its own appeal for contributions, and each makes a separate report to the assembly, the time of the church court at its annual sessions being to a large extent taken up by the hearing of a multiplicity of reports.

The financial department of the church is to be placed in the hands of a board of twenty-one members, two from each Synod, seven members to retire each year. This board will appoint an executive committee of seven. The work of raising funds from the church is to be systematized and the whole placed on a businesslike basis. Wealthy laymen in the church were strong advocates of the new policy, and it is now hoped that the million dollar budget required for the extension of Presbyterianism will be made a reality.

If charity begins at home the unification of all forces engaged in the prosecution of church work should have its starting point at the same place. The Presbyterian Church is evidently of that mind and has paved the way for that larger union with two of its sister churches, for which it has been agitating for the past eight years, and which will soon be given a trial in a somewhat modified form.

ADVERTISING THE SOUTH

The Western Development Congress of the United States, the object of which is to use every human effort to stem the tide of emigration from the American to the Canadian West have begun a campaign against the papers on that side of the line, which contain advertisements of the resources of this country. With the $300,000 which the organization has at its command, endeavors will be made to have this practice of advertising foreign real estate chances stopped and in case it is further persisted in the offending papers are threatened with the ever potential boycott. It was with the same patriotic purpose in view that the Wisconsin State Fair Board, refused the exhibition of Canadian products, but these exhibitors, not to be balked of their purpose opened a show of their own, and ran a race of close competition with the big fair.

It is within the power of Canada to retaliate in this matter. Several papers in the Huron peninsula and in Toronto are publishing advertisements extolling the Souther States as farming communities and more than one resident of this country has swallowed the bait, and after investing his money has journeyed to the land of the tropics only to have his eyes opened to the fact that he has been taken in. The climate, so much lauded, wrecks his health, the soil and every other agricultural condition is so much different to what he has been accustomed that it may be years before he can make a living and too often he is broken down in health and fortune before he can realize one cent on his investment. Lands described in the prospectuses as fertile and well tilled farms, are upon investigation found to be swamps, covered with water that breeds malaria, and infested with every form of deadly reptile.

If any man contemplates an investment in the South or looks in that direction with a view to future residence, he would do well to read in the works of Dickens, about the plunge made by Martin Chuzzelwit in Eden real estate. That story, when written, was based on facts and that system of booming as a city what is a collection of deserted huts is practised to-day just as it was then. This truth many a foreigner, be he British or Canadian born, has learned to his cost.

A Peterborough business man recently returned from Texas, exploited that state as a veritable gold mine for the investment of foreign capital basing his conclusions on the observations he made while there. The Review has no wish to invite controversy but it stands for the statements here made. If foreign, or any other capital, gathers a harvest in the South, it is in some other business than agriculture and is not blindly embarked on the representation of American land speculators in the advertising columns of our Canadian journals.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 13.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat continues to be very limited and the bids on the high grades to-day were 3c to 4c and the low grades ½c to 1c per bushel below cost. No business was done. The demand from European sources for spring wheat flour is quiet and the prices bid were 1s 3d per sack below what millers are asking. The local trade is quiet, but the tone of the market is firm. There is a fair enquiry from the continent for bran at a price which is below miller's views. Shorts are fairly active. Butter is quiet and unsettled, owing to increased supplies. Cheese is steadier under a fair demand from English buyers. Eggs steady and provisions quiet.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"I agree to no terms or conditions whatsoever," he answered. "I am meeting you solely because of the foul lie you have dared to utter against the reputation of the woman I love. If you breathe a word of it in any other ear I shall tear your tongue out by the roots, duel or no duel."

"Ah, but that is a pity," jeered the Frenchman. "Don't you see that unless you accept my offer I shall be compelled to fall back on the sword, since it is absolutely an essential element of my probable success that you should be cleared out of my way? I have no chance against you in the matrimonial market, but I think the odds are in my favor when cold steel is the arbitrator. Now, could anyone be more frank than I in this matter? I mean either to win or lose. There must be no middle course. Unless you are willing to stand aside, if beaten, I can win only by steppinng over your corpse. Why not avoid extremes? They may be unnecessary."

"You have already convinced me that your ethics are drawn from the police court, but I see now, that you depend for your wit on the cheaper variety of melodrama," said Medenham, with a quiet derision that at last brought a flush of passion to the Frenchman's face. "I fail to see the need of more words. You have asked for deeds, and you shall have them. When and where do you propose that this encounter shall take place?"

"To-morrow morning—about four o'clock—on the sands between Calais and Wissant."

In spite of all that had gone before, Medenham was unprepared for this categorical answer. Were he in full possession of his faculties he must have seen the trap into which he was being decoyed. Unhappily, Vanrenen's letter had helped to complete the lure, and he was no longer amenable to the dictates of cold reason."

"That is hardly possible," be said. "I do not propose to bring myself under the law as a murderer, Monsieur Marigny. I am ready to take the consequences of a fair fight, but to secure that, certain preliminaries are indispensable."

"I was sure you would meet me," said Marigny, smiling nonchalantly as he lighted the cigarette again. "I have arranged everything, even the attendance of witnesses and a doctor. We cross over to Calais by the night boat from Dover, pick up the others at the Hotel du Plage, at which they will arrrive to-night, and drive straight to the terrain. There is no prospect of outside interference. This is not the sort of duel which either of the combatants is anxious to advertise broadcast. My friends will be discretion itself, and I need hardly express my conviction that you will not make known in England the purpose of our journey. of course, it is open to you to bring one of your friends, if you think fit. But my notion is, that these affairs should be settled discreetly in the presence of the smallest possible number of onlookers. I shall, of course, satisfy you as to the standing of the gentlemen I have summoned from Paris. On the table there are their telegrams accepting my invitation to meet us at Calais. When you came in I was busy putting my wretched affairs in order. At least I have given you proof of my belief in your courage. I even go so far as to say that I regret most profoundly the necessity which has driven me to use threats against a charming lady in order to wring a challenge out of you. Of course, between ourselves, I know perfectly well that there is not a word of truth in the statements I have pledged myself to make, but that defect in nowise detracts from their efficiency. Indeed, it commends them the more to the real purveyor of scandal——"

The door slammed behind Medenham. A dreadful doubt assailed him that if he did not hurry away from that taunting voice he might be tempted to forget himself—and what torture that would mean to Cynthia! He was indeed a prey to complex emotions that rendered him utterly incapable of forming a well-balanced judgement. Nothing more illogical, more ill-advised, more thoroughly unsuited to achieve its object than the proposed duel could well be mooted, yet the sheer malignity of Marigny's ruffianly device to attain his ends had impelled him to that final madness. Notions of right and wrong were topsy-turvy in his brain. He was carried along on a current of passion that overturned every barrier imposed by sense and prudence. It seemed quite reasonable to one who had often risked life and limb for his country, who, from mere love of sport, had faced many an infuriated tiger and skulking lion, that he should be justified by the eternal law in striving to rid the world of this ultra-beast. He had not scrupled to kill a poisonous snake—why should he flinch from killing a man whose chief equipment was the poison-laden fan of slander? Happily, he could use a sword in a fashion that might surprise Marigny most woefully. If he did not succeed in killing the wretch, he would surely disable him, and the thought sent a thrill of fierce pleasure through his veins that he resolutely closed his eyes to the lamentable results that must follow his own death.

Cynthia, at least, would not suffer; that was all he cared for. No matter what happened, he did not imagine for one moment that she would marry Marigny. But that eventuality hardly troubled him at all. The Frenchman had chosen the swords, and he must abide by its stern arbitrament.

"Home!" he said to Dale, finding his retainer's eye bent inquiringly on him when he reached the street. The word had a curiously detached sound in his ears. "Home!" It savored of rank lunacy to think that within a few short hours he would be standing on foreign soil, striving desperately with naked steel to defend his own life and destroy another's.

CHAPTER XV.

The Outcome

The fine weather which had endured so long gave way that night. Storm-clouds swept up from the Atlantic, and England was drenched in rain when Medenham quitted Charing Cross at 9 p.m. At the eleventh hour he determined to take Dale with him, but that belated display of wisdom arose more from the need he felt of human companionship than from any sense of the absurdity of going alone to fight a duel in a foreign land. He had given no thought during the fleeting hours to the necessity of communicating with his relatives in case he fell a victim to Marigny's rancor, so he devoted himself now to writing a brief account to the Marquis of Scarland of the causes that led up to the duel. He concluded with an entreaty that his brother-in-law should use all means within his power to close down any inquiry that might result, and pointed out that in this connection Dale would prove a valuable ally, since his testimony would make clear the fact that the contest had taken place in France, where duels are looked on with a more lenient eye than in England.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head

ACHE Is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them.

SUMMER SKIN TROUBLES

Sunburn, blistering, and irritation are the commonest form of summer skin troubles, and Zam-Buk ends these very quickly. It works in two ways. As soon as applied, its antiseptic powers get to work and kill all the poison in a wound, a sting or a sore. This generally ends the smarting and the pain. Then Zam-Buk begins the healing process, and fresh healthy tissue is built up. For sore, blistered feet, sore hands, heat rashes, baby's heat spots, sore places due to perspiration, etc., you can't equal Zam-Buk. It also cures cuts, ulcers, abscesses, piles, and all inflamed and diseased conditions of skin and subjacent tissue. Druggists and stores everywhere sell Zam-Buk, 50c. box. Use Zam-Buk Soap also, 25c. per tablet. All stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Honored Submarine Victims.

Cherbourg, France, June 11.—As a further investigation only confirmed the impossibility of recovering the bodies of the crew of twenty-three of the submarine Vendemiaire, which was sunk off the Cherbourg peninsula Saturday, the Minister of Marine, M. Delcasse, went out to the scene of the disaster aboard the armored cruiser Gloire to pay homage to the dead.

The warship steamed up slowly to the spot where the submarine disappeared, and the Minister of Marine, standing on the bridge surrounded by admirals, bared his head and made a brief address. The marine guard presented arms, the band played the Marseillaise, and the guns boomed a salute.

ONE C.P.R. PURCHASE

A Nineteen Million Dollar Order and what it means

In these days of big things, when people talk of millions where their grandfathers spoke of thousands, the fact that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has ordered 12,500 additional freight cars and 300 more locomotives may not attract more than mere passing attention, except amongst railway men. And yet this order involves the expenditure of the immense sum of $19,000,000 — the freight cars costing $14,030,000 and the locomotives $5,000,000. This is a pretty big amount for any railway—even one like the C.P.R.—to spend at one time in additional equipment especially when costly sleepers and diners or passenger coaches of any description whatever are not included.

If figures are seldom amusing they are sometimes entertaining, and this latest purchase of the C.P.R. furnishes a few facts that are of more than ordinary interest. Here are some of them;

The length of a freight car from buffer to buffer is 39 feet, its weight 37,000 pounds and its carrying capacity 80,000 pounds. The length of these locomotives from pilot to buffer of the tender is about 69 feet, and its weight in working order, 175 tons. Each tender carries 5,000 gallons of water and 13 tons of coal. Each locomotive is of 15,000 horse power, and can haul on the level at least 75 cars or on an average of 50 cars over the whole system. String these cars in one long line and they would reach a distance of 92 miles—from Montreal more than half-way to Quebec.

The 12,500 freight cars would make up 250 trains, and if they were to start, say from Calgary, at intervals of one hour, running on a regular schedule of 20 miles an hour, nearly ten days and a half would elapse between the dispatching of the first and of the last train. When the last train left Calgary, there would be a grand procession from the Rockies to the Atlantic and 2,000 miles out on its depths—if it were possible to extend the rails on the ocean—and that is two-thirds of the watery way to the Old Country. The 5,000 mile parade would practically reach around one fifth of the globe. The distance from Calgary to Montreal is 2,251 miles, and the run would occupy four and a quarter days. If the cars were unloaded promptly, the first train could reach Calgary on the return trip, two days before the last one had been dispatched east.

Each car carrying 40 tons, the total capacity of the new cars would be half a million tons, more than enough cargo for 50 ships of the largest cargo-carrying type in the world, which have a capacity of 10,000 tons.

The motive power of the 300 new locomotives aggregates 450,000 h.p.—enough to run 64 Angus shops, the largest of their kind in Canada, or the machinery of factories that would keep nearly four hundred thousand persons employed.

The trains themselves, with the "runs" averaging, say, 125 miles between divisional points would require 17 crews of five men each, between Calgary and Montreal, a total of 85 men, and the 250 trains would need an army of trainmen, 21,250 strong, if each crew were only to make a single "run."

And this is but one purchase of the C.P.R. When one enters upon calculations about this year's entire freight equipment, some 65,000 cars, on a similar basis as that mentioned—a 20-mile-an-hour train hourly—a good deal of arithmetic has to be indulged in. They would make up into 1,300 trains, and it would occupy nearly eight weeks between the departure of the first and the last of them from a given point. They would stretch out 26,000 miles, and encircle the globe at the equator, where Mother Earth swells out to her largest circumference—25,000 miles. They would reach across the continent of North America, from Halifax to Vancouver, over seven times. And they would have a carrying capacity of 2,700,000 tons on the one trip, and with last year's equipment over twenty-two and a half millions of tons were carried during the year.

All of this shows that the C.P.R.'s equipment is something colossal, and that its $19,000,000 purchase means a great deal more than appears on the face of it.

When the weather starts a-blowin
Let 'er blow!
For the tiny buds is growin'
Where the branches rise so bare,
An' they'll presently be showin'
Leaves an' blossoms fresh an' fair.
Let's be patient fur the present
An' have courage even though
It is just a bit unpleasant.
Let 'er blow!

When old Trouble comes a-knockin'
Let 'im knock!
Though he sets the door a-rockin'
Till it's threatenin' to bump,
He will stop his manners shockin'
If you simply let 'im thump.
Happiness comes up behind 'im,
Mebbe less than half a block,
And old Trouble—don't you mind 'im—
Let 'im knock!
—Washington Star.

The Proud Princess.

"No," said the haughty Boola-Boola, daughter of the king of the cannibal islands, as she arrayed herself in her necklace of missionary's teeth and a nice, fresh smile; "these dressmakers of London, Paris and New York have nothing on me."

Kitchenettes.

A little white sugar in hot water—two lumps to a basinful—is sufficient stiffening for delicate laces.

Starched clothes, shirts, collars and cuffs if dried before a bright fire after ironing become beautifully stiff.

Let new lamp chimneys come to the boiling point in water and then let the water cool around them. They will not be so liable to crack if this is done.

Books bound in leather may be freshened by using equal quantities of white of egg and water beaten together. Apply this with a soft flannel cloth and polish when dry.

Two Threats.

Mrs. Muchwed—Henry, I'm not going to put up with this a bit longer. I'll take the baby and go away to mother's.

Mr. Muchwed—Yesh, an' (hic) I'll take the jewelry and (hic) go away to uncle's.—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Is he rich?"

"Yes. He owns a fur overcoat."

"But is be very rich?"

"No; I don't think so. He can't afford a middleweight overcoat for mild weather."—Detroit Free Press.

DAINTY WHITEWEAR is ever a valuable acquisition to the feminine wardrobe and even the most exacting is sure to find in our attractive showing, garments which truly merit the most elaborate words of praise.

THE LONG SEPARATE COAT is indispensable this season and no wardrobe is complete without one. Not only does it give a finishing touch to one's summer costume but for driving, travelling, motoring, etc., it is altogether indispensible. Our showing of these attractive, serviceable garments is, we believe, the most extensive in the city and the prices at which they have been marked will mean "quick buying."

Housekeepers preparing their cottages "up-the-lakes" or "down-the-river" or at any other point will be interested in our display of Japanese Fibre Rugs for the cottage floor, nothing cleaner, cooler or more sanitary — And these serviceable room Rugs are procurable at prices which will mean a ready sale:—size 6 ft. x 6 ft. 89c; 9 ft. x 9 ft. $1.95; 9 ft. x 10 ft. $2.29; 9 ft, x 12 ft. $2.49.

Of course you will require a Hammock at the summer cottage and our range of "samples" represent unusual value at the prices marked $1.00 to $5.00.

Have you a Carpet for your canoe? We have a number of carpet ends which are an ideal provision for such a want. Can be shaped and bound to insure satisfactory wear and made to fit the ends of the canoe; very moderately priced.

TORONTO EASTERN ROAD TO BE BUILT TO PETERBOROUGH

That Peterborough will soon be connected by electric railway with Toronto is now one of the city's future possibilities, for it is planned to make it a terminus of the Toronto Eastern Railway, the construction of which has already been decided upon. The last issue of the Railway Journal of Canada publishes a diagram showing the route which it is proposed to follow and the towns and cities that will be touched by the new road.

The Toronto Eastern Railway will be built to Oshawa, and from that point north to Lindsay. From Oshawa it will be extended eastward through Bowmanville, Port Hope and Cobourg, the latter to be the eastern terminus.

From Port Hope, the road, according to the diagram, is to be constructed in an almost straight line to Peterborough, skirting the western point of Rice Lake. Beyond Peterborough the road has not yet been projected.

With the completion of such an undertaking the city will have direct communication with Lake Ontario and will be made easy of access to all the towns to the south.

EAST BOUND FREIGHT CRASHED INTO STANDING TRAIN CAUSING MUCH DAMAGE

A rear-end collision between two freight trains occurred last night about 7 o'clock on the main C.P.R. line south of Brownton. An east bound train had stopped and was standing on the track when another from the same direction overtook it, crashing into the back of the stationary train. Fortunately no one was hurt in the collision. A new Intercolonial passenger coach, fresh from the shops was the second car from the back of the standing train. An old colonist C.P.R. coach was at the rear of the train and the back of it was completely telescoped. The iron platform at the rear of the coach was crushed into the woodwork of the car and gaping holes were torn in the body of the car. The engine of the second train was very badly off and the front of the boiler broken and crushed into the interior of the boiler. The pilot of the engine was torn off. Two flat cars were completely demolished, the trucks being thrown from the track.

The West Toronto auxiliary was sent for and arrived to clear away the wreckage about six o'clock this morning.

The main line was blocked for several hours but the trains going east or west were able to pass the blocked track by making use of a siding.

No serious trouble was experienced through the wreckage taking fire, though a small blaze had to be extinguished by the firemen.

The wreckage crew from Toronto are working at the scene of the collision and it is likely that the wreckage will be completely cleared away before to-night.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENTS FOR NICHOLL'S HOSPITAL WILL BE OF LATEST IDEAS

Tenders for excavation are asked by the Board of Trustees for the Nicholls Hospital, it having been decided to erect two new buildings, one for a hospital and the other for a laundry.

With the excavation completed, the other work will be commenced at once.

The new building will be to the south of the present hospital and practically separated. It will be of brick, 90 feet by 40 feet, three storeys, and will give accommodation for forty-five beds. Two operating rooms will be on the top storey and the roof of glass. An elevator will also be installed. Sun parlors, for convalescent patients, are also to be provided for.

The building will be fireproof, and this department, as well as the furnishing of the wards and the operating rooms will be of the most up-to-date character. Each ward will have its own ventilation. Hot water will be used in the heating, with a separate steam sytem for ventilation. To the northwest of the present building, the laundry, complete with all the latest machinery and hospital laundry devices, will be erected.

The trustees have gone to considerable trouble to perfect the proposed plans, and they feel that the new building will be in every way a credit to the city. Mr. Wm. Blackwell is the architect. He has just completed plans for a similar building in St. Catharines, and the new hospital will benefit by ideas gained there and in other places. The plans have the warmest approval of Dr. Bruce Smith, Provincial Inspector.

ACTION ARISING OVER REAL ESTATE DEAL, CONCLUDES WITH JUDGMENT FOR PLAINTIFF

"One of the most bitterly contested suits that I have heard, and one that I am very glad has been left with a jury to deal with."

The above was the substance of Judge Huycke's remarks at the conclusion of the warmly contested Collier vs. Brown action which was concluded yesterday afternoon at the Court of General Sessions, and in which the jury brought in a verdict favoring the plaintiffs.

Briefly stated the facts of the case are as follows:

In February last, Andrew Brown, real estate dealer, sued H. B. Collier claiming $50 due him as balance of a commission on a real estate deal with reference to Peterborough and Vancouver property. On inquiry about this time Mr. Collier learned that Mr. Brown had also obtained a commission on the sale of the Vancouver lot, as well as on the sale of the Collier property in Peterborough. Mr Collier consulted his solicitors who advised an action to recover the commission obtained from the other parties on the ground that, as the defendant was their agent to sell, that he would have no right to take the other commission no bargain having been made permitting him to do so. Mr Collier claimed in all $400. The action was tried at the sittings of the County Court and has occupied the last three days of the time of judge and jury.

Counsel for both parties addressed the jury yesterday afternoon followed by the judge's charge.

The case went to the jury at five o'clock who, after being out one to two hours brought in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff.

1. Did, or did not the plaintiff Collier, employ Brown, the defendant, as his agent (a) to sell his house and stock, both or either of them (b) or to exchange the same as part payment for the Sherry Vancouver property?

Answer—Yes.

2. Did Brown act as such agent of Collier in conducting the negotiations?

Answer—Yes

3. If he did so act as agent, what compensation or commission was Brown paid by Collier for such services?

Answer—$150.00.

4. Was Brown paid a commission by Mr. Sherry, the other party to the transaction in question, and if so, how much?

Answer—Yes, $250.00.

5. If he was so paid by Sherry, did Collier from the facts or circumstances know of such payment made, or to be made by Sherry to Brown at the time of closing the sale of his house and stock in Peterborough and purchase of the Vancouver property?

Answer—No.

6. If he (Collier) did not know of such payment by Sherry to Brown at the time said transaction was closed, did he (Collier) know of it when he paid Brown $150?

Answer—No.

7. If he (Collier) did not known then of such payment by Sherry to Brown, when did he first learn of it?

Answer—Feb., 1912.

Mr. S. T. Medd appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. F. D. Kerr, and E. A. Peck were in court for the defendant.

Mr. A. B. Cunningham was called as a witness for the defence, and under examination admitted that he had a personal grudge against the plaintiff. Mr Cunningham was in business with the Colliers for some time, finally agreeing to sell out his interests to Mr. Collier. Judge Huycke accordingly dismissed his testimony presumably because of his apparent prejudice to the plaintiff. Mr. Vincent Eastwood's evidence for the defence, did not establish anything, witness admitting that Mr. A. B. Cunningham was the only man to his knowledge who had business trouble with Mr. Collier.

His Honor severely scored the conduct of several of the parties involved in the case.

Prices for D. L. & W. Scranton Coal for June will be—$7.00 Pea Coal; $7.50 Stove and Egg; $7.75 Nut Coal. Fresh Lime and Cement always in Stock. ROBERT HICKS. tf

PRESIDENT FITZGERALD NOT FRIGHTENED BY LONDON CLUB

League Has the Right to Take Franchise From London.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, June 14.—President J. H. Fitzgerald, of the Canadian Baseball League, announced this morning that a special meeting of the directors would be held in Hamilton on Sunday. "It is really not to re-consider the London case," said the president, "but to find out whether London is or is not to run the Canadian League. I am not at all alarmed at the prospect of any action the London Club may take. The franchise is the property of the league and may be taken away for cause."

President Fitzgerald's statement of the London case is that all last season London, against the rules of the league, issued passes on which they paid no percentage to the other clubs, with the exception of St. Thomas, who demanded and received its share. The very fact that St. Thomas collected its share convicted the management of double dealing.

A committee was appointed by the league to investigate the matter and they assessed London $243—the full amount of every ticket issued. At the last meeting of the league, at the request of London, the decision was turned over to the president for reconsideration. London at the time expressed themselves as willing to pay $125, which they said was owing on the tickets used as stated by the gentleman who held them. One club-owner stated that in one day 68 went in on these tickets, those holding them bringing in several others with them. On this basis the amount figured was $25, a decidedly conservative estimate.

Whether knowing of their manager's action or not the London Club were certainly guilty of double-dealing, and on that count a fine of $50 was imposed upon them. The other $200 is ordered divided among the clubs London filched—Brantford, Berlin, Hamilton and Guelph.

The London owners are rather misstating their powers. It is the second time in the past few weeks that they have threatened such dire proceedings. The gentlemen in possession there forget that they can't disrupt the league by withdrawing from a territory which is not theirs at all, but the league's. In the next place their possession of the franchise is entirely a matter of the league's sufferance. It is high time the London gentlemen should learn that they are but eighth partners with the other seven clubs in the London territory, and they will settle."

BIFF, BANG, BING, WITH CONTINUED BINGLING GAVE LONDON SEVENTEEN RUNS

The same old sun was shining, the same game crowd was there, the same old Petes were tumbling, and got the same cold stare. The same fair maids sat deep in gloom, and told the same sad tale, the same "two bit" crowd had their say, along the same old rail. The same old score board groaned again, it bore the same old news, the score boys worked the same old way with ones and twos and threes. The same old holes were found at third, the same punk plays were seen, the pitcher twirled the same "bush" ball upon the same old green. The umps was called the same old names, the players got theirs, too. Earl Hartman played the same drop game as with the Templin crew. The same old vow the same fans made, no more to roam that way, but they'll be there in the same old place, when the team comes back to play.

Burlesque and more burlesque and then some more and there wasn't any corner on the material with which to manufacture lemonade. And still the fans continue to suffer.

Chief Thompson was there, but failed to lay any information charging fraud. He missed his opportunity as the chances appeared bright for convictions.

There would be no trouble in securing plenty of witnesses. Somebody remarked last night that as pitchers were scarce it was probable that the White Cap peggers were working for their release. Ha! Ha!

It's too bad that such a game crowd of fans should be taken in by such a gang of "four flushers." They have been paid good money and given every chance to show what they could do. That they have failed to make good, in any sense of the word, the fans can vouch for only too well and these fake pitchers can't separate themselves from a Peterboro uniform any too soon.

In yesterday's game at Riverside, Bowerman's Cockneys hit the offerings of Tracy, Derr and Nork, all over the lot for a total of seventeen runs. The best Peterboro would do with Silcox was four runs.

In this slugging exhibition by the visitors, there were four home runs, which resulted in twice as many counters. London didn't show any partiality, and banged the ball right from the start.

Silcox didn't have much of the strikeout goods, but he received the highest class of support. The Petes hit often and hard, but fast fielding terminated in putouts, and it was only these that kept the crowd at the Park.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Guelph Herald.—After Monday's ball game between Guelph and Ottawa, Manager Cook of the Senators, wired President Fitzgerald for a competent umpire, not being satisfied with Johnston. He did not know that Mr. Fitzgerald was in the grand stand watching the game. The next day he received the following reply: "If Ottawa had played ball as well as Guelph they would have won the game, umpire or no umpire. Johnston will stay on the job.

Cocash with his "Seven League boots" went into the pond at centre field for three flies that killed Peterborough efforts at scoring.

Fifty-three batters faced the three White Cap pitchers.

But all the same those home runs would be pie on a larger field. White had rosy chances to pull off a Frank Merrifield stunt off the fence.

Resurrect "Yeh" Flaherty. He couldn't do any worse.

Frank Shaughnessy remarked last winter when he signed up Red Rowe for the Ottawa club, the only thing that kept the Titian haired catcher out of the big leagues was his size. Shag declared Red had an arm, a head and could hit, but was a trifle on the small size for a major league backstop. Rowe is sure hitting the ball and his two wallops at Guelph yesterday brings up his average to .338—Ottawa Free Press.

Nicholls made a clever one-hand stab of Templin's drive in the ninth. Hartman, who was playing the first bag, dropped the peg, as per his usual custom with Peterborough.

We have Petes, White Caps and Templin's Terrors, but how would Posers do? Anybody can stand at the plate and let the umpire call strikes.

Of all the recruits coming this way Jack White looks the best. He hits the ball every time.

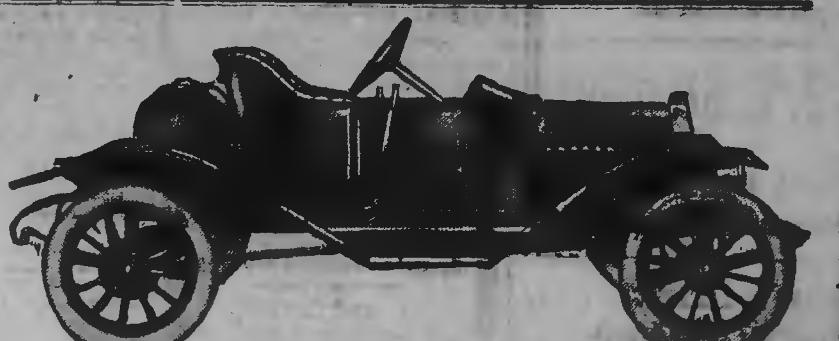
McLAUGHLIN-BUICK MOTOR CARS

Automobile purchasers may be divided into three classes:



Those to whom low price is a greater consideration than serviceability.

Those to whom price is no obstacle in gratifying a taste for the exclusive and the luxurious.

Then there is the great middle class—those who are prepared to make only a moderate expenditure but at the same time demand a car with power, style, stamina, and beauty.

It is the latter who will purchase the two thousand odd cars the McLaughlin Carriage Co. is building this year.

The style and beauty can be judged from the many McLaughlin cars to be seen on the streets and in the McLaughlin showrooms.

The power plant and the stamina of the McLaughlin car as a whole is guaranteed by the stability and integrity of the house of McLaughlin. To appreciate what this means it must be known that the McLaughlin Carriage Co. embodies in every car forty-three years of experience.

The service of a McLaughlin car is assured by the immense factory at Oshawa and the branch houses and agencies in all the leading cities and towns in Canada.

SENSIBLE GIFT SUGGESTIONS —FOR THE JUNE BRIDE—

The practical wedding gift has displaced fancy knicknacks and tawdry ornaments. A gift is appreciated in proportion to the service it renders the recipient. Give to the bride something she will appreciate as long as it lasts. Get the right quality and it will last for ever.

ELECTRIC IRONS

IDEAL..........$5.50

A-BEST-O......$8.50

This Iron is far superior to any other Electric Iron we have seen. The heating element is absolutely guaranteed for three years, and will be replaced free of charge if it becomes defective in that time.

An automatic heat regulator gives the exact amount of heat necessary for light or heavy ironing.

See this Iron—it will make a most acceptable wedding gift.

REFRIGERATORS

THE HOUSE ON THE BOUNDARY

Malone, N.Y., June 14.—Near the town of Malone, N.Y., there is a house, one end of which is on American and the other on Canadian territory. A Justice of the Peace, duly elected and qualified, leads in this domicile a sort of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde existence. At one end of it he is a somewhat formidable representative of United States judicial dignity. By simply shifting his position the robes of office, so to speak, fall from him, and he is a mere man, a private citizen shorn of his dignity.

Yesterday a local poultry fancier appropriated two chickens from the flock of his neighbor and was by due process of law carried before the justice with the residence of dual nationality. Everything was proceeding with becoming pomp and ceremony until the prisoner with his spoils still in his possession, moved to the other end of the room, and, finding himself under the protection of the British flag, laughed the judge to scorn and refused to be recaptured without the formality of extradition.

The business of the court came to a sudden standstill. The defendant knew when he was well off and refused to budge. But once more the love of poultry proved his undoing. The chickens broke loose and sought the soil of their native heath. The ruling passion of the prisoner prevailed, and he started in pursuit of his prizes. Once more was his capture effected, and without loss of time the justice found him guilty, and sentenced him to jail for thirty days at hard labor.

The chickens were returned to their rightful owner.

WEDDING BELLS

RENNIE—FLETCHER.

A pretty wedding was celebrated in Keene, on Wednesday at 3 p.m., when Miss Elsie Fletcher, daughter of Mr. Henry Fletcher, of Keene, was united in marriage to Mr. Andrew Rennie, of Keene. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Wm. Johnson, of Keene.

The bridesmaid was Miss Bertha Fletcher, sister of the bride, and the groomsman, Mr. Harry Stewart, of Otonabee. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents.

The bride was attired in Alice blue messaline satin, trimmed in cream lace and silk net and wore a veil of Brussels net twined with orange blossoms. She entered the church leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Pearl Howson, preceded by her sister, Bertha and was met at the altar by the groom and groomsman. The church was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and evergreens. They stood under a large bell of flowers suspended to an arch. The centre seats of the church were reserved for the guests and to each pew was tacked a small bouquet of lillies of the valley.

After the ceremony was performed the guests went to the home of the bride's parents when a reception was held. At six o'clock dinner was served all present having an enjoyable time. The groom's present to the bride was a gold watch and fob; to the bridesmaid, a gold signet hat pin; to the groomsman a pair of kid gloves, and to the organist a gold mounted shirt waist set, set with pearls.

The guests from the vicinity and out of town were:—Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Howson, Miss Minnie and Harold Howson, Mr. A. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. B. Kindred, Mr. and Mrs. L. Burley, Mr. and Mrs. Burrell, Mr. and Mrs. A. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Miller, Miss Miller, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lang, Miss Jean Lang, Mr. James Lang and Miss Nang, Mrs. Howson, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson, Miss L. Whaley, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kempt, Mr. and Mrs. D. Edwards, Mr. H. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. R. Brown, Mr. Gus Bolin and sister, Miss Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. H. Cowie, Miss M. Rennie, Dr. and Mrs. McWilliams, Mr. and Mrs. Marsh Weir, Mrs. J. Rennie, Mr. C. Smith, Mr. W. Silver, Miss Z. Pue, Mr. G. Gall and sister Mary, Mr. J. Stewart, Mrs. W. Bishop, Miss B. Thompson.

THAT ABATTOIR FOR PETERBORO

Ald. Anderson Has this Important Question in Hand

The matter of a municipally owned abattoir for Peterborough which some months ago was under discussion, was allowed to drop owing to pressure of more important questions, until such time as Ald. Anderson who fathered the idea, was able to take it up more thoroughly. While that time has not yet arrived, Ald. Anderson discussed the matter for a few minutes this morning with a Review representative.

"It will be remembered," said Ald. Anderson, that a convention was held in Toronto some time ago, when invitations were extended to officials from the various municipalities to be present and discuss municipally owned abattoirs. At that gathering, a committee was appointed to interview the Government.

Ald. Anderson's idea for Peterborough was to have a slaughter house established in the suburbs of the city if a convenient place could be discovered, where all killing would be done for farmers, and butchers, subject to a regular fee, and under the direction of a competent inspector.

"The chief consideration with such an idea locally," said Ald Anderson, "is the expense that would be involved. However, I do not intend to let the matter stop, but as soon as opportunity offers, and when I have sufficient time, I will take up the question again in the hope of seeing the idea ripen into something definite."

The City of Berlin has, through their Board of Health, recommended the drafting of a by-law for a municipal abattoir.

STREET RAILWAY

The work on the extension of the Radial Railway is being pushed forward rapidly. The rails are laid on Albert street, through Brownton, south to the C.P.R. track. The poles are up with the supports ready for the trolley wire. This new line which will be of great benefit to the south-end residents, is expected to be in commission before the first of July.

IS HALE AND HEARTY AT 101

Early Rising and Temperance Principles His Laws

Fredericton, June 14—Levi Richardson celebrated his 101st birthday yesterday at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Young of this city. Considering his great age, Mr. Richardson is enjoying unusually good health. He is so active that if the weather had been fine he would have spent part of to-day working in the garden in the rear of his daughter's home, where he spends an hour or two almost every day.

He attributes his long life and remarkable preservation to early rising, strict adherence to temperance principles, and never allowing himself to be idle when he could find work to do, even to shaving himself in his old age. He has upwards of eighty children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren. His wife passed away on January 31, 1909, having reached a ripe old age.

Prospect Travelling Over G. T. P.

The eighth, or 1912 edition of the Grand Trunk's folder on the Temagami region has just made its appearance, and is even more attractive than in the past. The most varied information that the sportsman or camper could require is supplied in convenient form, and the illustrations convey an adequate impression of the scenic beauties of the district. Particularly effective is the cover showing a small boy holding up for admiration a 22 pound lake trout caught in Lake Temagami, which is almost as long as himself. The new edition of the Northern Navigation Company's publication on the Grand Trunk route through Lake Superior, the Georgian Bay, and the 30,000 islands is also off the press and will be found to contain matter of absorbing interest for those who are contemplating a summer trip.

Gospel Hall

Mr. Douglas Russell, who addressed a large audience in Gospel Hall last evening, will speak again in the hall this evening. Mr. Russell's Peterborough hymn, which appears in to-day's Review, will be sung by Mr. Mulligan at the meeting in Central Park on Sunday evening.

Fire at the Wreck

Detective Pinchin of the C. P. R. notified Fire Chief Howard last night to send assistance in case of fire at the wreck. Two men and two chemical extinguishers were sent in the Chief's rig. Two fires were burning on their arrival, but they were extinguished without much damage being done.

POPULAR YOUNG MAN ANSWERS SUDDEN SUMMONS

Death came with startling suddenness last night to Rolland Howden, son of Mr. J. J. Howden, of Lansdowne avenue, when, returning to his home last night he succumbed to an attack of heart failure.

With a number of other boys last night Rolland had paddled down the river in the Y.M.C.A. war canoe and on his return to the city he drove with his cousin, Howden Morris, to the latter's residence. Here he left his cousin about 9.15 o'clock to walk home.

His parents were not alarmed at his non-appearance, believing that he was spending the night with his cousin, Howden Morris, as he had often done before. But this morning about 7 o'clock, Mr. J. Jamieson, who was passing through the short lane from the road to Mr. Howden's residence, found the body, from which all life had fled, by the road side.

Mr. Jamieson conveyed the sad news to the parents of the unfortunate young man, and Coroner Greer was notified. He decided that the case was one of heart failure.

Rollie Howden was a young man only 19 years of age and had previous to his death, not only enjoyed the best of health, but had been an all round athlete. He had never complained of anything that would indicate a previous weakness of the heart.

The news of his death has come as a shock to most the young people of Peterborough, among whom he was popular and widely known. He attended the Collegiate Institute, last term in the third form, and was a player on the P.C.I. basketball, hockey and baseball teams. He for the past few years had competed annually and successfully in the annual field day sports.

In the Y.M.C.A. he was an active member, being particularly interested in the sports department. He was also a member of the boys work committee.

Both among the younger and older people of this city Rolland Howden had a large number of friends, and his death, under the saddest of circumstances will be deeply and greatly regretted.

He was popular too with the teachers of the Collegiate Institute and the officials of the Y.M.C.A. who join with the rest of his friends in extending the sincerest sympathy to his family. He was a member of St. John's church, a promising young man of exemplary habits and he will be greatly missed from the family circle.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Howden, and one sister, Florence.

The funeral will be held on Monday day afternoon at three o'clock from the family residence to the Little Lake Cemetery. The Rev. Canon Davidson will conduct the funeral services.

The World is Small

A curious instance of the manner in which modern transportation facilities have brought closely together the old and new worlds came to light the other day in the Grand Trunk Railway's new hotel at Ottawa, the Chateau Laurier. Some of the barbers employed in the building were brought there especially from Europe and, among them, one from Edinburgh, who had worked at his trade in that city up to the day he sailed. This man had for one of his latest customers an Englishman whose personality impressed itself upon him more than usual by reason of a conversation which he had with him. Great was the mutual surprise of both men, however, when the Englishman seated himself in the chair of the same barber at the Chateau ten days later. Although neither knew that the other was intending to travel they had met again a quarter of the way round the globe, the customer having received an unexpected cable which necessitated his sailing immediately for this country to look after interests here.

"Crack-Nut" Sunday.

Last century there used to prevail a singular custom at Kingston-on-Thames, England. On the Sunday before the eve of St. Michael's Day the population—adults and children alike—of that riverside town were wont, ere repairing to church, to fill their pockets with nuts. No sooner had they taken their seats and the service had commenced than they proceeded to crack the hard shells with their teeth or beneath the heels of their boots. The noise that this practice produced was so loud and so incessant as often to cause a temporary cessation of the service, and more than one preacher has been known to break off his sermon until the extraordinary disturbance had ceased. This Sunday was known as "Crack-nut Sunday."

Father Bernard Vaughan has lately started a motor chapel. Externally it differs from an ordinary motor-van only by its two square windows on each side. The interior is fitted with a miniature altar, with kneelers in front for a dozen worshipers. When not in use the benches are stowed away, the altar cleared of its ornaments, and the vehicle becomes an ordinary traveling van, with truckle-beds for the two priests who accompany it on its travels.

Tar and Feathers In 1189.

In England the penalty of tar and feathers was introduced in 1189, when Richard I., before setting out for the Holy Land, ordained, in order to preserve the discipline of his fleet, that whosoever should be convicted of theft should first have his head shaved; that boiling pitch should then be poured upon it and a cushion of feathers (de la plume d'oreiller) shaken over it. He was afterward to be put on shore at the first place the ship touched, though after a baptism of boiling pitch the poor wretch would have little life left.

Cockatoo as Companion.

Recently a lady was seen taking a stroll through a fashionable London park accompanied by one of the strangest outdoor companions that one could possibly have—a cockatoo. This bird was perched upon the young lady's finger, and no chain or cord held control in case of flight. A West end bird fancier informed the writer that this was a unique case, so far as his knowledge went, of a cockatoo being made an outdoor companion.

FINDING SUNKEN GOLD.

Perils of Treasure Salving Do Not Deter Adventurous Spirits.

Although the average person needs no telling that a diver carries his life in his hands every time he descends beneath the waves, few realize the arduousness of his work and the many difficulties he has to overcome, particularly when engaged in the task of recovering sunken treasure.

One of the greatest difficulties, for instance, which faced the staff of divers working under Captain Young, who took charge of the operations for salving the three-quarters of a million of specie which went down with the Oceana off Newhaven, were the currents which sweep round the wreck. "It is very bad water to work in," said Captain Young, during the course of an interview, and the strength of the currents is strikingly illustrated by the fact that within a few hours of sinking the Oceana was carried nine miles from the spot where she was struck.

The Oceana went down in 90 feet of water, and the first task which fell to the divers was to find the key of the bullion room in the captain's cabin. Ultimately one of the divers managed to get into the cabin, but the current was so strong that twice he was washed out again before he succeeded in his object. Another of the divers got entangled in the wreckage, while on several occasions the men were obliged to let go their hold on the guide-ropes, and trust to luck and the currents to reach the surface.

It is the state of the water rather than the depth which has made the task of recovering the Oceana bullion so difficult, for it is by no means the greatest depth of water from which treasure has been salved.

Some years ago, for instance, $350,000 was recovered from a Spanish vessel, Alphonso XII., which had sunk off Point Gando, in the Grand Canary, in 165 feet of water, while another case was that of the Skyro, which sank off Cape Finisterre in 186 feet of water, and from which $100,000 worth of bullion was recovered some time after, dynamite having to be used in order to get at the gold. The dangerous nature of the work in this case may be gathered from the fact that the deck had collapsed to within 18 inches of the cabin floor, and at the finish of the dynamite operations the diver reported that there was no part of the wreck standing higher than himself, excepting the engines and the main boilers; it was just a heap of scrap iron.

Among other instances of recovered sunken treasure might be mentioned the $250,000 worth of specie raised from the Hamilla Mitchell, which sank in 150 feet of water near Shanghai. In these cases the great depth of the water was an important consideration. The greater the depth at which a diver works, of course, the greater the pressure, which increases by 4 1-2 pounds for every 10 feet. Those working on the wreck of the Oceana labored under a pressure of about 40 pounds per square inch. In the other instances mentioned the pressure was between 70 pounds and 80 pounds per square inch.

The greatest depth that Admiralty divers have reached—and these divers are the most scientific in the world—has been 210 feet. The first man who set up this record was Gunner Catto, who, during the Scottish experiments with the Spanker some years ago, dived to this extraordinary depth and stayed down for twenty-five minutes. The previous record was held by Angelo Erostabe, who recovered $60,000 worth of silver bars from the Skyro already mentioned. He made over eighty descents to a depth of 186 feet, and his maximum stay at the bottom was twenty-five minutes.

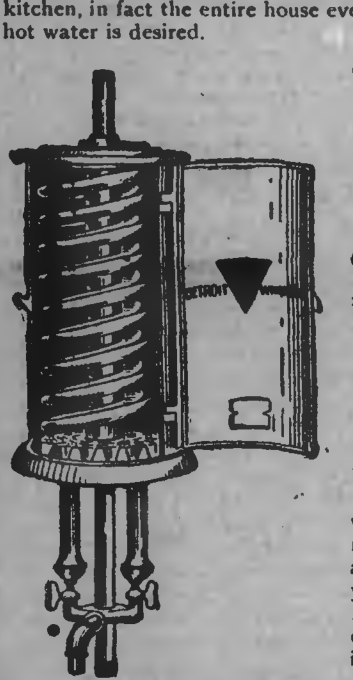
You Don't Have to Start a Fire in the Coal Range When Someone Wants a Bath

IT'S no longer necessary to hustle around gathering up paper, carrying up wood and lugging up coal every time somebody wants to take a bath. You no longer need to heat up your kitchen, in fact the entire house every time an extra quantity of hot water is desired.



THERE'S AN EASIER WAY

USE AN

"IDEAL"

GAS

Water Heater

This heater occupies but very little space. It is connected to your kitchen boiler and is operated as easily as your gas range. The IDEAL Heater heats water very quickly—enough for a bath in 20 minutes.

This Heater Will Not Overheat Your Kitchen

We have an IDEAL connected and in operation at our office. We'd be glad to show it to you if you'd pay us a visit. If that isn't possible, have us send a representative to tell you more about it.

Troubled Waters.

Captain Joe Waters, a Kansas attorney, tried a case at Council Grove not long ago. The captain was up against it, and he turned on the tears end let them flow unrestrained while depicting the woes of his client.

It was a great and tearful speech. In the middle of it a brother attorney who was sitting by was observed taking off his shoes.

"What are you doing that for?" asked another lawyer.

"By gum!" replied the lawyer who was removing his shoes, "I'm getting ready to wade out. It's right sloppy round here already, and Joe ain't half through."—Saturday Evening Post.

"It's a pleasure to hear an educated man talk," the driver remarked. "A lot of people might not understand all of them big words you used, but I liked 'em. I'll tell you one thing, Mr. Focht, a man's gotta be able to read and write to get ahead of me."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

DUTY TO THE FORESTS

CANADA IS FACED BY A GREAT RESPONSIBILITY.

Recent Report of Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior Shows That of Country's Total Annual Cut Only a Half Is Ever Used —A National Calamity Can Only Be Averted by Great Care.

In the Canadian West, where the public domain is still an asset of the Federal Government, an effort on a large scale is being made to conserve the timber resources of the country, says a writer in The Montreal Standard. This work of conservation is entrusted to the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior. The report of the branch for the latest fiscal year gives a detailed account of the work. Much of this is of interest only to those engaged in the work, but mingled with these reports of a technical or departmental nature, is much valuable information of interest to everyone interested in our timber resources — and this includes about everybody who takes thought for the morrow of the people of Canada. There must be conservation of our forest resources or the time will come when Canada will be a timberless country; and it is the duty of the Government to make a stand for economic use, and become the great teacher of conservation. The forest reserves of the Federal Government both teach and practice conservation.

The forest reserves of the Dominion now contain somewhat more than sixteen million acres. The recent forest reserves legislation was so framed as to include all lands reserved for parks as well as for forest reserves proper, and authority is given to the Governor in Council to set apart as parks such lands within reserves as are suitable for that purpose. Consequently the parks previously set apart have been included. These are Yoho and Glacier parks in British Columbia; Rocky Mountains Park and Jasper Park in Alberta, which are now included in the Rocky Mountain forest reserve, and Buffalo Park, also in the Province of Alberta.

In connection with those reserves the officers of the Forestry Branch have three principal duties to perform —to preserve the forests from destruction by fire; to supervise the cutting of timber where cutting is permitted; and to establish reforestation over depleted areas wherever such work of restoration is possible. Incidentally the officers of the branch perform other important duties. They are always collecting information respecting the geography of the reserves, the extent and nature of their timber resources, the animal life found there, and they also do much to protect that life, and so assist in preserving the big game of the country. The rangers of the forest reserves are the most active workers for the cause of conservation to be found in the country.

One of the best known of these officers is Mr. H. R. MacMillan whose duties and work have made him an authority upon Canadian forestry.

In his report to the Superintendent of Forestry, Mr. MacMillan goes beyond an account of the work that fell immediately under his hand, and presents some general information respecting the timber resources of all Canada, the rate at which consumption is going on, and what will be the end if the existing system is persisted in.

According to Mr. MacMillan's computation, Canada is consuming forest material at the rate of 2,896,000,000 cubic feet a year, possessing a value of $166,000,000. The quantity is that of timber cut in the woods to furnish the material necessary for each class of products. Owing to the very great waste in the utilization of wood in Canada only about one-half of this wood cut is ever actually put into use. That cut lumber, lath and shingles possessed the greatest value—eighty-seven and a half million dollars, while firewood comes second with a little more than one-half that amount.

The total value of $166,000,000 is the value at the point of production. "This," writes Mr. MacMillan, "is $22.44 for every person in Canada. In 1909, there were cut from Canadian forests about 400 cubic feet of timber for every inhabitant of the continent.

Two-fifths of the lumber of Canada is produced in Ontario, one-fifth in Quebec; New Brunswick and Nova Scotia together make up the greater part of the remaining fifth, and but proportionately small quantities are manufactured in Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Alberta and Prince Edward Island.

The decrease of the forests of Canada, and the consequent decrease in available forest products is nothing short of a national calamity.

The forests of Canada stand chiefly upon lands unfit for agriculture even in its most intensive form. They produce a crop valued at $166,000,000 per year. The harvesting and first manufacture of this crop employs labor to the extent of $100,000,000 yearly, and probably almost as much more is spent in turning out the more highly manufactured forms of wood products.

In addition to supplying a large proportion of the population of Canada with their means of livelihood, the products of the forest are for the whole population the chief source of heat and shelter, are the most important raw materials for the factories, enter largely into the construction of nearly all articles of human use, and furnish one-sixth of the total export of Canada.

Unless the principles of forestry are adopted by those who are responsible for the administration of the forest lands of Canada there is nothing surer than that within a comparatively short period of years the forests of Canada will be so destroyed by fire and exploitation, heedless of the future, that there will be an insufficiency of any grade of timber for the carrying on of the works of the population in this country.

Spring Blossom Luncheon.

If ever a luncheon table is dainty and alluring it is in the spring, when the first of the early blossoms have appeared and can be utilized as table decorations.

Sometimes, without prejudice to the menu, it is possible to carry out all the dishes in approximately the color scheme of the flower used in the table setting.

Tulips are particularly springlike, and for the amateur decorator good effects are more easily obtained with them than with many blooms of less distinctive type. For instance, they can be arranged in a bed of green built up over wet sand covering a circular enamel tray. The green is of sod or moss, and the tulips are most effective if arranged for a centerpiece, as if growing in this with several inches of green between each posy.

Masterpiece Gone to Waste.

The very seedy looking young man made his way with difficulty down the corridor on the ninth floor of one of the best hotels and knocked loudly at his friend's door. Anguish was written on his face and wrinkles on his clothes. He was a walking sign of what it means to spend a hard night.

"What's the matter?" called out the sleepy friend.

"Matter? It's a tragedy, a death, the end of all things—ruination and grief!"

"Well, what is it?" lazily inquired the drowsy man without opening the door.

Whereupon the seedy looking young man, leaning against the door and lifting his voice to a howl, replied:

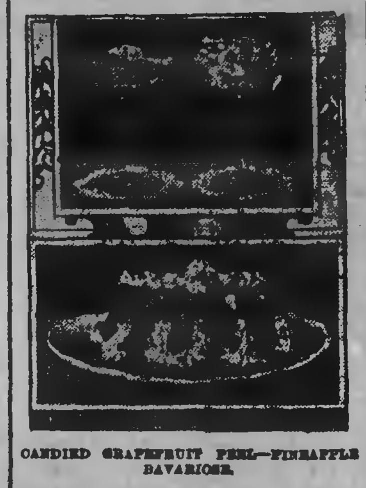
"I called up my wife on the long distance telephone last night and told her why I had not returned. I gave her a perfectly good excuse. And now I can't remember what it was!"—Popular Magazine.

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

Dainties That Are Grateful In Warm Weather.

The materials needed for pineapple bavariose are a can of sliced pineapple or a half can of sliced and a half can of grated pineapple, one-third package of gelatin, one-third cup of cold water, the juice of half a lemon, two-thirds cup (scant) of sugar, two cups of double cream, one dozen pistachio nuts and two dozen candied or maraschino cherries, says Table Talk.

Split the slices of pineapple, then cut each in halves and use to line the bottom and sides of a mold holding five cups. Soften the gelatin in the cold water, dissolve in one cup of hot pineapple (either the grated or the sliced made fine and mixed with the sirup in the can), add the sugar and lemon juice and stir over ice water until beginning to set, then add half the cherries and nuts, chopped, and fold in one cup and a half of the cream, beaten solid. Turn into the lined mold. When cold and set unmold and decorate with the rest of the cream, beaten solid, and sprinkle with the rest of the chopped cherries and nuts.



CANDIED GRAPEFRUIT PEEL—PINEAPPLE BAVARIOSE.

Candied Grapefruit Peel.

Wash the outside of the grapefruit, cut the fruit in halves and remove the pulp in the usual manner to serve in glass cups. Cut the skin in halves again and pull off all the membrane without disturbing the white part of the rind. Cut the rind in strips with scissors. The strips should be less than half an inch wide. Weigh the prepared peel. Take enough cold water to cover the peel. To two quarts add one-fourth cup (scant measure) of salt; pour this over the peel and let stand twenty-four hours. Drain, rinse in cold water and set to cook in a fresh supply of water, drain and renew the water. Let cook from four to six hours, or until the peel is very tender. Take the weight of the peel in sugar and half the weight in water. The water in which the peel was cooked may be used if not to salt. Boil to a sirup, add the peel and let simmer until the sirup is almost absorbed. Set aside to cool in the sirup; reheat a little, remove with a silver fork to a plate of granulated sugar, roll in the sugar and drop on a piece of table oilcloth. Orange peel may be prepared in the same manner.

Vegetable Values.

Spinach, containing as it does a large amount of iron, can scarcely be ignored as a valuable spring vegetable dish.

Rhubarb is rich in oxalic acid, which does much to tone the system.

Onions contain much nutrition, but are most valued for their pungent oil, which is rich in sulphur.

Asparagus, cabbage, cauliflower and celery are chiefly valued for their mineral salts and for the bulk, variety and relish they give to the diet.

Cabbage contains a great deal of sulphur and for this reason frequently causes flatulence. Cauliflower, which is of the same family, is more easily digested.

Celery is said to be more digestible cooked than raw.

Beets, carrots and parsnips all contain a large percentage of sugar. Carrots and parsnips when young and tender are very nutritious.

This Should Be Considered.

Nobody has as yet succeeded in suggesting a way in which boys who become dissatisfied with their fathers may work the recall.—Chicago Record-Herald.

"No; at the beginning."—Judge.

Accident Insurance

Following the Titanic Disaster no one will think of travelling without first taking out an Accident Policy.

It is interesting to know that practically all the Canadians who lost their lives through the Titanic wreck carried Accident Insurance. The average amount to be paid by Accident Companies alone, is over $30,000 for each Canadian lost.

The Double Indemnity and Bonus feature of The Dominion of Canada and General Accident Assurance Company policies are worthy of investigation before placing your Insurance.

THE SCIENCE OF BATTING

Why It Is That Even the Best Ball Players Cannot Be Relied On in Emergencies for the Much Needed Home Run

BY JOHN B. FOSTER.

SOME years ago, before there was so much talk about "inside baseball," which, be it interpolated, has become the most abused "stalking horse" that ever took the track for the national game, it was common on rainy days to seek baseball players of prominence, particularly managers who had been at the head of teams which had won baseball championships, and gravely ask them whether they thought that a team composed of "eight three-ply fielders and a tip top pitcher could beat a team composed of eight star batters and an ordinary pitcher."

Once this problem was put to Anson. They did not call him the "grand old man" in those days. He was largely and widely referred to as "Baby" Anson, and so called because he could outkick any manager who ever lived, and did.

Anson snorted when he heard the question. He usually did snort, more or less, when anything came up for discussion in regard to batting. The reason therefor was that Anson was one of the best batters who ever lived. He boasted that all pitchers looked alike to him. Furthermore, they did. Now and then one would fool him for the moment. All are likely to do that to all batters on some occasions, but in the long run Anson would drive a shaft of fear into the hearts of pitchers who opposed him. Rusie was about as complete a puzzle as any to the Chicago chieftain, but Anson was beginning to see the leaves fall in the autumn of his career when Rusie was at his best.

Anson said there was nothing to it, that any eight batters who, comparatively speaking, could hit the ball as well as he could beat any team of star fielders and a star pitcher, all of them being chosen more for their merit as fielders and a pitcher than as batters. A pitcher never is expected to bat much, anyhow, so the pitcher did not figure on either team, except that the fielders were to have a Rusie, or somebody akin to him.

The foregoing has been leading directly into the study of batting, which is one of the most fascinating studies of the national game.

Albert G. Spalding, who was the Mathewson of his day (and he did not depend upon a curve ball, but pitched old fashioned tosses to the batter), in an eloquent address to the schoolboys of New York, likened baseball to war.

Attack and Defense.

Now, Mr. Spalding did not intend to convey the notion that the national pastime is war in the sense of deadly strife between human beings. That's all nonsense, even if somebody did take it seriously enough to believe that the greatest pitcher of his day was teaching doctrine hostile to the peace treaties. What he wished to express was that baseball resembled war, because there is an attack and a defence, and a purpose for both attack and defence, for the intent is to win.

Why is it that a hulking big ball player six feet high and proportionately broad of beam can bat the ball successfully in one-third of the attempts that he makes to do so, while a little chunk of a man seldom seems able to hit out of the reach of a fielder?

Reverse the glass. Why is it that a little chunk of a man can make base hits in one-third of his attempts in professional games while a big six footer, who could lift a sugar barrel to the main deck of a truck, is unable to make more than one base hit in a fortnight?

Offhand the ball player, who never looks beyond the mere effect of cause, solves the question to his satisfaction by agreeing with anybody with whom he happens to discuss the subject, that one is a "natural hitter" and the other is not.

But why should one be a natural batter and the other not? That question has resulted in more argument, pro and con, than would fill an encyclopedia, to say nothing of the solicitous advice which has been proffered to the players who are not so wonderfully clean batters that they receive an ovation every time they appear through the gate between the club house and the playing field.

When batting is reduced by analysis to its "component principles," as the professor in chemistry would say, it is found to be made up of three basic elements. First, the sight; second, activity of mental force; third, the swing.

All three of these are matched against the mental cunning and the muscular arm of an athletic young man, who is trying to deceive the batter by throwing to him, to the best of his judgment and with the most of his skill, a round missile, which must not be less than nine inches or more than nine inches and a quarter in circumference.

With the "whole world for a background," as "Pat" Tebeau once put it, referring to the perspective facing the batter, the latter must try to meet at the right moment, on the right spot and with the right force, a ball which is about three inches in diameter. If he fails he will never be a second "Dan" Brouthers.

He may have a "good eye," but the eye will amount to nothing if he is slow or cowardly about deciding when to swing, and he may have a "good eye" and splendid judicial capacity, but be so awkward that the first two attributes are nullified because he is shoulder bound, cramped in the elbows, or prone to strike at the ball like a man flailing wheat, instead of attempting to hit it on the centre.

The point of contact between the circumference of a baseball and the side of a cylindrical baseball bat, when both are side by side in rest, roughly speaking, is about equal to the size of a silver dime. That is not the accurate measurement, but it is near enough, and the comparison is familiar enough to make clear to the reader something of the quality of skill which is demanded from the batter. When the bat meets the ball fairly as the striker swings with it the point of contact increases to varying dimensions, for the ball is elastic, and the side on which it is struck by the bat flattens to a degree corresponding with the force of the blow. Very likely the wooden fibre of the bat also gives slightly when speedy pitching is being faced, but as one may readily understand not in such proportion as the ball which is made of yarn and rubber.

"Baker Group" of Games.

No one ever hears much of the world's series between the Giants and the Athletics, that splendidly played succession of games in 1911, without hearing Baker. If each world's series were to be named for the player who had become most prominent in it the games of last autumn assuredly would go into history as the "Baker group," exactly as the first world's series under the Brush rules would go into history as the "Mathewson group."

As it happened, the New York pitcher who made the first series the sensation of American baseball circles because he assisted largely in preventing the Athletics from making a single run faced the man who made the last series famous because he batted two home runs, and one of those home runs was made against Mathewson in the most important game of the six which were played.

With twenty-five men out and the Giants in the lead, Baker walked to the plate and a strike was called against him. Twenty-five-twenty-sevenths of the game had been decided in New York's favor. What were the odds that Baker would make a home run and tie the score?

Quite a problem in figures, isn't it? And as speculation goes most folks would have considered a spectator as laboring with a species of mental disturbance had he shown a disposition to wager 1 to 50 that Baker would make a home run.

Baker made the home run and tied the score. What logical chance did he really have, based on his record as a ball player? Eliminate the question of pitcher for the sake of less argument, as had he met the ball properly he would have been as likely to bat one pitcher successfully as another.

In the American League season of 1911 Baker went to bat 592 times. It is impossible to tell how many pitched balls were served to him in that time. Suppose, for the sake of illustration, that it be conceded the pitcher threw to him at least four balls every time that he took his turn at the plate. Five might be a better average, but this is only for the sake of demonstrating almost impossible odds, and four will do as well for illustration as five. On the basis of four for every time that he was at bat, the pitchers of the American League served Baker with 2,368 pitched balls in 1911. In that season he made nine home runs. It only takes one swing to make a home run, so that in every 263 1-9 balls which were pitched to Baker he made a home run.

Home Run Hits.

Take it another way. Eliminate the number of balls which were pitched to Baker and compute his average of home runs on the number of times which he was privileged to bat in his organization during the season. He was at bat 592 times to make a hit of some kind, as a base on balls is not considered to be a time at bat and is not included in that record. In the 592 opportunities in which he either batted the ball safely or not safely he made nine home runs, or one home run in about every sixty-sixth time at bat.

Yet he made two home runs two days in succession against odds of 263 to 1, by one way of reckoning, and 66 to 1 by another, and both are right if it be recalled that a time at bat is a collective term which defines how often the player had the right to go to bat plus bases on balls and sacrifice hits, which are not included in the "at bat" column. Were both of these to be included the odds would be increased, but what's the use? They are great enough as it is.

Combine the fact that a game which was twenty-five twenty-sevenths won by one team was tied by a 263 to 1 chance and an idea may be had of the uncertainty of the national pastime and the potent effect of a timely home run.

It seems like a needless question to ask a player how he came to make a home run, for all players will agree that home runs are not made to order, yet it was natural that, when home runs played such an important part in the "Baker series," as they did in 1911, the batter would be questioned to obtain any information which he might be supposed to possess.

"I picked out a ball which looked good to me as it came toward the plate," said Baker, "and I tried to meet it fairly and swing on it at the same time, with the natural movement of my arms. I knew that I had made a good hit, for the batter can sense the square impact of ball against bat through the wood. I did not know that I had made a home run either against Marquard or Mathewson until I took a second look, as I was running the bases, at the flying ball, heard the cheers of the crowd, and saw Morgan and Hartsell dancing on the coaching line. As I met the ball I could not tell whether it would fall safe somewhere or be caught by an outfielder. I just knew that I had hit it right, and I was sure by the way in which the ball 'gave' that I had hit it hard."

"Then you don't believe that home runs can be made offhand."

"I'd like to see the ball player who could do it. Say, he would be worth almost $1,000 every time he went to bat. That off hand business sounds like a fairy tale."

All professional ball players can be divided into three classes so far as relates to their ability to bat. The very best class is the "Order of the 300." It is a small and select society.

Possibly an explanation of the "300" will not come amiss to those who are not conversant with the technical terms of the national game. It is the briefest way of stating the average ability of a batter to hit the ball safely. Suppose that a batter obtains five times at bat in a game. He makes two base hits. To find his average possibility as a batsman 2 is divided by 5. The dividend is 4.

To find the average skill of a batter for the season all the base hits which he makes is divided by the total number of times at bat. For convenience sake the dividend is carried into three figures. If a batter made 150 base hits in 500 times at bat his average would be exactly 300. As baseball goes that would be considered excellent work on the part of the batsman.

The second grade of batters are those who bat between .275 and .300. The third grade are those who bat between .225 and .275. When batters drop below .225 they are not steady help to their fellow players unless they happen to be wonderfully expert fielders or very good pitchers. Pitchers never are expected to bat well, for some reason or another, and little attention is paid to whether they are skilful enough to accumulate the large percentage of .200 or be satisfied with a plain .150. Now and then there is a pitcher who can bat better than .300. Otis Crandall, of the Giants, is one of that type. Usually where a pitcher is as much of a success in the batting line as that he graduates from the pitching department into the fielding department, where his term of years is likely to be longer, even if he does not receive quite so much salary for two or three seasons of his career.

If a player is able to bat well enough to be among the aristocrats of the inner circle it does not need any theoretical proof to convince any one that he must combine accuracy of eyesight, quickness of decision and certainty of swing.

Suppose the player fails to bat that well? In which of the three qualities is he likely to be most deficient? Or, to put it in another way, what seems to be the greatest prevailing weakness on the part of batters?

For twenty years the writer has asked that question of the leading batters in the history of the game, and also of others who were not such wonderful batters, but were generally conceded to be the deepest thinkers. The list included "Cap" Anson, "Buck" Ewing, "Dan" Brouthers, George Gore, "Al" Dalrymple, champion batsman of the National League before some of the present generation of ball players were born; John Montgomery Ward, "Hans" Wagner, Fred Clarke, "Ty" Cobb, "Cupid" Childs, "Jess" Burkett, Oliver Tebeau, John J. McGraw, "Ned" Hanlon and Clarke Griffith, who judged the batter from both the standpoint of the pitcher and that of the manager, and most of them agree that it is "fatal indecision" which makes some players more indifferent batters than others.

"Almost all ball players have good eyesight, accurate eyesight, as that goes," said "Big Dan" Brouthers, who has made almost as many home runs in professional games as some pitchers have made base hits in their major league career. "A ball player without good eyesight could not last. Most of the players swing fairly well when they begin, and they swing better after they have played awhile. Their weakness is in picking them out." That's the ball player's way of saying that the batters are not quick enough and keen enough of judgment.

When a player stands at the plate facing a modern pitcher who is known to possess all of the skilful little side issues which go to make up good pitching in these days when pitching is a fine art compared to what it was when baseball was played on the commons, he has to conjecture whether he is to receive an outcurve, an inshoot, a drop, a jump ball, a slow one with a cross fire, a fast on the corner or a "spitter," if the pitcher makes use of that decidedly unsanitary form of athletic diversion.

"Buck" Ewing's Theory.

He has so few seconds to make up his mind what to do that the man with the stop watch, who is timing the work of the pitcher, barely snaps the watch to start it before he snaps it again to stop it. It is evident that if the mental processes of the batter do not work as rapidly as those of the pitcher, and that if they do, the batter is the unfortunate possessor of a mind which is vacillating and says "Oh, dear!" when he should either be taking a swing for a home run or stepping back and permitting the ball to pass by him, he is not apt to make rapid advances into the "Order of the 300."

"Buck" Ewing held the theory that every batter would have to be fooled at some time, but that he would not be so likely to be deceived all of the time if he trained himself to decide to bat the ball or to leave it alone when it was within ten feet of the plate. "I haven't got any use for those ball players who have made up their minds to swing at the ball before it leaves the pitcher's hand or just as it is about to leave it," said Ewing. [illegible]

MY MOST THRILLING EXPERIENCE IN THE AIR."

Noted Aviators Tell of Death Laden Moments in the Clouds and How They Escaped

A MONOPLANE, high in the air, was soaring toward the tall cliffs of Filey, on the north coast of England. It was pointed out to sea. Just as it reached the edge of the cliff the machine began to volplane. Down a steep slope six hundred feet long, the bottom of which was the beach, it swept. Those who watched it were filled with an instinctive alarm. The man in the machine was waiting too long before flattening out, before breaking the force of the fall. People cried out foolish warnings; waved their hands excitedly. There was a loud report, the noise of canvas ripping, of wires snapping, of wood splintering—the sound of destruction.

From beneath the broken mass of shapeless metal and battered wings they took the bodies of Hubert Oxley, an English aviator, and his passenger, a man named Weiss. It was said afterward by a man with a head for figures that the monoplane must have fallen at a velocity of 207 miles an hour and that it had a pressure of eighteen tons on its wings.

So much for the machine! Nothing was said about the men. What must have been their feelings when they dove over that cliff at Filey? What were their sensations, their thrills? No one will ever know.

But other aviators, still alive, have felt all the thrills that the air can give and can describe them. So here we have the stories, told by the aviators themselves — emotional Frenchmen, stolid Englishmen, dramatic Americans—the stories of Hamilton, Vedrines, Astley, Beaumont, Brookins, Valentine and Grahame-White. Also a woman, Miss Matilde Moisant, sister of John B. Moisant, who was killed at New Orleans; she tells of her thrills, that we may say wherein her experience and sensations differ from the men's.

By Charles K. Hamilton.

I BELIEVE—not speaking egotistically—that I have passed through more terrible experiences in the air than any man alive to-day. I've heard them say:—"Hamilton has more lives than a cat." I've read in the newspapers headlines that I was dying. I've broken so many machines that you'd have to use your toes as well as your fingers to count them. Obviously, from all this, certain thrilling moments that came in the clouds must remain in my mind, all of them accurate and vivid. It is of the more sensational of these that I shall tell you. First come out to Sacramento with me. There two years ago they held a big flying meet. All California was crazy about aviation. I was under contract to perform at this meet I speak of, and if my machine broke a world's record the promoters had agreed to pay me a good bonus. Being that I wanted the bonus, and my machine was built with an unusually powerful engine, I decided to try for the speed record.

After making two circuits of the course and getting the turns down right I suddenly opened wide my engine—got out all the power there was in it. The thundering and vibration that followed was terrific. I felt the machine shaking and swaying. It was a sensation of the wood and canvas being torn asunder at any moment—and me with it. Then from the rack of it all the tailpiece ripped from its joinings and shot off, dropping to the ground. Instantly I realized my position was perilous. It was like racing ninety miles an hour in an automobile to find suddenly that the steering wheel had become useless. Frantically I tugged at the levers of the front control and tried to steer with that. But it was no use. I felt myself reeling and plunging helplessly—a wild jamboree through the air. Then I heard an awful tearing and splintering all around me and the machine crumpled up like a thing of parchment. I saw the earth, dark and jagged, come hurtling up at me—became nauseated—knew nothing.

In the hospital they told me that I had fallen a hundred and fifty feet and that they had found me with the broken radiator across my back. I was badly scalded by boiling oil and some of the flesh of the legs peeled off when they took off my clothes.

But that was only one thrilling moment. I recall a day at Seattle when, with the promoters demanding fancy tricks to please the crowd, I flew over Lake Washington. The stunt that drew the applause was to swoop down to the water until the little rubber wheels of my machine just skimmed it and sent jets of silvery spray spurting from either side. I believe I was enjoying this as much as the crowds until a part gave and the machine flopped, diving into the water. I was caught in the wreckage and, to make my position more dangerous, a huge splinter jammed through the thick of my thigh. I knew I was a goner unless I freed myself from the tangle of wood and wire, and so, gathering my strength, I plunged clear of it into the water. I began to swim ashore, but becoming unconscious from the wound and the shock of it all, went down. Fortunately, a man who had put out in a rowboat to rescue me picked me up in time.

I could go on telling you of experience after experience and I don't know where I'd stop. There is one incident, however, that ought to go in. It happened at Phoenix, Ariz., and, although not injured in any way, every time I think of it I shudder involuntarily. I had begun an exhibition and was flying at about a hundred feet from the ground when my oil tank sprung a leak and burst into flames. Luckily I was flying into the wind at the time, and the flames were driven back from my head. They caught on the planes, however, and with the machine ablaze I made a sharp descent. My mechanicians quickly put out the blaze by throwing dirt and blankets over it. If the wind had been blowing the other way, however, when that oil tank exploded, the flames would have swept over me and they'd have thrown something over Charlie Hamilton where they found him on the ground."

So much for the dramatic Hamilton and the dramatic way he puts his experiences. Now let us listen to H. J. D. Astley, a somewhat stolid Englishman—not of the Sopwith or Grahame-White type.

By H. J. D. Astley.

SENSATIONS, adventures, thrills, and all that sort of thing are rather difficult to tell about. You see, a chap meets so many of them while flying that it's rather hard to pick out one and style it, as you have suggested, 'My most thrilling moment.' I recall an experience at the Brooklands Aerodrome, Weybridge, England, last April, however, that I believe is what you want—the 'hot stuff,' as you Americans put it.

At the time I was driving my Blériot. The air was rather puffy and I was descending, when at some three hundred feet from the ground my Blériot was caught by a gust. It heeled over on its left wing tip. One has to act rather swiftly in such an emergency, and I switched off my engine. This I knew would remove the propeller torque and let the machine dive so I could get it back on an even keel. I began to dive and everything was bully until I accidentally switched on the engine. Of course there was a tremendous jerk from the motor and it flung me out of my seat. It was fearfully confusing, for when I composed myself I found I was sitting on the fuselage, hanging on to the top rails with both hands and looking down at the seat I had just quitted.

I was exceedingly lucky in that my weight aft, shifting, forced the tail of the machine down. My sensations sitting there with the Blériot shooting down you can imagine. Of course I wished myself in my chambers or down in Surrey on a week end, and all that sort of thing. But the wind sang harshly in my ears and emphasized the need for sane action. When I had dropped to about one hundred feet from the ground the monoplane suddenly dropped her tail and shot upward for another two hundred feet and at an exceedingly steep angle. For all practical purposes the machine was a comet and I was riding it.

Then a plan came to me. It was dreadfully ticklish work, but I managed to claw my way forward until I could get hold of the control with one hand. This let me work the elevator and wing warping. The rudder lever, however, was out of reach. It had to be worked with the feet.

Looking down I saw the Sewage Farm, and concluding that was the softest part of Brooklands to hit I made a dive for it. I shoved the cloche hard forward and, hanging on to the frame with my other hand, managed to get up the tail. Then we bolted, with the engine running all out. I tell you the sensations of that drop were frightful—the rush of air, the pounding in my ears, the straining noises from the machine and all that. But fortunately everything held together and the controls operated properly. I managed to make a fair landing.

After that I refused to believe that any aviator who knows how to control his machine can be killed by any gust capsizing him in the air unless the machine itself goes wrong. I had a bally time of it, though—hot stuff, eh?

But in contrast is the most thrilling experience of Beaumont's career—Beaumont, the big, bearded Frenchman, quiet and ever smiling. His right name is Conneau and he's a lieutenant in the French navy. What he says is strikingly well told, with all the vividness of a well educated Frenchman's speech.

By Lieutenant Beaumont.

THE moments that to me are the most thrilling of my career came during the circuit of Britain—the race held over England, Scotland and Wales last winter. Always my countryman Vedrines was at my heels, so to speak, always coursing swiftly in relentless pursuit. He was an untiring Nemesis and the strain of his persistent fight to overtake me wore upon me terribly in that mad race. The maddest moments of it all came, though, when I was whirling toward Manchester. My engine was wrong nearly from the start. It would not "pull" as I wished; yet always I must be mounting and mounting to clear the great blue hills I could see in advance. But she must "pull." I said; "there is Vedrines." She must "pull," and we kept on. The mountains came. I was not fifty feet over their top. I thought I should touch.

I looked for a place to drop. No place, no place! All great slopes and big gray stones. How could I drop? No. My engine must "pull." On we went, and between the hills came the great valleys. In one I came across an air "pocket." Down and down I fell. It was not flying. It was falling. Down and down one hundred yards and more before I came to cool, still air again. It was terrible.

All the way over the mountains came the air "pockets." The sun was making them, and besides them were the cross currents made by the hills. At last I must come down. I had cleared the mountains. There was flat, smooth ground below at last, and I came down—and thanked God.

Next we come to Walter Brookins, who as a boy watched the Wrights experimenting at Dayton, and in later years went to them, just as he had said he would do, and demanded to be made an aviator. Enter Brookins.

By Walter Brookins.

DURING my career in aviation I have been picked up three times as dead. To-day I'm alive and well. This flying is the greatest poker game in the world. You may take a nasty spill one day, but if you're willing to take the chance to-morrow it's likely that you'll not spill again. Naturally, from the foregoing, you conclude that I've had more than my share of sensations in the skies—and you're right.

The first that comes to me happened at an exhibition meet. Two hundred feet above the ground I was doing circus stunts, performing figure eights and other dangerous manoeuvres. For a time all went well. Then as I was coming out of a turn I heard a wire snap. Startled, I turned and saw it was one of the warping wires. It curled back. For a second I imagined myself gone. But the instinct that I believe is a part of all we aviators came to my aid. It told me not to attempt to steer to the right or left, but to depend entirely on my front rudder. So I gave no thought to dodging objects to the right or left, only to passing over them. By working the elevating plane carefully I was able to clear everything that reared in my path. Once a tree blocked the way, but I managed to skim over it safely. And always I was gliding nearer and nearer and nearer the earth, sliding dangerously over all hazards. Finally, when ten feet from the ground, I shut off my motor. The impact of the fall was terrific. I heard the machine rip and rend. It collapsed about me. I feared death. Fortune was good to me that day, however, for I managed to scramble out unhurt.

At times, though, accidents will come that an aviator, no matter how quick witted he may be, is powerless to avoid. This recalls a smash-up I had during the trials for the Coupe Internationale d'Aviation race at Belmont Park. Gathering speed for the long swing above the pylons, I rounded the turn and hummed past the grandstand. Over my shoulders the engine was exploding deafeningly. From the awful swish of wind I knew the machine must be making seventy miles an hour. That this was dangerous business I knew also, for we were too near the ground. About to climb a hundred feet or so, I heard a sudden complaint from the motor. To my strained emotions at the time it sounded like a cough, a death rattle. Then the machine bolted suddenly and the next thing I knew I was reeling out of the tangle of wood and wire. A cloud of dust had risen and I stood there swaying and staring at the wreck. Then something told me to go back to it—queer thoughts come to a man at such times—and I did. I had not taken three steps, however, when my strength left me completely. I felt myself pitching forward and that's all I remember. In the hospital they told me that I had fallen with my face toward the machine. Later I heard that the newspapers had printed me dying. It was not until three months later, however, when the machine was overhauled at the factory that I learned what had caused this most terrifying moment. The inside of the engine had gone to pieces.

Yes, it's the greatest of poker games.

But it is to an excitable Frenchman, Vedrines, that we must turn for a most hazardous experience picturesquely told.

By Jules Vedrines.

MY most thrilling moment? What you ask of me is hard. We have so many it is difficult to choose. I think, though, that the time I chased Beaumont to Manchester in the circuit of Britain is what you request. That was an awful race. Beaumont was ahead and it was intolerable. I fancy that flying to Manchester I took chances I should have avoided. I only remember on that wild ride these things:—I was blanketed in clouds so that I could not see ten yards on either side of me, just hurtling through a damp gray nowhere, apt at any moment to go crashing to earth. Then I swept into a rainstorm—sharp rain that cut my face. It grew colder. The rain changed to hail, paining me more. Hailstones as big as your finger nails rattled off my machine with the sound of bullets spattering on a wall. Then the winds caught my car. I was pitched and tossed, rocked like a cockleshell, until I became sick—as sick as a dog—up there in the clouds. Then I landed or fell—I am not sure which—and people told me I was at St. Helens. Think of it, St. Helens! with Beaumont going further and further away toward Manchester!

Also another flyer, M. Valentine, takes the Circuit of Britain as the background for his dread moment in the sky.

By M. Valentine.

MY most dangerous moment of flying occurred after I had left Stirling in the circuit of Britain contest. It was one I can never forget. Never had death seemed so near. I had left the control at Stirling and had been flying a half hour when I was caught in a most violent rainstorm. It broke over Castlecary and was one of those beastly downpours that we get in that section of the island. So hard did it pour that a dark screen of rain fell on all sides of me, completely hiding the surrounding country. It confused me, almost blinded me. I began to miss familiar landmarks and finally lost my way.

Suddenly three or four fingerlike shapes burst through the fog, squarely in the path of my machine, gaunt gray things of destruction. For the moment I was terrified. My machine was rushing through the mist at terrific speed. It seemed as though I must surely be swept against these shapes, which now I know to be the chimneys of some big factory. Then, the first seconds of fear over, I swooped to the right and, with all the luck that ever came to a man, dodged them, the last chimney almost brushing the wing of my machine.

But it was only the beginning. Frightened at the devilishly close call I had had, I determined to land. Down through the gray drift I planed, hoping that a level field was at the bottom. Then I saw below me the flash of water—two ribbony strips—the Forth and the Clyde Canal. Down, down, I plunged, gathering speed with every foot. Finally, unbelievably lucky, I made out a field, and veering toward it swooped at a sharp angle. But I misjudged the angle and brought up against a wire fence. The shock almost stunned me, but the noise of breaking wood and wire bade me jump clear of the mess, and I did. Imagine my feelings, though, when, scrambling to my feet, I looked over the fence and saw the canal. If that fence hadn't stopped my descent I would have dropped into the water. Sometimes the thought of what might have happened is more disturbing than the actual experience, no matter how hazardous it may have been.

Claude Grahame-White, still another Englishman, next tells of what to him was the closest shave.

By Claude Grahame-White.

REALLY, you know, it's rather hard for a man to tell about his narrowest escape in flying. He doesn't like to think about it. You Americans seem to want a lot of thrills, however, so I suppose that I, too, must contribute.

Well, it was at Belmont Park. I had just finished a little exhibition in my Blériot and was coming down. It hadn't been any great effort and I was planing toward the ground, not giving a thought to danger. I was about to "flatten out," to raise the elevating planes so as to beat down easily with that birdlike landing, so essential, when a gust of air caught my machine head on. It was so unexpected that I didn't have a chance. The head was jammed down and the propeller caught in the ground. Then I felt the machine rising. To my horror it was upending, tail first, describing a slow arc through the air. By the time it had reached the perpendicular I knew my position to be perilous. The arc would be continued into a semi-circle, and the end of that must be a wrecked machine, with me strewn somewhere among the débris. So I crouched low in the car, huddled up in one end, filling as little space as possible. I figured my only chance was to take advantage of every bit of protection that the overturning machine might afford me. As I think of those moments of turning, turning, with the big Blériot mounting and descending in its arc of destruction, I wonder how I ever escaped. But I ducked my head, clung tightly to the sides of the car and awaited the crash. When it came my hands were torn loose and I was hurled out, buried under a shred of canvas. I was unhurt, however, and regained my feet quite easily.

To the officials of the meet who rushed toward me, with expressions that told how astounded they were to see me alive, I remember saying, "Nothing's the matter; only a flurry." And I believe I never heard anybody laugh so unnaturally as they.

So much for men who can recall their awful moments up there in the blue. And now, by way of contrast—if it be contrast—we may listen to a woman as she remembers her thrills.

By Miss M. Moisant.

DURING the short time I have been flying plenty of thrills but no accidents have been my fortune. To me these thrills are most fascinating. They are the zest, and the spirit that venturing into the air gives one. The most enjoyable of them is always clear in my mind. To begin with, down at the school at Mineola, we found it best to do most of our flying in the early morning. At that time of day the air was best suited to easy manoeuvring and there were no horrid, gaping crowds to give one the cold creeps. On the morning in question my mechanic made ready my machine at five o'clock. Yes, I admit it was rather an uncanny hour for a woman to get out of bed, but with aviation, everything is so different.

A heavy fog had blown in from the sea over night and I was advised to remain on the ground. The temptation of venturing up there beyond that grayish curtain was strong, so I started. Up, up, I went, and soon the mist hung about me like a heavy blanket. But it was delightful, so uncertain, not knowing what would be revealed when the fog parted. Finally a little instrument that we carry to register elevation, told me that I was three hundred feet off the ground. Then I saw that the fog was thickening and judged it about time to come down. I had glided about a hundred and fifty feet when, from somewhere below me, I heard the clattering of a propeller. It was another machine, and apt to crash into mine. Besides, I knew the danger of overturning that would come from being caught in its air wash. So up went my elevating planes and up went my machine. I tell you, though, I was badly scared until the sound of that other propeller had died away. In fact, it affected me so much that I remained up much longer than I had intended—giving that unseen machine every chance to get out of the way. Then getting up my nerve, I volplaned down and landed safely. It was fun, though, now that I think it all over.'

And these are some of the thrills to be encountered up there in the clouds—thrills portrayed as only those experiencing them can. They began, if we are to believe Babylonian lore, when Etana, on an eagle's back, flew to the sun god, up to the sky of the planets, and they'll continue until that day when the sorcery of engineering makes flying as commonplace as riding in a trolley car.

Let Us Laugh and Be Merry.

ABOVE the roar of the train the indignant citizen could be heard declaiming in no uncertain voice. In his hand he held a morning newspaper which on its front page told about another highway robbery—"a carnival of crime," the indignant one called it.

"Why don't they do something?" he almost shouted to his companion. "Here is Commissioner Waldo saying that things will be all right; another police official condemning the fixed post plan; former detectives telling what they could do with a nightstick if only they had a free hand. What we want is less talk and more action if life and property are to be safe in New York. It all reminds me of the small boy who went up to a man wearing a broad brimmed hat. 'Are you a Quaker, sir?' he asked. 'Yes, friend,' answered the Quaker. 'Are you a shaking Quaker?' persisted the boy, watching him carefully. 'Yea, verily, friend,' answered the Quaker. 'Well, then,' said the boy, 'do it!' "

IT was Billy Guard, of Buffalo, who told the story at the recent meeting of the tailors of the country. He was expatiating on the need in these hard times of being a good manager and possessing tact. Apropos of this he told the story of a woman who was a good manager.

Mrs. Skillet was never known to quarrel with her husband. She never contradicted him, and so they got along beautifully. One night Mr. Skillet came home from a political meeting rather the worse for wear. In the hall he kicked up a row and knocked a chair over and suddenly began to swear. His wife was aroused and she came to the head of the stairs.

"What's the matter, dear?" she asked.

"Matter—hic—hic," stammered Mr. Skillet. "Matter! There's two hat racks here and I dunno which one to hang my hat on."

"That's all right, dearie," said Mrs. Skillet sweetly. "You've got two hats, haven't you? Hang one on each rack and come to bed. You're awfully tired."

Thus it was Mrs. Skillet managed her husband and kept peace in the family.

MR. JOHN BARRETT, director of the Bureau of American Republics, is fond of telling of some of the queer effects that have come from the introduction into the Orient of certain public utilities. For instance, while Mr. Barrett was Minister to Bankok, Siam, an electric light plant was installed in that city, and soon after it got into working order all of the consumers of electric light were served with the following notice, printed on a post card:—

"Sir:—For the case that your electric light should fail, we beg to send you with this a return post card, which please send us at once when you find your light out. The company will then be most happy to send you another post card. Yours Truly, Manager Siam Electricity, limited."

MORE ELOQUENT THAN ARGUMENTS

A WORLD IMPORTANT EVOLUTION

Without doubt the most engrossing feature of modern history is the awakening of Asia—the continent of the great, almost innumerable yellow races.

On this continent lives about one-half of the world's population—they are now beginning to trade with other parts of the world.

The trade between the United States and Europe made New York the second largest city in the world—but Asia contains many times the population of Europe.

A few years ago Japan was regarded as but an unimportant nation in the world—now it is among the great powers, and progressing probably faster than any country of similar population.

But Japan has only about 50,000,000 people to China's 400,000,000—and now China is waking up, the United States Steel Trust is manufacturing steel there.

When China is fully developed what gigantic effects may it not have on the world, commercially and otherwise?

When the significance of this fact alone is considered, it does not seem so very wonderful after all if the C. P. R. established at Coquitlam the finest and largest railway terminal facilities on the American continent, and made it a city to rival Oakland, California, which bears about the same relation to San Francisco as Coquitlam will to Vancouver.

This great awakening of the Orient will of course, mean more to the Pacific Coast of North America than to any other part of the world except Asia itself, and it will mean more to the ports of the North Pacific Coast than those farther south, because the farther north you go the nearer you are to China.

These C. P. R. officials, the heads of other roads, manufacturers and others see all this—they are not going to wait, but they are acting now.

THE CHANGE IN COQUITLAM

There is nothing in the history of real estate in North America to compare with Coquitlam in the quickness of the change wrought there by man at the dictation of Nature in the last few months.

Only a few months ago Coquitlam was but a junction point—a smiling plain, surrounded by rivers and mountains, beautiful to behold, but giving no promise of anything else.

Now everything is changed—the Canadian Pacific has commenced work, other people are building houses, stores and other buildings, Coquitlam is becoming widely known all over Canada, the United States and Great Britain, and dozens of people have made small fortunes there in many cases out of only a few dollars.

Who can tell what the next few months will bring forth. Other railways besides the C. P. R. will undoubtedly come to Coquitlam—newspapers say at least five others, some of which will have terminals there.

One lumber mill has been built by the Brown-McKay Lumber Company and is now ready for operation—it will employ forty men at the start.

Houses are being erected in all directions.

The reason for the quick changes in Coquitlam is because the C. P. R. and a lot of other people are realizing that at Coquitlam there must be a city—economic conditions, not only in the Vancouver Metropolitan District, but in other parts of Canada and of the world demand it—here is a strategic site, the funnel of a continent, the neck of a great bottle.

If In Doubt, Read This

"Opportunities in Western Canada," a booklet published by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, third edition, page 146, says in part regarding Coquitlam:—

"Here the company has acquired a large tract of land, on which it will establish and maintain large yards, shops and terminal facilities."

We are ourselves building 25 houses in Coquitlam Townsite now; further announcement regarding our own building activity will be made in the course of a few days.

Surveyors are now busy on the route of the Industrial Railway to be built by ourselves at a cost of $30,000, to accommodate the industries which are about to locate in Coquitlam—applications for these industrial sites are coming in daily.

Remember practically all of the Terminal Townsite is now on the market—there will be no more, except a few industrial lots and areas.

"Nothing At Coquitlam Yet"

We have more than once heard the remark that Coquitlam hasn't even got the C. P. R. shops yet.

Some people would like to see thousands of men actually at work in the shops there before buying a lot.

But, dear reader, prices cannot remain as they are now—if all these things were at Coquitlam now, we would have long ago sold out all our property, which comprises the Terminal Townsite.

The other day we received a letter from a person who had bought a lot in Edmonton years ago for $60; he didn't think Edmonton would ever amount to much, so he sold his lot—now it is worth $60,000.

Some of the lots in the Terminal Townsite of Coquitlam will be worth about that much when some of these people decide to buy.

ACTUAL · PRESENT DEVELOPMENTS

Perhaps you have read in newspapers and elsewhere about the wonderful development and future promised for Coquitlam.

But you may have your doubts as to the reality of these things.

Only the fool will jump at any proposition without first applying his common sense.

Again, only the fool will hesitate when he has made certain as night is different to day that the proposition is good.

Here are a very few of the developments taking place at Coquitlam even as this is written. Remember all these things require the expenditure of real money. Deeds speak louder than words. Also money talks.

The C. P. R. has built bunkhouses to accommodate 1000 men, and are at present employing, about five hundred workmen laying tracks and sidings; they also have at work four large locomotives and four construction trains.

M. P. Cotton & Co., who have the contract for building the streets and clearing property, have now about two hundred men at work.

The United Canadian Lumber Company, which is erecting a mill on the Pitt River waterfrontage, has now about fifteen men framing the mill.

Several hotels, restaurants, offices, etc., are being erected, and dozens of houses are being rushed to completion.

The municipality of Coquitlam is now employing about one hundred men and twenty teams on the streets; they have also a rock crusher at work.

Approximately about three hundred men are working at Coquitlam building houses and on other projects besides the C. P. R.

Several industries are ready for actual operations, and others are building. One now ready is the Brown-McKay Company's new lumber mill, employing at the start forty men.

The contractors are excavating for the new roundhouse, which will be near the corner of Flint and Dewdney Roads, close to James Park. The first unit of twelve stalls will cost about $100,000 and eventually will have 48 stalls.

The sum and substance of these few actual developments at a place which is practically only six months old means that the men who know—the men who are putting their money into it—believe in Coquitlam; they are not waiting either, but are showing the faith that is in them with cold cash.

All these men and their money and everything else that comes to Coquitlam will work for you if you own some of it. You can own it pretty easily if you want to NOW.

BILINGUAL SCHOOLS WILL BE RIGIDLY REORGANIZED

Plan to Abolish French Instruction in the Schools Will Commence This Fall.

Toronto, June 15.—"That instruction in English shall begin at once upon a pupil entering school; and that the use of the French as the language of instruction and of communication shall cease with the end of the first form."

How the Government will handle the bilingual problem in the future was announced by Sir James Whitney yesterday. In his announcement it was shown that arrangements had been made for the reorganization of the English-French schools of the province and the enforcement of the law regarding the English language in these schools.

Beginning September of this year, the much criticized and inefficient English-French—so-called bilingual—schools will be no more. The Government has appointed six inspectors, three of whom are supervising inspectors, to look after these primary institutions of learning where young French-Canadians are to receive their first knowledge of the English tongue. The provisions which will be acted upon by the Government in regulating the schools were laid before the Legislature at the last session, following a report of Dr. Merchant. The Government's investigator worked throughout the province for fifteen months—Nov. 2, 1910, to Feb. 8, 1912—ferreting out facts regarding the system of teaching in the English-French schools. He visited 269 schools, where 538 teachers were engaged.

"On the whole the English-French schools are lacking in efficiency," said Dr. Merchant in his document which was revealed to the Legislature. "A large portion of the children in the community leave school to meet the demands of life with an inadequate equipment in education. There can be no doubt that the efficiency of the English-French schools is seriously lowered by the employment of such a large proportion of teachers holding certificates of the lower grades. The key of the solution of the problem can be found only in the closer connection of the English-French schools with the high school system of the province."

In his tour of inspection, Dr. Merchant found many weaknesses in the system of teaching and he pointed out where the fault lay. And upon his findings the Government has based its plan of reorganization according to the announcement of yesterday. Dr. Merchant found that there was a comparatively large number of teachers without certificates in the inspectorates of Russell, City of Ottawa, and Essex, and there were twenty teachers with less than a year's experience, two of whom were only drawing an annual salary of $150 each. He found that in 85 per cent. of the English-French schools the French language was principally used.

What the Government intends to do to remedy the problem is laid out in the following announcement by the Premier, showing the arrangements made for complete reorganization:

"These arrangements are embodied in a circular of instructions which applies to the coming school year from September, 1912, to June, 1913. This circular contains in detail the provisions laid before the Legislature at its last session by the Premier: that there shall be additional inspection, with supervising inspectors to see that the regulations are carried out; that state aid is conditional upon the employment of teachers capable of teaching the English language; that instruction in English shall begin at once upon a pupil entering school; and that the use of French as the language of instruction and of communication shall cease with the end of the first form."

"For purposes of inspection the English-French schools shall be in three divisions, the schools in each division being under a supervising inspector and an inspector. Each inspector shall pay at least 220 half-day visits each year to the schools in his division. The supervising inspectors shall control each school so far as the relative provision for English and French in the time-table is concerned. The three supervising inspectors are W. J. Summerby, public school inspector for Prescott and Russell; R. O. White, B.A., public school inspector, North Nipissing, and E. E. Ingall, B.A., public school inspector, North Hastings. The inspectors are L. E. O. Payment, M.A., now principal English-French Training School, Ottawa; V. H. Gaboury, inspector of English-French schools; H. St. Jacques, B.A., principal English-French Training School, Sturgeon Falls. All six speak both English and French. Each inspector will send copies of his report to the Minister and the school boards. The inspectors in each division shall frequently meet to confer regarding their work, and all supervising inspectors shall meet for conferences at times and places designated by the Minister.

"For the training of teachers for the English-French schools there shall be four model schools at Ottawa, Vankleek Hill, Sandwich and Sturgeon Falls. The principals of these schools will be C. H. Edwards, B.A., now principal of Napanee Model School; John Hartley, principal Clinton Model School; D. M. Eagle of the Windsor Collegiate Institute, and A. A. Jordan, B.A., principal Kingston Model School."

Heavy Loss of Cork by Fire.

Port Colborne, June 15.—One of the large warehouses of the Robinson Brothers' cork factory was completely destroyed by fire yesterday. It had only been recently filled with a large shipment which was totally destroyed. The loss on the contents was about $8,000, covered by insurance. The loss on the building is estimated at $1,000. The building was owned by Mr. McNeal and was also insured.

Importing Workers.

Montreal, June 15.—The local manufacturers who have been hit by the garment workers' strike are going to secure labor in England, according to the announcement made by one of the men yesterday. He said an advertisement inserted in an English paper had brought hundreds of applications and that a hundred hands would arrive in Montreal from Bradford and Leeds in two weeks.

Marriage Case Decision on Monday.

Ottawa, June 15.—Chief Justice Sir Charles Fitzpatrick announced yesterday morning that the Supreme Court would not hand down its answer to the questions submitted to it by the Government in the reference on the Lancaster marriage bill until Monday. It was anticipated that judgment would be handed down yesterday.

WRECKS ON CAN. PACIFIC

Fort William, June 15.—Four trainmen are reported fatally injured in a head-on collision of two freights on the Canadian Pacific Railway at Nepigon, fifty miles east of here, at 7 o'clock yesterday morning.

Doctors left here for the scene of the wreck. Telegraph poles were torn down and communication was cut off with the east for over twelve hours.

Late last night a report came over the wires saying that the wreck resulted from a head-on collision between a light engine and a freight. The names of the dead are given as follows:

A. Ross, engineer of light engine.

—— Burke, fireman of westbound freight.

Alex. McQuaig, engineer of westbound freight.

——Allen, brakeman.

Injured—D. Deegan.

The C.P.R. has given out no information, and as no trains have arrived yet and the dead and injured are all of Schreiber, little is known locally. It is reported that an inquest is to be held at Nepigon to-day. Last night four coffins were shipped to the scene of the collision.

Six Reported Dead.

Moosejaw, June 15.—A bad wreck occurred at Corana, near Pigeon Lake, sixteen miles west of Bredenburg, on Wynyard subdivision. The operator forgot to deliver the order, and freight and passenger trains collide. Two engineers, two firemen and two brakemen were killed and a dozen or more passengers injured. The trains are reported to have toppled over, one into deep gulch of lake on the south side, and the other over a high cliff on the north side.

IMPORTANT NOTICE FOR 24th FIELD BATTERY

Major Young, has received notice that the date of mobolizing at Peterboro of the 24th Field Battery, C.F.A., is Friday, June 21, at 2 p.m., and not June 22, as generally understood. The Battery will go to Peterborough for sixteen days camp by the C.P.R.

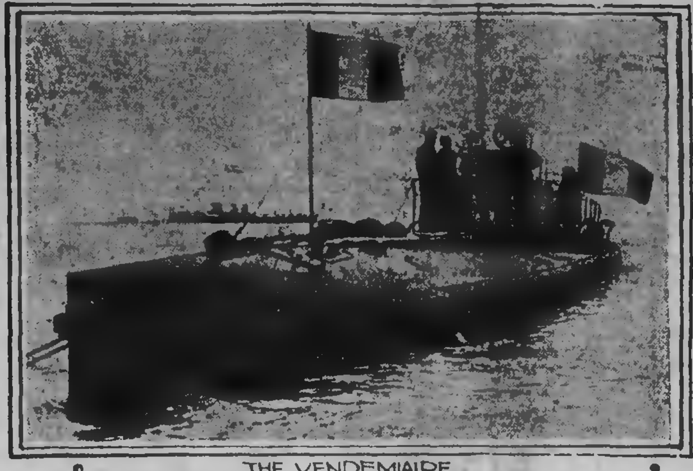
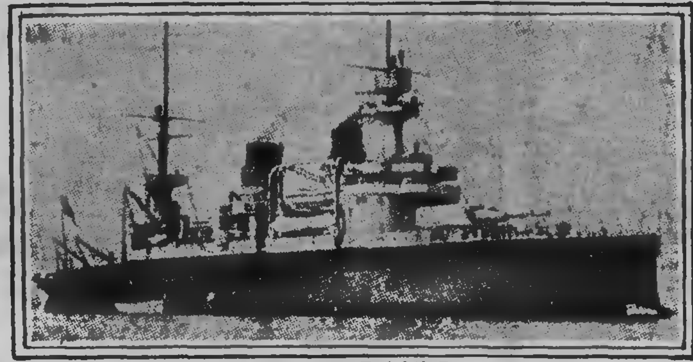
CREW PERISH WHEN SUBMARINE IS SUNK BY BATTLE SHIP.



THE VENDEMIAIRE



THE SAINT LOUIS.

France suffered another marine disaster and lost her fourth submarine when the Vendemiaire, in the course of mimic warfare off Cherbourg Peninsula, was crushed down by the battle ship Saint Louis and disappeared in 150 feet of water.

The submarine undoubtedly was ripped apart by the battle ship, and all hope has been abandoned of saving the crew.

An official statement issued by the Minister of Marine places the number of men aboard as twenty-three, including the commander, Lieutenant Prioul, and Ensign Audic. Although a board of inquiry was immediately appointed it is said no blame attaches to the Saint Louis.

ASQUITH IS ATTACKED AND HIS EPAULETTES WERE TORN

Handsomely-Dressed Suffragette Gains Entrance to a State Reception and Endeavors to Spoil the Gold Ornaments of His Uniform—Young Man Also Mishandles Premier But Is Thrown Out.

London, June 15.—While Premier Asquith was holding an official reception last evening in honor of the King's birthday, an elegantly attired suffragette, who had been announced as a guest, approached and tried to tear the epaulettes off the Premier's official coat. Mrs. Asquith tried to rescue her husband from the unwelcome attentions of the woman, and then an usher literally dragged the suffragette away from the Premier and ejected her from the building.

Mr. Asquith, Mrs. Asquith and Miss Asquith were receiving the guests at the foot of the stairway when the suffragist, who was about 30 years old, advanced and was duly announced. The Premier extended his hand, but, instead of taking it and proceeding, the woman stopped as if to speak to Mrs. Asquith and then placed both hands on the Premier's shoulders and began tugging violently at the epaulettes. The Premier shook her off, but still the woman persisted in her attack.

Meanwhile Mrs. Asquith came to her husband's aid and the usher seized the woman by the wrist and dragged her away. She stubbornly resisted, however, until she was ejected from the building.

A couple of minutes later a pale faced youth of about 20 years, was introduced to the Premier and took hold of Mr. Asquith's arms roughly and shouted something that was inaudible. He also was unceremoniously thrown out of the room.

According to some reports of the occurrence, the woman, whose name was not made public, beat Premier Asquith over the head with her fan.

The Ancient House of Nassau.

The succession of Princess Marie Adelaide to the grand duchy of Luxemburg marks the failure of the male line in the ancient house of Nassau after an existence of more than 1,000 years. The fact that six branches of the family were extant at the beginning of the last century made such an event improbable.

CANADA CEMENT COMPANY PURCHASE FOUR STEAMERS

Special to the Review.

Montreal, June 15.—As a result of the difficulty the Canada Cement Co. is experiencing in getting the product of its mills to the western provinces, it will purchase a fleet of four steamers of canal size, with a capacity for two thousand tons of cement. These ships will take cement west, and wheat east, from the head of the lakes to Port Colborne.

LONDON WIDOW LOSES SUIT BASED ON HUSBAND'S DEATH

Special to the Review.

London, June 15.—A decision was given yesterday against a widow who brought action under the Workmen's Compensation Act to recover damages for the death of her husband, who was an employee of the gas company. The husband was employed in removing coins from "Penny in Slot" gas meters and was poisoned by verdigris on the coins.

Gets Osgoode Hall Place.

Brantford, Ont., June 15.—Geo. H. Muirhead, of the firm of Brewster, Muirhead & Heyd, leaves here Monday to assume the duties of the office of Deputy Master of Titles at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. He has been a prominent member of Brantford's legal fraternity for twenty years.

Nineteen Were Injured.

Macon, Ga., June 15.—Nineteen persons were hurt, three seriously, when a Central of Georgia passenger train crashed into a string of freight cars on a curve at Everette, Ga., early yesterday morning. A public investigation of the wreck will begin at Fort Valley to-day.

WILL BUILD MORE SHIPS

London, June 15.—The Berliner Neueste Nachrichten, is regarded as the organ of Messrs. Krupp, the great German warship builders, who are at the right hand of the Kaiser and the German Government in the naval policy, publishes a remarkable article on England's menaced position in the Mediterranean. It proudly declares that the situation revealed by the Malta conference of Premier Asquith, Lord Kitchener and the Lords of the Admiralty is the first triumphant fruit of German naval policy.

"The underlying principle of that policy," the article continues, "is risk. The idea of the principle that Germany must be so strong at sea that no power would dare risk war with her has undergone its first great test at Malta admirably.

"Malta, as in the past, is the handwriting on the wall for England. It shows the limits of her strength, and indicates with convincing plainness what would happen if war with Germany should deprive her of half, or perhaps more of her fleet.

"Such a war would mean the definite forfeiture of her position in America, in the Far East, and in many parts of Europe. That would be the beginning of the end of British world supremacy.

"For us the Malta conference should be a warning steadfastly to maintain the development of our sea power along the lines just laid down by the German Navy League, no matter how heavy the burden."

The same journal, which is generally well informed as to the future plans for the expansion of the German army and navy, goes on to make the following significant statement:

"We learn from reliable quarters that the department of our military and naval organization is by no means to be considered as ended with the passage of the new army and navy bills."

The Pall Mall Gazette, commenting on this disclosure of German policy, says:

"The challenge of Germany has necessitated a shrinkage in British sea power, and caused the lessening of the mobility of the navy, but whether the armorplate patriots of Germany are wise in calling attention to the fact, is another matter. The reply of the British nation likely enough will be a mandate to the Admiralty to 'increase your margin'."

THE POLICE TO BE ARMED

Perth Amboy, N.J., June 15.—Three hundred and fifty men in fighting trim, armed with revolvers and repeating rifles and many rounds of soft-nosed bullets in their cartridge belts, were sworn in yesterday afternoon and last night as deputy sheriffs to quell the mob of strikers whose activities yesterday took the form of an attack on the big plant of the American Smelting & Refining Co.

Under the direction of Sheriff Bollschweller, the defence force took command of the roadway leading past the plant. Their orders were to keep the strikers moving and to shoot if necessary to do so. Within the high paling surrounding the works sixty guards with repeating rifles were stationed at vantage points to prevent a repetition of the rioting of yesterday when one man was killed and three wounded in an attempt to burn the fence and storm the plant.

Atop a high steel tank just inside the paling there were stationed yesterday afternoon gatling guns and many hundred rounds of ammunition. The weapons command the roadway and its complement of men have orders to use it if the rioters gain access to the works.

HOME RE-UNION ASSOCIATION AT OTTAWA

Ottawa, June 15.—The Imperial Home Re-union Association meeting last night in the Board of Trade rooms, decided to confine operations to Ottawa and immediate vicinity. If, however, an application is received from some points in Eastern Ontario it will be left to the discretion of the association whether it be considered or not.

The local association purpose adopting at first the plans of procedure followed by Toronto, differing in the respect that Toronto got subscriptions amounting to $25,000, while $10,000 was deemed sufficient for Ottawa. Printed agreements were on hand explaining that in case of the assessments not being collected from the emigrants the subscribers would become responsible, not, however, for sums exceeding $250 each.

A list of prominent business men interested in the work was drawn up, and each member of the association assigned a number of names to solicit the subscriptions from. Experience in Toronto and Winnipeg shows that the subscribers will never be called upon to pay the amounts. Before an application is considered the applicant has to pay one-fifth of the amount to be expended. The association advances the other four-fifths. The applicant repays the amount as circumstances permit. Mr. Cecil Bethune is secretary.

COL. ROOSEVELT IS ON HIS WAY TO THE BIG CONVENTION

Departure of Colonel for Chicago Elicits Sharp Manifestos From the Taft Leaders, Who Say He Is Violating Every Tradition by His Self-Seeking—They Declare His Aides Are In Desperate Fear of Defeat.

Chicago, June 15.—The announced departure of Theodore Roosevelt from New York for Chicago formed the main spring for the activities of the Taft bureau here yesterday. Taft leaders discussed the effect his arrival and his efforts are likely to have on the situation. Last night three statements were issued from the Taft headquarters, two by Director McKinley, and one by Wm. Barnes, jr., of New York.

Director McKinley declared that the Roosevelt managers here had sent for their chief as a last hope when they were convinced of impending defeat.

"Theodore Roosevelt, the last hope of his own failing candidacy for nomination for a third term as President," said the statement, "will, it is said, arrive in Chicago to-morrow. At a conference of the Roosevelt leaders Thursday a poll was taken which showed that Roosevelt was 78 votes short of a nomination. In view of the facts, it was determined to admit defeat to Mr. Roosevelt and to say to him that unless he could himself save the day, his defeat for renomination was an accomplished fact."

After comparing Roosevelt to Napoleon and the Roosevelt campaign for the nomination to the "Hundred Days," the statement concludes:

"Theodore Roosevelt has said that he did not intend to come to Chicago unless it was absolutely necessary for him to do so to prevent his own defeat. That defeat is at hand, and Mr. Roosevelt in violating all precedents in this country, as a self-seeking candidate, proposes to take charge of his own campaign for a renomination for a third term."

Soon afterward the Taft manager put out a statement by Wm. Barnes, jr., of New York, saying of the colonel's coming:

"Undignified as it is, and impotent as it will prove to be, its chief interest lies in its disclosure of that mania for power, over which Mr. Roosevelt has no control. Mr. Roosevelt not only will come to Chicago, but he will go to the convention hall itself and try to control that convention, demand to be heard in his own behalf, and if he is not so permitted to do, he will, nevertheless, continue his demonstrations under the influence of the delusion that the people whose voices he fancies he hears, are calling him to overturn all order. It is a sad and humiliating spectacle to the American people."

President Taft yesterday received six delegates at the hands of the Republican National committee in contests with the forces of Col. Roosevelt. To that number the committee added eight by the settlement of local fights between Taft rival delegations. Opposed to the day's gain of 14 by President Taft, was another empty sheet for Col. Roosevelt.

Roosevelt Dodges Crowd.

New York, June 15.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt started for Chicago late yesterday to lead the fight for his nomination at the Republican convention and will reach Chicago this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The colonel said that he was going in response to a unanimous demand from the Roosevelt delegates that he come "not as a candidate, but because, for the time being I stand as representing the principles for which the rank and file of the Republican party have overwhelmingly decided in the states where they have had an opportunity to express their views at primaries."

The colonel announced his decision shortly after midday. While he had been besieged with inquiries from newspapermen, politicians and others as to his intentions, he had been noncommittal up to that time. Col. Roosevelt disappointed a crowd of some 2,000 persons gathered at the Grand Central station to see him off by entering the trainshed from the 45th street side of the station and ascending to the track platform by a freight elevator, this unostentatious manner of departure having been arranged for him by the railroad company. The crowd stood by, however, until the train pulled out, although word was passed around of the manner in which the former President had succeeded in avoiding the rousing farewell which the enthusiastic crowd was apparently prepare to give him.

Will Province Get Tax?

Toronto, June 15.—Is the Province of Ontario entitled to one-half the tax on the late Miss Eliza Ann Gwynne's bequest of $75,000 to the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection? This question was submitted to Mr. Justice Middleton yesterday at Osgoode Hall, and his lordship reserved judgment.

The primary query is this: Is the organization an Ontario charity within the meaning of the statute?

If the answer is yes, the $75,000 is exempt from the tax.

Miss Gwynne, long a Toronto resident, and noted for her interest in dumb animals, left an estate of $200,000. Of this $25,000 was bequeathed to the local Humane Society

Turks Win Big Victory.

London, June 15.—The Turkish troops and their Arab allies won a big victory on Wednesday at Homs, according to a news agency correspondent in Tripoli, who says that large numbers of Italians were left dead on the field, while the Turkish casualties were only 50 killed and 150 wounded.

The battle lasted seven hours, when the Italians, after being routed, left several cannon and quantities of rifles in the hands of the victorious Turks.

ROAST FOR CAPT. LORD

London, June 15.—The Board of Trade inquiry into the Titanic disaster at its resumption yesterday was occupied with the ground to be covered in the speeches of counsel.

In the course of the discussion Lord Mersey, the presiding judge, intimated his regret that the certificate of Captain Lord of the Californian, which failed to attempt to go to the rescue of the passengers of the Titanic, was beyond his reach.

He said: "I do not suppose I have jurisdiction to direct that Captain Lord's certificate should be dealt with. If I take a view adverse to the conduct of the captain of the Californian all I can do is to express my opinion."

Sir Rufus Isaacs, the Attorney-General, assented, but asked Lord Mersey to express his views in regard to the evidence on the subject of the Californian.

Sir Rufus Isaacs also remarked that the conduct of Sir Cosmo and Lady Duff-Gordon was immaterial to the present inquiry, except as to the conduct of G. Symons, the Titanic lookout, who had charge of the lifeboat in which they were rescued, and the suggestion which appeared to lie beneath Fireman Charles Hendrickson's statement about bribery to prevent the lifeboat returning to the sinking ship.

Lord Mersey expressed the opinion that the question of J. Bruce Ismay's conduct was only material to the extent to which it might have influenced improperly Captain Smith of the Titanic.

Cemetery Descrated.

Tillsonburg, June 15.—Donald McLeod, former sexton of the Methodist Church at Delmer, is under arrest here on a charge of desecrating the cemetery. It was found Thursday that upwards of one hundred tombstones and monuments had been damaged. Some were overturned, and upon others force had been used to smash them. This is the second time such desecration has taken place On the previous occasion, about a year ago, the former sexton was charged with the offence, but the case was dismissed.

McLeod, who is about sixty years of age, was remanded by Magistrate Hare yesterday afternon for a week, and in the meantime he will be examined as to his sanity.

The arrest was made by Provincial Inspector Reburn, who was sent to the scene by the Attorney-General's Department in consequence of a message from Crown Attorney Ball of Woodstock giving particulars of the desecration.

Mr. Labouchere's Youth.

While undergoing his Little-go examinations at Cambridge, he noticed a number of dons prowling about in the hope of catching someone cheating; so he hastily scribbed a few words upon a sheet of paper, hid it away under his blotter, and ostentatiously referred to it from time to time with a great parade of looking furtively round to see that nobody was watching. The trap was not long in taking effect. Argus thunderingly inquired what he had got there.

But the examiner was inexorable. He insisted on looking under the blotter, and was rewarded by reading in a large, round hand the words:

"You may be very clever, but you can't eat coke."

Concerning Ghee.

Ghee is used in India as is butter in European countries, and, in fact, is butter, so prepared that it never grows stale, instances being known of its preservation for as long as 200 years.

In preparing ghee, butter is boiled until all the watery particles and curds have been thrown off by repeated skimmings. When the liquor is clear oil, it is poured into a vessel to cool. When cooled it is in granulated form, and will keep for years without becoming rancid or of bad odor. Ghee has been found in deserted castles, where it must have been left more than two centuries ago.

"FEEBLE STOMACH"

Causes Digestive Weakness and Poisons the Entire System.

"No one can have suffered more than I did with stomach trouble," writes Phil. E. Pascalar, well known at St. Andrews Corners. "My doctor told me my indigestion and sleeplessness were due to poisons in the blood. Certainly my condition was desperate, and it seemed from the despondent feelings that swept over me that I would lose my reason. I happened to read about Dr. Hamilton's Pills and bought five boxes from the druggist. Such body-cleansing pills I never used; they were mild and yet quite strong enough to drive all the humors out of the blood. My stomach gained strength rapidly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I improved so much that in eight weeks I could eat and digest all ordinary food. Depression and weariness passed away and I am, thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills, enjoying robust good health."

THE DUTY ON LUMBER

The Court of Exchequer has decided that "sized" American lumber, sawn on three sides and dressed on one, is subject to a duty of 25 per cent. Under the Laurier regime, this class of lumber was admitted free to the Canadian markets, but a tax has been imposed since the Borden administration came into office. An importer, in order to furnish a test case, refused to pay the duty on a car load of lumber, and the matter was carried into court with the above result.

According to the tariff law lumber dressed on one side only is entitled to free entry because further manufacturing work was required on it before it was fit for building purposes. So long as this condition prevailed no objection was made to the absence of duty. During recent years, however, the mill machinery in use both in the United States and Canada has been so improved that timber can be sawn so smoothly as to require very little additional dressing. The American imports, to which objection was made, arrived in this country ready for building purposes, and the competition was felt keenly by the British Columbia mill owners until the Borden Government came to their relief. The position of the government has now been upheld by the courts.

The Liberal press of the country is making the customary protest against the imposition of the duty which the courts declared to be legal. If it was found good policy to reduce the duty on cement, they ask, why should not that same policy apply in the case of lumber?

The cases, however, are not parallel. There is no shortage in the supply of lumber. British Columbia's forests contain the timber and British Columbia lumbermen, with millions invested in the business can meet all demands. Why is the leading industry of that province not entitled to the protection provided for it throughout Sir Wilfrid Laurier's term as premier, and which for several of the latter years of that regime was evaded by the Americans on a technicality? That the Laurier Government was wrong and that it was unjust to the British Columbia dealers is now established by the decision just handed down in the Court of Exchequer.

The British Columbia lumber business is an industry of vast importance. It affords lucrative employment to a small army of men throughout the entire year. Many of the capitalists of the country have large timber interests in the Pacific Province and are only waiting for some such assurance of protection as the court decision declares legal to make further investments. The machinery used is of the most modern type, and the mills are second to none on the continent. Thanks to a protective tariff all this expensive sawmill machinery is now manufactured in Canada. Toronto, Montreal and Hamilton each has a large American branch factory turning out supplies for the Canadian lumber trade. A Peterborough firm is employed in the same line of manufacturing, and British Columbia is one of its best markets.

This is the industry that the Liberal party exposed to the unfair competition of the American lumbermen, permitting a violation of the tariff law on a flimsy technicality.

THE STRUGGLE AT CHICAGO

If the Republican machine which is now working overtime in Chicago, does not explode from being pressed beyond the limit, there seems to be no earthly reason why President Taft should not be nominated by the convention next week. He has every part of that machine under control and it continues to produce a fresh batch of delegates for him every day.

When the convention is called to order by the chairman of the Republican Committee the first item on the program will be the invocation by some Chicago minister for in the Constitution of the United States no mention may be made of a Supreme Being, but all party conventions in that country are opened by prayer. Then the name of the committee's choice for the position of temporary chairman will be announced. In this case it looks as if the honor will go to Senator Root, for he is a Taft man and on the National Committee has a big majority of supporters. The temporary chairman will then proceed to deliver one of those flamboyant speeches for which American statemen are famous, but if he is wise in his day and generation his address will be of an impersonal nature dealing only with glittering generalities.

Then comes the first real duty of the chairman—the naming of three committees, one on credentials, one on resolutions and another on permanent organization and order of business. Next comes an adjournment to give the committees a chance to report.

The present outlook is that the work of these committees will be a matter of routine. The first will be padded to recommend the seating of the delegates already chosen by the national body and these delegates can be depended upon to vote in support of their own tenure of position. The resolutions, which will set forth in detail the platform upon which the Republicans will appeal to the country, are in all probability already drawn up. The committee on organization and order of business may recommend that the temporary chairman and secretary may be placed permanently but if a change is made another Taft man will be chosen in which case the convention will be called upon to endure another oratorical blast on the glorious achievements of the grand old party. Such details in the order of business as to whether the vice-president or the president shall first be nominated are likely to be arranged before the convention meets and the adoption of the reports of all three committees will in that case be a mere matter of form.

The feeling at Chicago is intense. Not since 1880 when the "Stalwarts" who supported Grant for a third term and the "Mugwumps" who followed Blaine fought together in a contest which had all the elements of a personal quarrel, has the situation of the Republican party been so critical. It stands to-day upon a mine that is liable to wreck an organization that has met with but two serious reverses in over half a century. Even the selection of a compromise candidate cannot entirely heal the breach which has split the Republicans into two warring factions of about equal numerical strength and fighting qualities. Taft has the machine but the followers of Roosevelt may wreck it yet.

PLOUGHING WITH DYNAMITE

In parts of Eastern Ontario, the subsoil is so hard that the fertility of the land is minimized for two reasons, one being that in a wet season the surplus water cannot escape by sinking below the surface. In a time of drought, the roots of plants cannot penetrate through the hardpan in search of moisture. A modern subsoil plough is in these cases as useless as it would be if the hardpan were solid rock.

The Department of Agriculture has, for some time, had the question of an efficient remedy under advisement. It is now likely that dynamite will be used to solve the difficulty, experiments along these lines having been successfully made in the United States.

The plan is, to drill into the ground with a crowbar a hole about three feet deep. To this is put a dynamite cartridge of about twenty per cent. power. When this is exploded, the soil is thoroughly loosened and the thoroughness of the work depends entirely upon how close to each other the holes are made. It has been estimated, after a fair trial, that the fertility of the soil is increased by at least fifty per cent, and of course this means a corresponding increase in the value of the land. Fruit growers in the Southern States are particularly partial to this new method of breaking up the soil.

If any farmers in Peterborough county have fields with impregnable subsoil, there is a less expensive as well as less dangerous remedy available. The cultivation of alfalfa will eventually accomplish all that is claimed for dynamite. Its roots will penetrate any variety of subsoil under the sun and nothing short of solid stone can stop their downward progress. In other counties of Ontario, has been proved that the cultivation of alfalfa will bring all but barren land to the highest point of fertility.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes: "For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes effected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect Kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headache, and in purifying the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

ROOSEVELT'S NEW HAT

A press dispatch informs the world that Col. Roosevelt has bought a new cowboy hat of the most approved fashion and that he will wear it to the Chicago Convention.

While a man's taste in headgear or any other article of attire, may be a matter between himself and his conscience, in this case it is significant as betraying the weakness of the wearer. It shows how much he depends upon the shouting of the mob, how fond he is of appealing to the gallery.

The new hat is purchased to please the Rough Riders who will gather in the Windy City to shout for their old leader. Small things have changed the course of a nation at critical times. A new hat may excite an already half crazed mob to riot and bloodshed.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The spectacle of a candidate for president personally plugging for the nomination at the convention is as disgraceful as it is unusual.

The first story of the prospective failure of the western wheat crop is about due but James J. Hill has forestalled the pessemists by propaesying a bumper yield.

Roosevelt men say Taft is 14 votes short of the required number. Taft men say he has 70 to spare. And the real truth of the matter is no one can tell anything about it until the first ballot is taken.

That he "blew in" his $25,000 allowance for travelling expenses on a recent trip and was obliged to borrow money from the newspaper men and detectives who accompanied him is the silliest charge yet made against President Taft. And it was made, too by a Congressman on the floor of Congress.

MONTREAL, June 14.—The demand for Manitoba spring wheat was rather stronger to-day, the bids for No. 4 wheat being ½d higher, but even at this advance exporters could not work business at a fair profit. There was a fair demand from local buyers for oats and sales were made at 50c, c.i.f., and 25,000 No. 3 Canadian western at 50¼c, c.i.f., to arrive. Cables on spring wheat flour were better and sales of 10,000 sacks low grades were made at 28s. The local trade is quiet but firm. Millfeed is steady with a fairly good demand for shorts. Butter is quiet, with an easier undertone, owing to increased supplies and the falling off in demand from the west. Cheese is weaker at a decline of ⅛c to ¼c per lb.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 53c to 53½c; do. No. 3, 50¾c to 51c; extra, No. 1 feed 51½c to 52c.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.80; seconds, $5.30; strong bakers', $5.10; winter patents, choice, $5.25 to $5.35; straight rollers, $4.80 to $4.90; do., bags, $2.30 to $2.40.

Millfeed—Bran, $22; shorts, $26 to $27; middlings, $28 to $30; mouillie, $30 to $34.

Cheese—Finest westerns, 13½c to 13⅝c; finest easterns, 13¼c to 13⅜c.

Butter—Choicest creamery, 24½c to 25c.

Potatoes—Per bag, car lots, $1.60 to $1.65.

Dressed Hogs—Abattoir killed, $12.25 to $12.50.

Pork—Heavy Canada short cut mess, barrels, 35 to 45 pieces, $26; short cut backs, barrels, 45 to 55 pieces, $25.50.

Liverpool Provisions.

LIVERPOOL, June 14.—Beef, extra India mess, 122s 6d; pork, prime mess, western, 95s; hams, short cut, 14 to 16 lbs., 58s 6d; bacon, Cumberland cut, 26 to 30 lbs., 56s; short ribs, 16 to 24 lbs., 58s 6d; clear bellies, 14 to 16 lbs., 56s; long clear middles, light, 28 to 34 lbs., 58s 6d; long clear middles, heavy, 35 to 40 lbs., 58s; short clear backs, 16 to 20 lbs., 53s 6d; shoulders, spare, 11 to 13 lbs., 47s 6d; lard, prime western, in tierces, 53s; American, refined, 55s; cheese, Canadian, finest white, new, 67s 6d; colored, new, 67s 6d.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

It was difficult to write legibly in the fast-moving, ill-lighted train, so he completed the letter on board the steamer, but did not hand it to Dale until after Calais was reached.

While the steamer was drawing up to her berth, he saw Count Marigny among the few passengers on deck. He had turned his back on the Frenchman at Charing Cross, but the imperturbable Count, noticing Dale in the half-light of dawn, believed that Medenham had brought a fellow-countryman as witness. He strolled up, and said affably:

"Is this gentleman your friend?"

"Yes," said Medenham, "though not quite in the sense that you mean He will accompany me to the hotel, and await my return there."

The Frenchman was evidently mystified; he smiled, but passed no other comment. Dale, who heard what was said, now wondered more than over what lay behind this sudden journey to France. He had already recognized Marigny as the owner of the Du Vallon, for he had seen him leaving the Metropole Hotel at Brighton not many days ago, and had the best of reasons for regarding him as Viscount Medenham's implacable enemy. Why, then, were these two crossing the Channel in company, going together to some hotel, and leaving him, Dale, to kick his heels in the small hours of the morning till it pleased them to pick him up again?

In justice to the loyal-hearted chauffeur, plunged quite unknowingly into the crisis of his life, it must be said that the notion of a duel did not even occur to his puzzled brain.

Nor was he given much time for speculation. A carriage awaited the trio at the quay. They carried no lugagge to entail a delay at the Customs, and they drove off at a rapid pace through the silent streets in a drenched downpour of rain. When they reached the Hotel de la Plage, neither Medenham nor the Frenchman alighted, but the former handed Dale a letter.

"I may be detained in France somewhat longer than I anticipated," he said in a matter-of-fact tone. "If that is so, and you have to return to England without me, hand this letter to the Marquis of Scarland. Take great care of it, and keep it in your possession until you are positively assured that I am unable to go with you."

These enigmatical instructions bothered their hearer far more than any of the strange proceedings of the night.

"How shall I know, my lord, whether I am to go back with you or not?" he asked.

"Oh, of course I shall make that quite clear," laughed Medenham. "At present, all you have to do is to wait here a little while."

His careless demeanor dispelled the first dim shadow of doubt that had arisen in Dale's mind. The man was no stranger on the Continent, having traveled with his employer over the length and breadth of France and Northern Italy; but the manner of this visit to the Hotel de la Plage at Calais was so perplexing that he assayed another question.

"When may I expect you, my lord?" he asked.

Medenham affected to consult his watch.

"Within an hour," he said; "perhaps a few minutes more. At any rate, you can arrange to catch the afternoon boat. Meanwhile, make yourself comfortable."

By this time, three men, whom he had never seen before, came out from the hotel. Apparently, they were fully prepared for the coming of the visitors from England. They greeted Count Marigny cordially, and were introduced to Medenham. Without more ado, two of them entered the vehicle; the third, hoisting an umbrella, climbed to the side of the driver, to whom no orders were given, and the cab rattled rapidly away over the paving-stones, leaving Dale to gaze disconsolately after it.

Then the vague suspicions in his mind awoke innto activity. For one thing, he had heard one of the strangers alluded to as "Monsieur le Docteur." For another, the newcomers carried a curious-looking parcel, or case, of an elongated shape that suggested unusual contents. Some trick of memory came to his aid. In an hotel at Lyons he had watched a valet packing just such an object with the remainder of his employer's luggage, and was told, on inquiry, that it contained foils. But why foils? . . . at four o'clock in the morning? . . in a country where men might still requite an outrage by an appeal to the law of the jungle?

Hastily drawing from breast pocket the letter intrusted to him, he examined the superscription. It was addressed simply to the Marquis of Scarland, and must surely be a document of immense significance, or the young Viscount would not have brought him all the way from London to act as messenger rather than intrust it to the post. Each instant Dale's ideas became clearer; each instant his heart throbbed with a deeper anxiety. At last, when the four-wheeler disappeared from sight round an angle of the rain-soaked boulevard, he yielded to impulse and ran into the hotel. French people are early risers, but the visitors to Calais that morning were astir at an hour when most of the hotel staff were still sound asleep. A night porter, however, was awaiting him at the entrance, and Dale forthwith engaged in a valiant struggle with the French language in the effort to ascertain, first, whether the man possessed a bicycle, and, secondly, whether he would lend it. The Frenchman, of course, broke in a voluble statement out of all proportion to the demand, but the production of a British sovereign seemed to interpret matters satisfactorily, because a bicycle was promptly produced from a shed in the rear of the building.

Dale handed the man the sovereign, jumped on the machine, and rode off rapidly in the direction taken by the cab. He had no difficulty in turning the corner round which it had vanished, but a little farther on he erred in thinking that it had gone straight ahead, since the driver had really turned to the right again in order to keep clear of the fortifications. Dale traveled at such a pace that the first long stretch of straight road opening up before his eyes convinced him of his blunder when no cab was in sight. He raced back, dismounted at the crossing, examined the road for wheel-marks, and soon was in the saddle again. He was destined to be thus bothered three times in all, but, taught wisdom by his initial mistake, he never passed a cross-road without searching for the recent tracks of wheels.

The rain helped him wherever the roadway was macadamized, but the paved routes militaires with which Calais abounds offered difficulties that caused many minutes of delay. At last, he found himself in the open country, scorching along a sand road that traversed the low dunes lying between the town of Calais and Cape Gris Nez. It was not easy to see far ahead owing to the rain and mist, and he had covered a mile or more beyond the last of the scattered villas and cottages which form the eastern suburb of the port, when he saw the elusive cab drawn up by the roadside. The horse was steaming as though it had been driven at a great pace, and the driver stood near, smoking a cigarette, and protecting himself from the persistent downpour by an umbrella.

Dale soon reached the man, and said breathlessly, in his slow French:

"Where are the gentlemen?"

The cabman, who had evidently been paid to hold his tongue, merely shrugged. Dale, breathing hard, laid a heavy hand on his shoulder, whereupon the other answered: "I don't know."

This, of course, was a lie, and the fact that it was a lie alarmed Dale quite as much as any of the sinister incidents which had already befallen. For one thing, there was no house into which five men could have gone. On each side of the road were bleak sandhills; to the right was the sea, gray and lowering beneath a leaden-hued sky that seemed to weep above a dead earth. Here, undoubtedly, was the cab, since Dale could swear to both horse and man. Where, then, was its occupants?

The Newest Peril.

A new danger threatens England, according to Sir William Ramsay. Speaking at the British Science Guild, he said that Great Britain's supply of nitro soda, which came from Chile and Peru and was an absolute necessity for the manufacture of explosives, might be cut off if Great Britain was involved in a war. The Government ought to be warned that it was living on the edge of a precipice.

Unless it did the same as the other European countries and made nitrates from the atmosphere, England would be without ammunition a few months after war broke out.

MRS. STEVENS RECOVERS

After Years of Suffering. Tells How Her Health Was Regained.

Waurika, Okla.—"I had female troubles for seven years, was all run down, and so nervous I could not do anything. The doctors treated me for different things but did me no good. I got so bad that I could not sleep day or night. While in this condition I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and began its use and wrote to you for special advice. In a short time I had regained my health and am now strong and well."—Mrs. SALLIE STEVENS, R.F.D., No. 2, Comanche, Okla.

Another Woman Recovers.

Newton, N.H.—"For five years I suffered from female weakness and dragging down pains. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored my health and the pains are gone."—Mrs. F. A. PEASLEE, R. F. D., Box 88.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

For the Children

A Pennsylvania Boy and His Queer Pet.

Children as a rule are interested in chickens, especially the wee "peeps" that have just come out of the shell. And what better fun for youngsters than the care of a flock? The crowing roosters, cackling hens and sprightly chicks are attractive, and the gathering of eggs from their own flock and taking them to mother is joy for any boy or girl. Poultry care is a nature study and for that reason is good for the young folks. It is good for any child who can do so to have a few for their very own. The boy in the picture has made a pet of a big Brahma hen.

Caps For the Doll.

When a doll's hair has been worn away around her forehead so that it is no longer pretty it is a good plan to put a narrow band of velvet or satin ribbon around the forehead to conceal the worn parts. The ends are fastened in the back with a little pin. The hair is puffed above this and made up in a kind of knot on the back of the head. If the doll's hair has been entirely spoiled she will have to wear caps. Just now it is very fashionable to have a number of these caps, some for morning and some for evening wear. The morning caps are called boudoir caps, and those meant for evening wear are called theater caps. The caps are made of fine white material, net or chiffon, and they are exactly like the caps that real people are now wearing. There is a full crown and a ruffle of lace around the face. Small flowers and little bows of ribbon are used to decorate the caps. They may also be made of gold brocade or gold gauze over a colored silk lining.

Yale Lock Tag.

This outdoor game for boys originated at the Yale University Summer School of Physical Training and was a favorite. The class wished the game to have a name that would suggest its birthplace, and so it became "Yale lock tag."

The players form in twos, with their arms locked, and scatter over the playground. One player is selected for runner and another for chaser. The chaser tries to tag the runner, who may save himself by locking arms with any one of a couple. This compels the third player to leave his partner and take the place of the runner.

To make the game most interesting there should be constant changes, and one player should not try to see how long he can run uncaught, but should lock arms with some one as soon as possible.

REV. J. E. FORD ELECTED HEAD OF CONFERENCE

Was Born in Peterborough and is an Able Preacher

Many of the residents of Peterboro will be pleased to hear of the elevation recently attained by Rev. Jas E. Ford, of Clinton, Ont., who has been elected president of the London Methodist Conference, by a large majority.

Rev. Mr. Ford was born in Peterborough, receiving his education here and was for some time in his earlier career connected with the Review Publishing Company, leaving newspaper work to prepare for the ministry. He is a brother of Dr. S. P. Ford of Norwood, Ont.

The election of Rev. J. E. Ford was a very popular one. He has been in London Conference through all his ministerial career of thirty seven years, and has now held every office in the gift of his fellow ministers. He has been chairman of several districts and is well known as one of the best legal minds in the conference. He has held pastorates in Lucknow, Essex, Parkhill Forest and Clinton, Ont.

Rev. Mr. Ford is described as an able pastor, a thoughtful preacher, and a man of fine executive powers.

GARBAGE SYSTEM OF HIS OWN; IT COST HIM $5

In police court this morning, the Sanitary Inspector charged George Jackson with dumping deleterious refuse matter on the dump at the foot of Charlotte street, near the National Hotel. The man was assessed $5 under the penalty provided for in the garbage by-law. He was allowed ten days in which to pay the amount.

Magistrate Dumble assured the Sanitary Inspector that he would back up with stiff fines, any other informations laid by the officer for similar offences, stating that the practice must stop.

Comfort & Health

Saves one ton in seven

Figure up your annual coal bill, divide it by seven, and you have the amount the Hecla Furnace will save you every year. ¶ The steel-ribbed fire-pot does it. Adding steel ribs to the fire-pot increases its radiating surface three times more than is possible by any other method. The steel-ribbed fire-pot heats the air quicker. It sends the heat through the registers instead of up the chimney. ¶ Examine the Hecla. Compare it with other Furnaces. ¶ You will find every feature that makes for convenience and ease of operation. But the Hecla is the only one that has the Steel-ribbed Fire-pot—the fire-pot which saves thousands of users one ton of coal in seven.

HECLA
FURNACE
No Gas or Dust

Burns wood as well as coal.

And this furnace cannot possibly leak gas or dust. The joints, usually bolted or cemented, are fused in the Hecla in a perfectly tight joint. Time and service cannot loosen the Fused Joint. The fusing welds the Hecla Radiator into one piece.

Our Booklet "Comfort & Health" should be in the hands of everyone who has a heating problem to solve. It will be sent free of charge.

REV. R. POGUE TO OPEN CHURCH

Ottawa, June 15.—Westminster Presbyterian church will be opened for service Sunday, June 23rd.

In their fourth lookout for a location, the followers of the Rev. Mr. Nicol selected as the site for their future home the northeast corner of Maclaren and Lyon streets. A three-house solid brick tenement stood on this place, so the plans were made in such a way that by tearing the flooring and partitions from within and altering the windows and approach to the building, it has been converted into an excellent place of worship, capable of holding six hundred worshippers.

The opening of the new Westminster church will be held a week from this Sunday, and the services conducted by the Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Peterborough.

The Flowing Fountain

There's a Fountain full of blessing,
  Which I slighted far too long;
Now I love to tell its wonders,
  Sound its fame in word and song.
I had tried the "empty cisterns,"
  But "no water" thence I drew:
Disappointment met the thirsty—
  There no thirst is quenched in you!

REFRAIN:
    There's a Fountain flowing free
    As the mountain stream, for thee!
      Wondrous Fountain!
      Blessed Fountain!
    It can fully satisfy!

There's a fullness found in JESUS,
  Countless millions find it true!
HE has satisfied our longing—
  HE can meet your craving too!
"Peace—that passeth understanding,"
  Joy—that seems forever new,
There's a title, sure, to Glory
  To be found in CHRIST by you!

All of earth is only transient,
  Hoarded riches oft take wings,
"For a season" are its "pleasures"—
  Oh then, seek for "better things"—
For the things that live forever:
  Make the choice you'll never rue!
Turn to CHRIST, the Living Fountain—
  Flowing, flowing still, for you!

GOOD PROGRAM BY JUNIOR AUXILIARY OF ST. JOHN'S

The second entertainment of St. John's Junior Auxiliary, as held last night in the school hall, was a big success. The attendance was large and the numbers were full of enjoyment. The program was:

Piano Duet—Phyllis and Gertie Hood.

Portrayal of famous nursery characters.

Clarionette and Cornet Solo—Otto and Paul Gliddon.

Violin Solo—Willie Common.

(b) Best Scrap Book—1, Gertie Hood; 2, Kathleen Cuffe.

(c) Attendance—100 per cent—1, Grace Conway; (certificates) 2, Stephaine Davidson; 3, Olive Edney; 4, Grace Meredith; 5, Edith Price, Burness Pidgeon.

Action Song—Daisy Sharman.

Drill—Red, White and Blue.

Song—Arthur Johnston.

Acrobats—Kenneth Brown, Lorne Conway, Cyril Flowers.

Song—Rex Evans.

Candle Song.

God Save the King.

Misses Phyllis Cumberland and Georgie Cuffe had charge of the well patronized candy booth, while the fancy booth was tended by Willa Cuffe and Gertie Hood.

Miss Edwina Palmer, who throughout the year has so successfully guided this branch of the Auxiliary to success, deserves the highest praise for her untiring efforts.

Under her able direction the various items of the program were very ably presented. Miss Flowers, who assisted Miss Palmer, supplied the accompaniments.

HOW CHURCH UNION WILL BE FELT IN PETERBOROUGH

"What effect will the experiment in church union, as decided upon by the General Assembly, have upon the local situation?" Is the question being asked by members of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches in Peterborough.

That it will not have any marked effect seems to be the opinion of leading divines in both churches. Even if organic union were put into force the result would be the same. Every Presbyterian and every Methodist church in this city is on a solid financial basis, the buildings are all that could be desired and the attendance is satisfactory. There is no chance here for the merging of two or more struggling congregations into one.

The form of union which it is proposed to test provides only for co-operation in the mission fields, in the educational and publication departments, in evangelization and in new congregations. At present each church may have a representative in a limited mission field where if the work does not conflict it at least overlaps and where the support for two or three missionaries is inadequate and the augmentation assistance from the parent churches a heavy expense. This is one case in which the new union will operate and the same is true in the other departments referred to.

In the matter of new congregations the result of union will be more marked. Two or three churches will no longer be established in a new town where there is barely room for one. It is here where co-operation is most needed and where it is to be most successfully applied according to the hopes of the friends of union.

The Presbyterians have gone thus far in the matter of union out of consideration for the strong minority that have opposed the change. They feared to risk a rupture in the church and the foundation of an independent branch, by going any further.

It is proposed that the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches get together and compile a hymn book that can be used in all three churches. This is the first step in the fusion of creeds and in the important question of discipline, the latter point being one on which the Presbyterian and Methodist churches differ somewhat widely.

This is a matter, however, which is not likely to come up for consideration under the present form of union.

As the Presbyterian and Congregational churches are essentially the same except in the matter of holding church property and in government the final merging of these two is a matter in which no difficulty is anticipated.

SMALL FIRE IN BOBCAYGEON MILLINERY STORE

Bobcaygeon Independent. — About one o'clock Thursday morning, the fire bell rang, and it was found that Mrs. Cain's store was on fire. Mrs. Cain's dog which was inside, awakened its mistress by barking, and she at once ran out and cried fire. Her screams were heard by Messrs. Pickering and Scarrett who were in Broad's restaurant. They both got fire extinguishers, and ran to the scene. The fire seemed to be under the stairway, leading to Dr. Fallis' dental rooms, and the extinguishers did great service. A bucket brigade was organized and the fire was under control when the engine commenced throwing water. The usual excitement prevailed before the water came as to where to play the nozzle first, but in a short time streams of water through window and hallway averted the danger. The origin of the fire is unknown. The building belongs to Mr. Capstick. Not much damage was done beyond but what the water did. A quantity of Mrs. Cains' millinery stock of hats and ribbons were badly destroyed by water and removal. Dr. Fallis' rooms were badly damaged by water and smoke. Engineer Henderson had the engine pumping with great force down by the lock opposite the Rookland. There being no flames to be seen the attendance was not as large as usual. Much sympathy is given to Mrs. Cain for losses.

PETES BEST BALL PLAYER TAKES THE BOX AGAIN AND BEATS LONDON TEAM

Jimmie Beard Produces the Goods—Trout had Three Hits One a Three Bagger and Two Runs—Cockney Fans Asked No Questions.

London, Ont., June 14.—Templin's Peterboroughs made their first appearance in London to-day, and succeeded in slamming Fursseдon to all corners of the lot for a 3 to 1 victory. Beard, the Pete's mound man, was at the same time unhittable, and just how Templin's aggregation came to acquire a reputation for easy beating London fans are unable to tell, after witnessing their initial performance at Tecumseh Park. No questions were asked as to what the result would be before the Macas, London having all the confidence, as the result rather shocked the followers of Bowmerman's Tecumsehs. Catcher Trout, of Peterborough, behaved like a player from high up, handling Beard well and contributing two runs and three hits, one of them a three-ply swat to the tabulated table.

SOUTH CENTRAL WON AT THE OVAL

Plenty of Runs in School League Baseball Contest

The South Centrals school team beat the Separate school boys to the tune of 17 to 13, at the final game played on the Nichols Oval yesterday afternoon. The South Centrals did not play a very steady game, they being off in fielding. The Separates on their play, deserved to win. The following is the South's line-up—

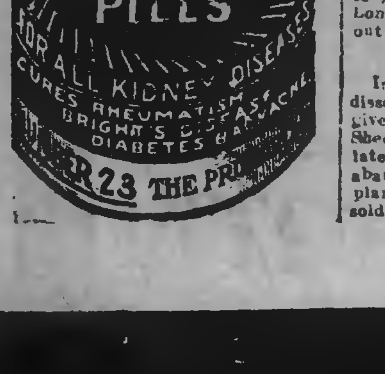
FOOTBALL

The C.G.E. champions and Bethany will play a Midland League Football game, at Brinton Meadows this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. The Electric Boys defeated Bethany at Louise by a 1-0 score.

Charles Bricket, aged 10, was drowned while in bathing at Brantford.



BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Says the St. Thomas Times: Umpire J. Ira Davis, who is here to officiate at the Brantford series, it is reported, will make his home in St. Thomas. He is a great lover of game chickens and is arranging to bring his pen here.

J. Ira has seen service in nearly every league in the country, and a few of the stories told about him show him to be a man with original ideas. On an occasion when the fans on the bleachers were having a great deal more to say about the umpiring than the official, J. Ira left his position on the diamond and walked over to the bleachers. He took a seat and then ordered the game to proceed, giving his decisions from the bleachers. When asked to explain, he said: "From the remarks being made I thought the fellows on the bleachers could see the plays better than I could, so I decided to try it." Needless to say the hint was not wasted.

Adamson and Dobbin have a ball team and would like to arrange games with other local nines.

"That Ottawa team is over-rated" says George Needham, the Guelph manager. "They will finish about fifth or sixth." Up West they seem to think that Hamilton, Brantford London and St. Thomas will fight it out for the Canadian pennant.

In the U.S. Government suit to dissolve the steel trust evidence was given to show how the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co., had assimilated 121 plants, 33 of which had been abandoned, 50 others removed to other plants, "16 used as shares," and 12 sold.

To Explore Crocker Land.

Macmillan and Borup, two young men who were Peary's lieutenants when he reached the pole, will head an expedition that is to start in July to explore Crocker Land, vast, vague region bordering the polar sea north of western America and eastern Siberia—the most northern land yet known to exist on the globe. The explorers plan to visit also the unknown mountains and glaciers of the interior of Greenland. The expenses of the expedition are to be borne jointly by the American Museum of Natural History and the American Geographical society. The men expect to be gone two years.

SIMULATED DEAFNESS.

Ingenious and Convincing Test That Confuses an Impostor.

In some circumstances it becomes important to criminal authorities and others to be able to distinguish positively between real and simulated deafness. Hitherto the tests have proved unsatisfactory, inasmuch as they could be cheated by a subject sufficiently astute.

Now, however, a Russian scientist has hit on a means as ingenious as it is convincing. It is based on the theory that sometimes the deaf person enjoys an advantage over the one in possession of all his faculties, and this is the manner of it:

The patient, wearing an overcoat, stands in front of the observer, but with his back turned. He is instructed to the effect that he should be able to distinguish the feeling of a brush passed down over his back and the feeling of a hand executing the same movement. This fact is illustrated by an experiment with each, the subject noting the difference in his sensations. Then the hand is rubbed down the subject's back, while at the same time the observer passes a brush down his own coat, which should be of material similar to that of the subject's. Next the brush is passed down the subject's back, while the hand is moved down the observer's coat. Thus the operations are reversed, and these alternations are continued for some time.

Soon the observer who is able to hear ceases to be able to tell which movement is going on on his back. His brain receives simultaneously an impression from his ears and one from his back. In consequence he confuses the two and is utterly at a loss.

The deaf man, however, is never deceived, for the simple reason that he is compelled to depend wholly on tactile sensation. His brain receives only the one impression, that of touch, and therefore he is easily able to distinguish precisely what is the cause of it, whether brush or thumb. This test has been carefully applied in France and found entirely satisfactory.—New York Tribune.

REVOLUTIONIZED GUNS

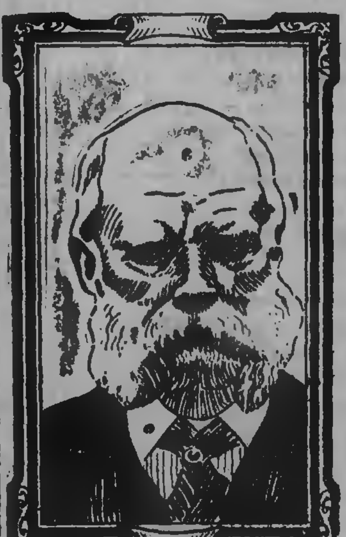
NOBLE SENT OLD-STYLED CANNON TO THE SCRAP HEAP.

Sir Andrew, Who Was at the Outset an Officer In the Royal Artillery, Is the Man Who Helped Armstrong to Perfect the Rifled Big Guns and To-day He Is the Greatest Authority on Explosives.

There have been two remarkable Nobles, in our day. One spelled his name "Nobel," and is dead; the other is Sir Andrew, hale and hearty in a brave old age. The curious thing is that the name of both stands for disruption, explosions, smash-up of ship, man, or mountain. Nobel was the chemist, who invented dynamite and left a fortune of two millions, the interest on which, some $300,000 a year, is divided into five prizes and awarded yearly to heroes of discovery, invention, literature, and humane endeavor. The other Noble is the greatest authority in the world on explosives, and is the man whose guns upon our Dreadnoughts enable us to sleep safe in our beds o' nights.

One of the most charming plays now running in London, Mr. Arnold Bennett's "Milestones," deals with three generations in which we see the passing from the old wooden walls to the first ships of iron, and then the disappearance of the iron ship in favor of the all-steel vessel. The scheme of the drama might be a chapter out of Sir Andrew's life, for his all but eighty years more than cover the period of the play, and he has been behind the scenes in two at least of the great changes. He built iron ships, and he has built and armored-gunned still more steel ships, but so progressive is his mind that he has never believed any of them perfect or final.

But it is with the armament rather than the battleships as a whole that his genius has been mainly engaged. Still, as he has for many years been chairman of the greatest battleship and gun-founding firm in the world, we may take it that he knows a little about battleships. At any rate, he built the Japanese navy which shattered the maritime power of Russia, and our little allies think that, next to Nelson, he is the greatest man that Great Britain has ever produced. They return thanks for victory to the spirits of their ancestors, but in their heart of hearts they fancy that Sir Andrew Noble had rather more to do with beating the Muscovite than had all the spooks of ancestral Japan.



SIR ANDREW NOBLE.

Sir Andrew comes from Greenock. His father was a naval captain, but the son entered the Royal Artillery at seventeen, and, in six years, without influence or private friendships, worked his way up to a captaincy. Genius and the army do not seem to fit. Perhaps the reason is that we possess a War Office which has a reputation to live down to. The War Office has been the great unintentional humorist of the Empire, and it used to display an unequalled gift for suppressing talent. But young Noble could not be suppressed. He had the mind of a chemist as well as of a soldier. He knew not only how to fire a gun, but how to make the stuff that discharged it, and how to make that said stuff better. Such a condition of knowledge is rather alarming in a young soldier, and he must have seriously stirred the War Office mind, for when they appointed a committee to consider the supercession of the old smooth-bore cannon, what must they do but appoint him, then only five and twenty, secretary of this important body.

Of course the tests applied made out the overwhelming superiority of the rifled cannon, and Armstrong, the inventor, went to young Noble and said, "Quit the Government service and throw in your lot with us." And Noble did.

The man who went to assist Lord Armstrong became the chairman of the company, and under his guidance and fine administrative ability it developed into the greatest private enterprise in the kingdom, with an industrial army of over 20,000 men, and premises extending over 110 acres. He has built guns and ships for the world, and holds decorations from nearly every civilized power. He was created a baronet ten years ago, and he holds the prize dearest to the scientist's heart, the gold medal of the Royal Society. He celebrated the jubilee of his association with Armstrong's some time ago, and marked the occasion by presenting $5,000 to the poor of Newcastle.—London Ideas.

A New Use For Money.

The blank space on German 100 mark notes is being made use of for advertising purposes by a German motorcar company. The concern has printed the design of an automobile on a number of them and an announcement to the effect that "whoever drives these cars saves many of these notes." Many people regarded the notes as spurious at first, and considerable excitement was caused in official circles, but since there is no law that forbids such treatment of the notes nothing could be done to restrain the company.

LISTOWELL, June 14.—At the cheese board here to-day ten factories boarded 2448 boxes of cheese, namely, 2270 white and 178 colored. The bidding started at 12 1-4c, and went up to 12 3-4c, but no sales were made. All bought up from 12 1.16c to 12 1-4c to 12 1-8c.

A Lad Electrocuted.

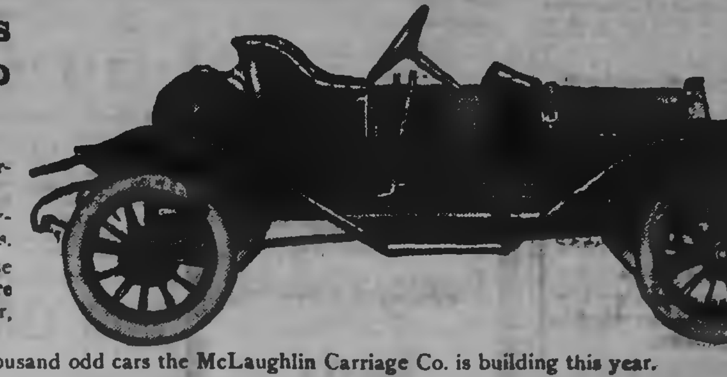
THE REVIEW

McLAUGHLIN-BUICK MOTOR CARS

Automobile purchasers may be divided into three classes:



Those to whom low price is a greater consideration than service ability.

Those to whom price is no obstacle in gratifying a taste for the exclusive and the luxurious.

Then there is the great middle class—those who are prepared to make only a moderate expenditure but at the same time demand a car with power, style, stamina, and beauty.

It is the latter who will purchase the two thousand odd cars the McLaughlin Carriage Co. is building this year.

The style and beauty can be judged from the many McLaughlin cars to be seen on the streets and in the McLaughlin showrooms.

The power plant and the stamina of the McLaughlin car as a whole is guaranteed by the stability and integrity of the house of McLaughlin. To appreciate what this means it must be known that the McLaughlin Carriage Co. embodies in every car forty-three years of experience.

The service of a McLaughlin car is assured by the immense factory at Oshawa and the branch houses and agencies in all the leading cities and towns in Canada.

If moderate price, power and beauty are considerations, your choice is logically the McLaughlin-Buick.

THE WORTH OF A CHILD.

Who can measure the worth of a girl
or a boy;
Who can say just the charge they Would make
For the treasure which brings them such comfort and joy.
Can you estimate what you would take?

Who can say what they think just a fair price would be
For that part of themselves with a soul
Which shall live here on earth till the soul is not free.
Where eternity's ages shall roll?

All you fathers and mothers whom
God has thus blest,
By the gift of a treasure so rare,
Should remember the dowry as heaven's bequest.
And account unto God for its care.

Grand Forks, N. Dak.

If you support the saloon with your ballot, to be consistent you ought to support it with your boy.

WHAT THE SALOON DOES.

Listen! On the first day of January a year ago, 500,000 young men of our nation entered the grog shop and on the 31st of December I will summon you people and ring the bell and raise the curtain and say to the breweries and saloons: "On the 1st of January I gave you 500,000 of the brains and muscle of our land and I want them back, and have come in the name of the home and church and school. Give me back what I gave you. March them out."

I count, and 165,000 have lost their appetites, and become muttering, blear-eyed, vomiting drunkards, and I say "What kind of a shell game are you lobsters giving me?"

What is that possession 3,000 miles long, with 125,000 hearses, for 125,000 men died drunkards in this land of the free and the home of the brave?

One man will leap in front of a train; another will jump into the river; another will plunge from a dock into the lake; another will throw up his hands and life will go out; another will cry "mother" and his life will go out like a burnt match.

I defy any man to show where the saloon has helped the factory, the church, the home, business, education manhood or womanhood. It hasn't a decent leg to stand upon.

There is just one prime reason why the saloon has not been knocked out of existence, and that is the false statement that the saloons are needed to help lighten taxes. To say that the wiping out of the saloon would increase taxation is a fool's fallacy. The saloon business has never paid, and it has cost fifty times more for the saloon than the revenue derived from it.

Listen! I say seventy-five per cent of the idiots come from intemperate parents, and eighty per cent of the paupers. Eighty-two per cent. of the crimes are committed by men under the influence of liquor. Thirty-four per cent of the adult criminals are whisky-made.

The Chicago Tribune kept track for ten years and found that 53,356 murders were committed by men under the influence of liquor.

PRISON TERM ON HIS TWENTY-NINTH TRIP

Montreal, June 15.—Twenty-nine trips to the Montreal jail since 1894 was the record produced before Thos Leonard when he appeared before Judge Lanctot for sentence on a charge of stealing silk dresses, and neckwear valued at $22, from the John Murphy Company.

Leonard pleaded for another chance. He said that he had managed to keep out of jail all winter, and that it was a shame to send him down now that the fine weather was here.

"Have you ever been to the penitentiary?" inquired the Court.

"No," replied the prisoner.

"Then I think you are about ripe for there now, and I will sentence you to two years," concluded the judge.

POWER DEVELOPMENT ON THE TRENT CANAL

What is Being Done to Utilize the Magnificent Noted Powers of the River Trent, and in This District.

Public attention is always interested in what is going forward in reference to the development of power in the Midland counties. There has been large improvement, immediately in the vicinity of and in Peterborough, notably the magnificent new dam and power house at Auburn. This fine installation is thoroughly up-to-date, and of the four large units provided for three are now in operation. The fourth is held in reserve for future needs.

The Electric News, of Toronto, has in its last issue a very full and able descriptive article dealing with the water power development in the Trent district, and from which the following extracts are taken:

The old plant at Trenton will shortly be torn down to make way for a new station of 3,000 kv.a. capacity located a short distance below the now dam. This new station will be erected by the Sidney Electric Power Company and will operate under 17 feet head. From this station power will be distributed in Trenton at 6,600 volts, 3 phase, and at 4,160 2,400 volts, four wire, three phase by the Trenton Electric and Water Co., to supply its lighting and power customers, and for the motion-driven pumps which supply spring water to the town waterworks system, which is owned and operated by the company. This station will operate in parallel with the power houses at dams Nos. 2 and No. 5, through the transforming station at Dam No. 2, so that the land in Trenton may be carried by any one of the three power houses, or else by power supplied over the 44,000 volt transmission lines from other generating stations on the Electric Power Company's system, thus assuring the power users in Trenton a continuous supply of power from four different sources.

At Dam No. 2, about one mile north of Dam No. 1, a generating station has been built by the Sidney Electric Power Company, and has been operated since August, 1911, supply power to Trenton, and also to the transforming station situated across the roadway.

The turbines consist of four main units, of 1,400 horse power each running at 120 r.p.m., and of one exciter unit of 140 horse power running at 240 r.p.m. They are of the vertical type, the main units having a double runner, and the exciter units a single runner. The weight of the rotating parts, both of turbine and generator, is carried by the thrust deck eight feet below the main floor, with the exception of the exciter unit, in which the exciter unit is provided with the thrust bearing. The thrust bearing on the main unit is a special feature of this machine. A heavy cast iron clamp is bolted and keyed to the turbine shaft, and the bearing plate is held to this clamp by dowels. This plate is of cast steel, ground and highly polished, and revolves on a self-aligning disk with a face of special hard Swedish babbit. The whole is encased in a water-cooled oil bath, the cooling water being supplied either from the forebay or from the pressure system.

The main generators are of 937 5 kv.a. capacity and are wound for 3 phase, 60 cycle, 6,600 volt operation at a normal speed of 120 r.p.m. They will carry 25 per cent. over load continuously, and are tested to stand a runaway speed of 70 per cent above normal for 15 minutes with a full field current. Each generator is connected to its turbine by means of a split sleevecoupling and is provided with two guide bearings, the weight of the rotating part being carried by the turbine thrust bearing.

About four miles up the river is dam, No. 5, where, at the present time a power house is under construction. This station will deliver its entire output to the transforming station over a double circuit 6,600 volt transmission line. This is situated just below the west end of the dam and is arranged somewhat differently to that at dam No. 2.

The building is to be of red pressed brick with a re-inforced concrete substructure and is 30 feet wide by 147 feet long inside dimensions. The switch board and switching equipments are all placed on a raised floor at one end of the building, with an erecting bay immediately in front on the main floor. The exciter bay and 4 generator bays complete the building.

The turbine equipment consists of 4 mains 1200 h.p. and 112 1-2 r.p.m. vertical double runner turbines, similar to those at dam No. 2. These are being supplied by the Canadian Boving Co., and installed by them. The exciter turbine is of 140 h.p. capacity and 225 r.p.m. and is on single runner type. It is being manufactured by the William Hamilton Co. of Peterborough.

The main generators are of 812.5 kv. a. capacity wound for 3 phase 60 cycle 1000 volt operation at 112 1-2 r.p.m. The turbine driven exciter is a vertical unit of 75 kw. capacity at 125 volts at 225 r.p.m. A motor driven exciter is also being supplied. This set will be supplied through a bank of step down transformers, consisting of three 75 kv.a. 6600-2400 volt 600 cycle single phase self cooling units. The generations of exciters are being furnished by the Kilmer Pullen & Burnham Co., and the Canadian General Electric are supplying the transformers. The construction work on this station is proceeding rapidly, and it is expected that it will be in operation within the next few weeks.

One 44,000 volt transmission line extends east from the transformer station crossing the river below the dam, No. 2. This line connects to a switch station at Belleville to the Seymour Power Company at Campbellford. Another line extends west from this same station, supplying Brighton, Colbourne and Cobourg, connecting at a switching station at Port Hope to Auburn Power Station at Peterboro. A third line will run north to connect with a line from Campbellford. It will be seen from the above that this will be one of the most important transformer stations on the system, since it will deliver 44,000 volt transmission lines. This is important on account of the promissing load around and in Trenton.

A map of the lines is shown. It indicates the relations of the numerous developments in the Trenton district to those at Campbellford, Peterborough and Lindsay. It also shows the large number of towns and cities by these lines, and indicates the high factor of safety assured for rendering continuous service to every point in the districts covered.

NOTHING DOING FOR MR. SCRIVER

Will Not be Paid by the Council for Work Done

At the Council meeting last night, Ald. Johnston asked if Mr. Scriver would be allowed anything for the work done by him under his contract for the removal of garbage.

The general voiced reply was, "not on your life."

Ald Duncan, chairman of the Property Committee, recently returned from a holiday trip, here explained that Mr. Scriver was incorrect in asserting before Council in his absence, that he had advised him to figure on the employment of two teams in figuring for the contract as City Scavenger. He (Ald. Duncan) had told him candidly, he had no idea as to what amount he should estimate his tender at, and in response to frequent importunities had replied that, although no authority on the subject, he thought three teams would be required anyway.

The Mayor—We are glad to hear that Ald. Duncan, because in your absence Scriver had asserted that you were responsible for the tender he put in.

WANT FREE PHONES.

Moved by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that the Chairman of the Property Committee discuss with the Manager of the Bell Telephone Co., the question of rates for phones for city officials.—Carried.

The opinion expressed by Council was that in view of the street concessions made the company, they might either give reduced rates or throw in a few phones free.

ANOTHER TELEPHONE.

Moved by Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that a telephone be installed in the Assessor's office. —Carried.

The members present were Mayor W. H. Bradburn, Aldermen Gillespie, Buller, Brown, Duncan, Duffus, Gordon, Johnston, and Graham.

A Trip to the Coast, via Canadian Pacific Railway

At this season of the year a great many are planning their summer vacation. What could be more delightful than a journey through the Canadian Rockies to Vancouver? A trip of this nature affords the traveller an opportunity of learning the wonderful resources and opportunities throughout Western Canada, besides enjoying the world's greatest scenery in the Canadian Rocky Mountains, where the Canadian Pacific have established palatial hotels which afford every possible comfort to the tourist.

The Canadian Pacific is the logical route to the West, affording the finest equipment and fastest train service—it is the only All-Canadian Route—no change of cars—all equipment is owned and operated by the C.P.R., affording the highest form of efficiency—dining car service up-to-date in every particular; also operating modern electric-lighted compartment library observation cars on transcontinental trains — only lines operating through standard and tourist sleeping cars to Winnipeg and Vancouver.

It would be to the advantage of any person contemplating a holiday trip of any description to consult nearest C.P.R. Agent for illustrated literature and full particulars, or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

THE ANNEXATION OF SCHOOL SITE TO THE CITY

A special meeting of the City Council was held last night to hear the request of the Board of Education that the Council take steps to annex to the city that portion of the Cox property in North Monaghan, immediately west of the Monaghan Road, and North of Weller street, purchased as a site on which to erect a new West City twelve room schools.

Dr. Morrison, chairman of the School Board's Building Committee, explained the situation to Council, as already published in these columns.

Mr. Johnston, representing the Toronto Savings and Loan Co., offered that his clients, who negotiated the deal with the School Board, would bear all cost of annexation proceedings.

The Council endorsed the School Board's action in selecting the best available site in West City for this new school, and on motion of Ald. Duncan, and Ald. Gillespie, the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board will be requested to sanction the annexation to Peterborough City of that portion of North Monaghan acquired for school purposes.

DAMAGES ASKED.

S. A. Mitchell, grocer, corner of Park and Sherbrooke streets, asked through his solicitor, Mr. A. E. Dixon, damages to the extent of $75 for the flooding of his cellar this spring by back water from the sewer. Mr. Mitchell complained that a quantity of his goods was thus destroyed. This was referred to the Legal Committee.

A by-law authorizing the execution of an agreement with A. B. Downer for the removal and disposal of garbage passed its several readings.

A despatch from Regina states that all the tenders for the Grand Trunk Pacific station there are expected to be in within the next 10 days when the contract will be let and work started immediately. The estimated cost is in the neighborhood of $175,000. A city ticket office is also being opened by the G. T. P.

YOUNG MEN OF UTOPIA BIBLE CLASS HELD BANQUET

A banquet that was particularly enjoyable, followed by a successful and very able toast list was supplied last evening by the young men who compose the Utopia Bible class of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. About forty or more partook of the tempting menu, provided by the ladies, who capably assisted in the management of the affair.

An extremely acceptable and popular toast list was carried out, with Mr. John Laing acting as toast-master and chairman. Mr. Laing proposed the toast to the King, which was responded to in the usual way by the hearty singing of "God Save the King."

The toast to the church was proposed by Mrs. Norman Brand, who dwelt on the importance of service in the church, which the young men had ample opportunity to partake in. This toast was responded to Mr. Richard Lees, in a very able manner.

The toast to the Sunday school was proposed by Mr. E Langford, responded to by Mr. J. I. Allen. Mr. Langford pointed out that in the missionary field, the missionary's first efforts are directed towards educating the children, thereby forming the nucleus of a Sunday school and later gradually weaning them in the church.

Mr. Allen in responding, outlined the relation in which a young man should stand toward the church. He mentioned several of the golden opportunities that could be grasped by young men which if faithfully lived up to would terminate in great good. Mr. Allen also stated that the assembly of young people present would probably form the foundation of the St. Andrew's church of the future.

Last but by no means least, was the toast to the ladies, proposed by "Dan" Lees and responded to by a vocal rendition of "For they are Jolly Good Fellows."

The banquetters were unable to secure the services of Rev. J. M. Glassford, of Toronto, as intended, so Rev. W. C. Riddiford, pastor of Park Street Baptist church, although called upon suddenly, was the main speaker of the evening. His subject was "Fools."

During the course of his address, he described the various kinds of fools, such as the doubting fool, the Bewitching Fool, the Absolute Fool, and the Happy Fool. The latter could be applied to the man who was happy in the love of Jesus Christ.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Riddiford at the close, moved by Grant Mowat, seconded by Geo. Reid.

The tables and the hall were artistically decorated for the occasion, presenting the orthodox appearance.

"God Save the King" brought the enjoyable affair to a conclusion.

GRAND WORK OF THE LADIES RECOGNIZED BY THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION

At a meeting of the Peterborough Health Association last night, in the offices of Mr J. W. Bennet, there were present, Mr W. H. Moore, K.C., President; Dr G. Stewart Cameron, Secretary; Mrs. Jas. Kendrey, Mrs. R. W Travers, Drs. Halliday and Neal, Judge Huycke, J. W. Bennet, E. C. MacLeod, W. G. Morrow.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, after which the President explained the object of the meeting as being to receive the report of the Treasurer on the Peterborough Summer Fair, held in the armories, by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Association, and to consider the securing of a qualified District Nurse. The following resolution was passed:

On motion made it is unanimously resolved by the Executive of the Peterborough Health Association, that recognizing the splendid success of the Fair lately held in the armories, the credit for which is wholly attributed to the earnest efforts and intensity of purpose of the Women's Auxiliary of the Health Association, there be recorded on the minutes an expression of the admiration and gratitude of this Association. When it became known that the Auxiliary was about to launch a Fair and that they had enlisted the sympathy and support of representative ladies of the city, it was believed that the object aimed at would in large measure be attained. It prospered beyond expectation, and was in truth and fact a triumph owing to the united harmony and the cordiality with which all were inspired in the good work; therefore the Association emphasises its appreciation of the efforts of the Auxiliary in what it has accomplished, and in placing to the credit of the Association the sum of nearly $3,500 which will enable it to carry forward the work it had in view when it was formed.

A committee composed of the President, Drs. Halliday and Neal, was appointed to make inquiries as to a qualified District Nurse, and to arrange the rules and regulations governing such nurse.

It is hopeful that perhaps another Fair will be held at some future date. It will be understood, that a large amount of money will be necessary to carry on the work as proposed by the Association.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Mary Jane Stiles

At the age of seventy-seven, Mrs Mary Jane Stiles, passed away last evening, at her home 692 Stewart st. She is survived by three sons and three daughters, who are John and Albert of Minneapolis, Minn., and Nathaniel of this city; Mrs. Robinson of Smith, and Mrs. Robinson of Toronto and Lucy at home.

The funeral will leave the residence on Stewart street at 12.45 to-morrow morning and proceed to the Omemee Cemetery, Rev. F. J. Sawers, officiating at the house, and Rev. Mr. Earle at the Omemee cemetery.

ST. VITUS DANCE IN YOUNG CHILDREN

St. Vitus dance is the commonest form of nervous trouble that afflicts young children, because of the great demand made on the body by growth and development, and there is an added strain caused by study. It is when these demands become so great that they impoverish the blood, and the nerves fail to receive their full supply of nourishment, that the nervous debility which leads to St. Vitus dance begins.

The remarkable success of Dr Williams' Pink Pills in curing St Vitus dance should lead parents to give this great blood-building medicine to their children at the first signs of the approach of the disease. Palor, listlessness, inattention, restlessness and irritability are all symptoms which early show that the blood and nerves are failing to meet the demand upon them. Here is proof of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to cure this trouble. Mrs. J. W. Towns, Oshawa, Ont., says—"At the age of eleven my daughter was attacked with St. Vitus dance, and despite all we did for her, the trouble grew rapidly worse. Soon she was scarcely able to walk, her body and limbs jerked and trembled so, and she was quite unable to feed herself. When she would lie down she would be unable to rise without assistance. As nothing was helping her I wrote a friend whose daughter has been similarly affected, and she advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which had cured her child. I at once got a supply of the Pills, and even the use of the first box seemed to show an improvement. By the time five boxes were used she was completely cured and has had no return of the trouble since." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FIRST CONCERT HEARD BY A LARGE CROWD

Braving the caterpillars and the rather chilly atmosphere, a large crowd enjoyed the first concert of the season, given by the 57th Regimental Band, in Victoria Park last night.

One very popular number was the vocal selection "Mary of Argyle" by Mr. W. McIlroy, to band accompaniment, Mr McIlroy being compelled to respond to an encore.

"Russian Folk Songs" and "The Chocolate Soldier" also received warm applause and altogether, the band's work was greatly appreciated.

Mr. Silcox, locating engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific, who is engaged in surveying a line from Watrous to the International boundary, has completed the preliminary survey to the Vermillion Hills about 50 miles south east of Swift Current which he expects to reach about the middle of the current month. It is understood that he has secured a good grade as far as he has gone and that the line will run through a thickly settled country which is at present badly in need of railway facilities.

SPOKE HER MIND FREELY.

Kathi Gave the German Crown Prince a Fine Tongue Lashing.

Munich has just lost a famous cafe much frequented by artists. Since the city is full of such establishments the disappearance of one of them would not call for notice, but in this case it follows the loss of a character known through all Germany, Kathi Kobus, the late proprietor.

Kathi Kobus came down from the Bavarian mountains to make her fortune in Munich, and she succeeded. Step by step she rose in the social scale until she found herself owner of a miniature cafe, to which her eccentricities and amusing conversation attracted many patrons.

One day the crown prince went there with some friends, strictly incognito. Kathi, who knew everything, knew that he was coming and also that he wished very particularly not to be recognized. When the prince arrived he began conversation with Kathi to draw out those idiosyncrasies of which he had heard so much.

He succeeded only too well. Kathi turned the conversation to Prussia and the Prussians. She informed him the country was beneath contempt and the people worse. She ransacked her vocabulary for terms of insult and "slanged" them up hill and down dale. The prince listened, overcome; but, being most anxious to preserve his incognito and, moreover, too amazed at such unfamiliar language to think of repartee, he could do little but sit and take what Kathi dealt him.

He did not linger long over the eccentricities of the proprietor, although he found them all they had been advertised. As for Kathi, it was always a source of immense satisfaction to her that she had spoken her Bavarian mind to the highest in the land.—Washington Star.

Reply Coupons.

The man who boasts that he never writes letters has been prodded into epistolary activity.

"It was a curious little square red stamp inclosed in a letter I received from England that drove me to it," he said. "The stamp was marked threepence. It was totally unlike any stamp or souvenir I had ever seen, and I didn't know what use to make of it. The postman was also nonplused, and only at the main postoffice was the riddle solved. It was a reply coupon. English stamps would have been no use for mailing a letter in New York, but the coupon could be exchanged for United States stamps. With a reminder like that thrust under one's very nose the most conscientious letter writer is bound to reply."—New York Times.

Fading Label to Stop Refilling.

Meditating over the non-refillable bottle problem, Archibald A. McDonald of New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, has hit upon a substitute that he believes will accomplish the same purpose. It is a label which fades on exposure to the light. The printing thereon vanishes entirely after a short time, when, of course, the bottle can be refilled with anything, but this cannot be palmed off as the original liquor. Mr. McDonald has just received a patent for his label.—New York World.

DOCTORS AFRAID TO OPERATE

Could Not Remove Stone From The Bladder. Gin Pills Enabled Him To Pass It.

JOLIETTE, P. Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone In The Bladder. He decided on an operation and was assisted by another doctor. They said the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush, and that they could not take it out.

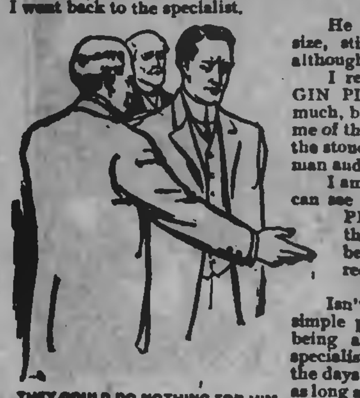
I returned home suffering greatly, and did not know what to do, but was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS. I bought a box and found relief from the pain at once. I took a second and third box of GIN PILLS after which I went back to the specialist.

He told me the calculus was reduced in size, still he could not relieve me of it, although he tried for two and a half hours.

I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS as they reduced the pain very much, but I did not expect they would relieve me of the stone, but to my great joy, I passed the stone on October 3rd, and am now a well man and very happy.

I am sending the stone to you so that you can see for yourself what a great work GIN PILLS did for me. GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did so much for me, I will recommend them all the rest of my life".

J. ALBERT LESSARD.



THEY COULD DO NOTHING FOR HIM

Isn't it wonderful? Just think of these simple pills, that even children can take, being able to perform what the greatest specialists in Canada could not do. Surely, the days of the miracle have not passed away, as long as we have Gin Pills. These wonderful pills dissolve stone in the bladder or kidneys because they are a natural solvent for uric acid, which causes calculus. If GIN PILLS are not sold in your neighborhood, send us 50c. for a box or $2.50 for 6 boxes. Sample free if you write us mentioning this paper. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Dept. B Toronto.

MEDAL FOR BURGESS

SPECIAL HONOR HAS BEEN PAID TO CHANNEL SWIMMER.

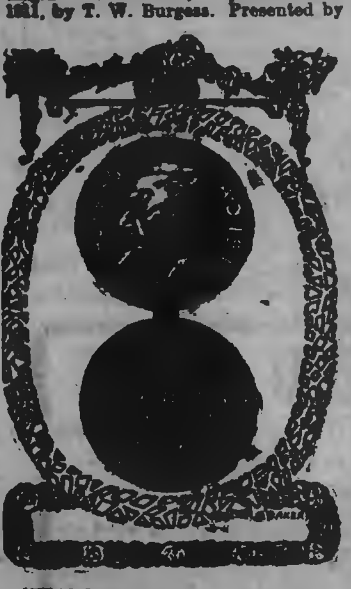
The Plucky Englishman Who After Repeated Trials Duplicated Captain Webb's Feat Has Been the Recipient of a Medal In Honor of His Victory — Bronze Replicas Go to Those Who Went In the Boat.

A medal has been struck to commemorate T. W. Burgess' successful emulation of Captain Webb's achievement of swimming the English channel. It has been designed by Mr. Doyle Jones, the sculptor of the Webb memorial at Dover, and bears upon obverse a splendid portrait of Burgess, obtained from special sittings, the words,

"Burgess, A.D., 1911."

On the reverse appears the inscription,

"To commemorate the swim from England to France, September 5-6, 1911, by T. W. Burgess. Presented by Alfred Jonas, Esq., Hon. Sec. Webb Memorial Fund."



MEDAL PRESENTED TO T. W. BURGESS.

One copy has been struck in oxydized silver and presented to Mr. Burgess, and replicas in bronze have been made for each of the occupants of the boat which accompanied him on his memorable swim. These have also been presented by Mr. Alfred Jonas, the honorary secretary of the Webb Memorial Fund, and the die from which they were struck has been destroyed, thus rendering the medals unique.

Poking Fires for a Living.

The trades of London are many, and some of them may seem to be very strange. One occupation by which a score of Britons are said to earn their livelihood is that of "poking fires."

By the Rabbinical law, no Jew is allowed to kindle or mend any fire on the Sabbath; and in certain places in England, where Jews are very numerous, this prohibition makes it necessary that persons shall be employed from sunset on Friday to the same hour on Saturday in going from house to house lighting fires and lamps and attending to them.

One woman in the East end of London often has as many as fifty houses to attend to, and draws small fees from each of them. It is not long since a male "fire-poker" in that quarter died worth more than $1,500 which he had saved out of his earnings.

It often happens at the East end that a strict Jew goes out into the street and says to some Christian passer-by, "Would you be so kind as to come indoors and light my lamp? The 'fire-poker' has failed me."

Many a tip do the police constables get for services of this kind. One of them said that he had received scores of small presents for putting kettles on the fire.

Carrying Pipes In Australia.

In the South Pacific, where garments containing pockets are mostly conspicuous by their absence, the native men have formed the habit of using their ears for pocket purposes. Not unusual is the sight of an ear with pipe and matches thrust through it, but up to the present the fashion has not been copied in these parts.

ROYALTY'S CLOTHES.

Pensioners Often Walk About In Royal "Cast-Offs."

Not very long ago a dealer in second-hand garments revealed the fact that he had once received a handsome price for a suit of clothes which he believed had been worn by King George. At the time he was under the impression that the buyer was actuated by motives of vanity or curiosity, but he subsequently discovered that the destiny of the royal tweeds was to figure in a traveling waxwork show upon an effigy of His Majesty. He also admitted that he could by no means vouch for the pedigree of the suit, which had come to him in a somewhat roundabout way.

As a matter of fact, the wardrobe of members of the royal family very rarely finds its way "into the market," and the chances are that when the contrary occurs the garments would be both unsaleably ancient and unrecognisable even by their makers.

A collector of historic garments would find it almost impossible to secure a single item of royal clothing which might at some future time become a relic of historic value; least of all uniforms and trappings of state that have figured on great public occasions. At the new London Museum, in Kensington Gardens, a number of such articles will be seen. Some of them have at this date no particular importance, but they have all been preserved by royal order and presented with a view to the information of posterity. Queen Victoria treasured a tiny pair of shoes worn by King Edward as a baby, and King George has given permission for these to figure among the exhibits.

In the royal households there are certain personages entitled to "perquisities," but the rules as to the disposal of such property are most rigid. Royal "regimentals" and robes are never regarded in this light. In the wardrobe rooms there has at times been an enormous store of uniforms never likely to be required again. Periodically, however, these are sorted out with the utmost care, all gold lace and buttons stripped off, and the cloth picked to pieces.

Charities used at one time to benefit considerably by the "cast-off" garments of royalty, but changes have taken place in this direction of late years for several reasons.

Pensioners and poor persons on the royal estates have also been kept warm and comfortably clothed in the garb of monarchs and princes.

A story has been told that in Norfolk there could once be seen fluttering above a field of newly-sown corn a tattered garment which had covered a royal back.

Military Musical Families.

The honor of a dinner paid recently to Mr. Dan Godfrey, conductor of the Bournemouth Municipal Orchestra, by British musical composers, is a reminder of the Godfreys' remarkable association with the Guards' bands. From 1825 until 1880 the Coldstreamers' band was continuously controlled by a Godfrey; first by Charles, the founder of the family, and then by his son Fred; and for some years all three Foot Guards' bands were conducted by the three brothers—Fred, Charles and Dan.

The second of these then went to the Royal Horse Guards, and Dan became famous as the bandmaster of the Grenadiers, to which position he was appointed, on the recommendation of the Prince Consort, at the age of twenty-five! He was the first British bandmaster to be commissioned, and some idea of his worldwide celebrity may be gained from the fact that the King of the Sandwich Islands conferred on him a "Royal Order," whilst the Sultan of Zanzibar presented him with two massive gold bracelets.

Besides the Bournemouth conductor honored, there is Mr. Herbert Godfrey, conductor of the Crystal Palace band. Only the Winterbottom family can rival this record, four brothers, and a nephew of the same, having at various periods conducted Royal Marines' bands.

More Observant.

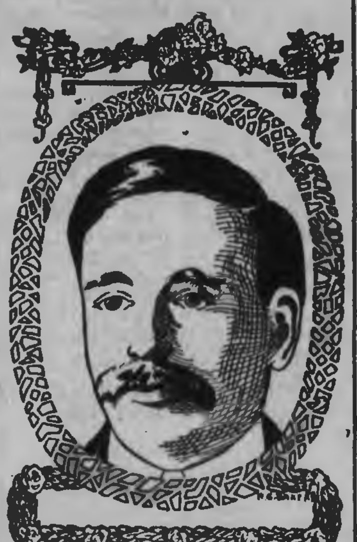
DIVORCE IS TOO PUBLIC

H. G. WELLS URGES SUPPRESSION OF NASTY DETAILS.

English Novelist Declares That Britain's Present Method of Blazoning Forth All the "Spicy" Things About Domestic Unhappiness Is a Punishment That Bears Heavily Upon the Innocent.

There has recently been a considerable amount of discussion of divorce in the public press, and the time is fast approaching when it will be necessary for the general citizen to form definite opinions upon proposals for probably quite extensive alterations of Britain's present divorce laws, says H. G. Wells, the famous English author.

I cannot conceive how any logical mind, having once admitted the principle of divorce, can hesitate at making entirely home wrecking things the basis of effective pleas. But in another direction some strain of sentimentality in my nature makes me hesitate to go with the great majority of divorce law reformers. I cannot bring myself to agree that either a long term of imprisonement or the misfortune of insanity should in itself justify a divorce. I admit the social convenience, but I wince at the thought of those tragic returns of the dispossessed. So far as insanity goes, I perceive that the cruelty of the law would but indorse the cruelty of nature. But I do not like men to indorse the cruelty of nature.



HERBERT G. WELLS.

And of course there is no decent minded person nowadays but wants to put an end to that ugly blot upon our civilization, the publication of whatever is most spicy and painful in divorce court proceedings. It is an outrage which falls even more heavily on the innocent than on the guilty and which has deterred hundreds of shy and delicate-minded people from seeking legal remedies for nearly intolerable wrongs.

The publication of contemporary divorce proceedings is a nastiness, a stream of social contagion and an extreme cruelty, and there can be no doubt that whatever other result from improved legislation may occur this evil at least will be swept away.

The Dean's Lesson.

Jonathan Swift, the Dean Swift so well known to fame, dearly loved a joke, and constantly inflicted them on his friends and servants. Sometimes they were kindly enough, and sometimes quite the reverse. In "Martha, Lady Giffard," Julia G. Longe gives an amusing example of the former kind.

Once when the dean was traveling in Ireland he found himself obliged to stay the night at a wayside inn. In the morning, when his servant brought him his boots, he saw that they had not been cleaned; he asked why.

"I thought, sir, as you were going to ride, that they would soon be dirty again."

"Oh!" said his master. "Very well; go and see to the horses. The man obeyed, and in the meantime the dean ordered the landlord not to give his servant any breakfast. When the man returned his master told him to bring the horses round.

"But, sir," remonstrated the man, "I have not yet had my breakfast."

"Oh, that is no matter," replied the dean, cheerfully. "We will start on our journey, for it is certain that if you were to have your breakfast you would soon be hungry again." And he took him breakfastless away. We may suppose that he never again neglected to clean his master's boots when on a journey.

Twig-Like Caterpillar.

A strange twig-like caterpillar very little known to the general public, but at the same time fairly common in Canada is the caterpillar of one of the moths which are known as geometridae, on account of the geometric-like attitudes into which the caterpillars put themselves when in motion. One of the best known is the swallowtail moth, which, when extended or balanced at length upon the slender branch of a tree, so exactly resembles a short twig with dried skin and buds as to need a practiced eye to detect the living insect from the branch which it imitates.

A Wonderful Bridge.

It was during the recent Abor expedition that a British regiment came across an extraordinary bridge. It consisted simply of a lot of cane hoops fastened to a couple of guide ropes, with other holding ropes at intervals, and the persons who wished to cross the river had to hang on where they could and fumble their way across as quickly as their nerves would allow them.

The Latest Theology.

At the annual Scripture examination in one of the London County Council schools, the following were some of the written answers to questions. We can only hope that they do not convey a fair impression of the quality and kind of "religious instruction" which is being imbibed by the rising generation at the day schools:

"Saul was a man who got order to go and kill all the Roman Catherlics he could. While he was on his journey to find the Catherlics he was stoped. A light from heaven knocked him down."

"Cornelius was one of the men to stone Stephen. He could not through the stones hard enough, so he took off his coat."

"Ruth was a hard-working Lady. When she was working in the cornfields the owner was pleased and said she could eat with the other Ladies."

"Zacharius was a priest. He was swinging the innocents in the temple."

Dry-Docking.

There is a curious old well at Dorking, Norfolk, which was sunk in 1790, and which for many years was the sole source of water supply in the village, inasmuch as the place was named "Dry Dorking." The well itself is situated on a grass knoll in the centre of the parish, the structure being adorned with several appropriate texts, whilst at one end are preserved the old stocks and whipping-post of bygone days. From time immemorial water from the well has been sold to the inhabitants at a farthing a pint, the caretaker attending at certain hours daily for this purpose.

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost is the eye brows are thin and scanty, and the lashes are thing and scanty. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorater, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. Accident Insurance

Following the Titanic Disaster no one will think of travelling without first taking out an Accident Policy.

It is interesting to know that practically all the Canadians who lost their lives through the Titanic wreck carried Accident Insurance. The average amount to be paid by Accident Companies alone, is over $30,000 for each Canadian lost.

The Double Indemnity and Bonus feature of The Dominion of Canada and General Accident Assurance Company policies are worthy of investigation before placing your Insurance.

His wife's a suffragette.
She utters sentiments sublime
While Bill runs into debt.
She vows that woman ought to be
A leader in the fray.
Bill doesn't stop to disagree,
But simply says, "Hooray!"

She says her object is to add
To human happiness,
But Bill is goin' to the bad,
And she is, more or less,
Displeased. With patriotic care
She loves her country still,
So much she hasn't time to spare
Fur lovin' poor old Bill.

A Famous Blagdon Trout.

May 1 witnessed the opening of another angling season at Blagdon Lake, the famous trout water in the Mendip Hills. Last year over 1,200 trout, averaging 2 1-2 pounds, were taken there by various anglers, despite the great heat and prolonged drought, and another excellent season is anticipated this year, though the outlook for the opening week was not as good as it might have been on account of April's strange departure in giving us a month's dry weather. Some of the trout in Blagdon Lake run very large, and among the fish is perhaps one of the most-talked-of trout in England. Two seasons ago it was taken in a net at spawning time, was artificially spawned, and then safely returned to the lake. It was estimated to scale at least 16 pounds, and naturally every piscatorial visitor to Blagdon Lake is eager to do battle with the leviathan. So far, however, no angler has been fortunate enough to rise the trout, but perhaps something will be seen of it this season, and when it is hooked a combination of skill, sound tackle, and good luck may perhaps see the famous fish in the landing-net.

Splendid Filth.

Captain E. S. Grogan, author of "The Nile as I Saw It," gave this description of a bit of scenery near the headwaters of the river of Egypt: "A long, slimy pool of putrefying reeds, where foul fish foregather and great pythons writhe and gorge themselves on hideous toads and slither; long, gleaming bands of gold, through labyrinths of fetid green and purple spume, where the fireflies dance, great butterflies flash, dragon flies glint and the sucksuck of swamp, the roar of huge bellied frogs, the cicada's scream, merge in a sad minor key, where in the ceaseless struggle between fruition and decay death wins."

States That Parisian Sage is Best Hair Tonic

"I had a bad case of dandruff. My scalp was full of dandruff and it came out thick and scaly. My hair came out badly; often I nearly cried on account of losing my pretty head of of hair.

I heard of PARISIAN SAGE and only had to use two bottles, before the hair stopped coming out, the scalp became clean, and all the dandruff disappeared. The hair became silky and one big reason that I liked PARISIAN SAGE was that it kept the hair smooth, silky, and clean with no traces of stickiness.

I believe this tonic to be the best on the market as there has been no return of dandruff, or hair falling out whatever. I am glad to publicly endorse the use of PARISIAN SAGE. I have often endorsed its use and am glad to do it." 33 E. Bond Street, Corry, Pa.

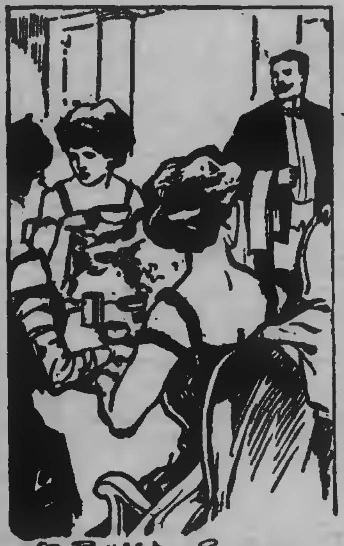
AN ODD MEETING

With One Who Had Been In a Different Position

By MILDRED LOUISE DODGE

The social world is a boiling pot. That which is under goes to the top and after whirling about awhile sinks again. The loss of fortune among the aristocrats of Europe produces disastrous effects on the losers. There is little or no hope of its recovery, and they must drop to a lower scale. They can't bear to live among people who have considered them far better than themselves.

There is now an American colony in every capital in Europe, and those who are financially able to entertain and be entertained have an easier entree to the one main social circle presided over by royalty than any other nationality, for the reason that since we have no titles in America no rank is expected of us. Some years ago a wealthy American gentleman named Tracy spent a month in Rome. His wife and daughter, Henrietta, had always moved in the upper circles of America, and, having friends in the Eternal City to introduce them, they soon found themselves in the swim there.



HE WAS LUIGI BRANDINI.

Henrietta Tracy was much sought after by Italians, who would have been glad to marry a beautiful American with a fortune. Her only object in accepting their attentions was a natural desire to see the world in Rome. One young man she fancied, but he was supposed to be perfectly independent financially and did not seem inclined to join the throng of her suitors.

But the lady was not sure that indifference was the cause of his standing aloof, though she did not know. There are young men who are either too proud to enter into a competition for the hand of a girl pursued by fortune hunters or too sensitive to pay attention to such. But this young man, Luigi Brandini, was not a pauper and no such motive could be attributed to him, though his estate was said to be involved in a law suit of many years' standing.

Nevertheless Brandini showed Miss Tracy every attention he could without indicating that he was likely to become a suitor. The last time she saw him at a social function was a ball given at the Quirinal palace, where he was her partner more than once during the evening. He seemed gloomy, and Miss Tracy could not help wondering if her departure, which was to take place the next day, had anything to do with his depression. When she was leaving the palace the young man bid her goodnight and goodby with a faraway look in his eye that boded some impending calamity.

That was the last the Tracys saw of Rome for some time. From there they went to Berlin, thence to London and finally sailed from England to America.

Two years passed. One day Miss Tracy entered a restaurant in an American city with a party of friends for luncheon. When they were seated a waiter advanced with a napkin on his arm to serve them. Looking up at him Miss Tracy met his eye. The hot blood rushed to his cheeks and an expression of mingled pain and mortification showed itself in every feature of his face. The man recognized her as she recognised him. He was Luigi Brandini.

He turned and went away, and she saw him no more. Presently another waiter came and took the party's orders. It is needless to say that the luncheon had been spoiled for Miss Tracy. The face of one she had last met as a guest in the Quirinal palace in Rome changed to a waiter in an American restaurant was appalling.

Being ignorant of what had caused this downward course in the social scale on the part of Brandini, she wrote a friend who made Rome her residence and who had recently come to America for a visit. In reply she was informed that soon after her departure from Italy an important suit of many years' standing between Luigi Brandini and a cousin had been decided in the court of last appeal against Brandini and made him a pauper. He had disappeared from Rome, and no one knew where he had gone. Rumor had it that he had enlisted in the French foreign legion; that he had committed suicide; that a bandit who was terrorizing a province in Sicily under the name of Catana was Brandini. For awhile these wild rumors went from mouth to mouth; then the poor man was forgotten by the social world as completely as if an ocean had closed over him.

Miss Tracy read the information imparted, and her sympathies went out all the more to her former acquaintance, especially at learning that his fall was not attended with disgrace. It was hard for her to understand that helplessness under which gentlemen of Europe who were not born to work experience when they are thrown out upon the world. It does not exist—certainly not to so great an extent—in America.

What could she do for Brandini? Nothing. The pride which had caused him to flee from such help as he might have received from his friends would prevent his accepting assistance from a woman he had known in that exclusive circle. One of the unseen abysses that beset the way of those who tread roseate paths had been suddenly exposed to her vision.

The only effort Miss Tracy felt herself in a position to make in Brandini's behalf was to inform her father of her meeting with the Italian with a view to learning if anything could be done for him. Mr. Tracy was disposed to help one who had contributed to his and his daughter's pleasure in a foreign land. He went to the restaurant where Henrietta had seen Brandini, described him to the proprietor and was told that a man answering that description had left his service on the day Miss Tracy had met Brandini. The proprietor did not know where he had gone. That ended the matter for the time being and possibly forever.

But Fate, who delights in arranging all sorts of complications for us, was working the matter in his own peculiar fashion. Many a man's career has been determined by some slight incident such as missing a train, falling into a river or running up against some one turning a corner. In this case the agent through which fate worked was a newspaper. Some eighteen months after Miss Tracy's meeting with Brandini in a restaurant she advertised for a chauffeur. Receiving several replies, she appointed a day and an hour when the applicants for the position might present themselves for inspection. When she entered the room where they were assembled and cast her eye over them whom should she see among the number but Luigi Brandini. His mortification was apparent in his scarlet face. He made a movement to retire, but changed his mind. It was too late.

Miss Tracy questioned the men one after another, dismissing them as soon as examined until she came to Brandini. The two stood alone together. Brandini looking as if he would like to escape. Miss Tracy looked as if she would like to prevent him from doing so.

For a moment she hesitated whether to speak to him as a former friend or as an applicant for the position of chauffeur. She decided on the latter course.

"Your name?" she asked.

"Giovanni Ricadonna."

"How much experience have you had in running automobiles?"

"None whatever, signora. I am sure I would not suit you. I should not have answered your advertisement."

"Nevertheless I like your appearance and think that, after a little practice, you will be able to drive my auto very well. You are engaged."

"Pardon me, signora. I am quite sure I should not be able to"— He stopped, bowed his head and fixed his eyes on the floor.

"Signor Brandini," said the lady, "you are among friends."

There was no reply to this. He did not even raise his eyes.

"You Romans," she continued, "were very kind to us when we were in Italy. My father, my mother and I were indebted to you among others for a very pleasant sojourn in your Italian capital. Perhaps my father may be able to help you out of this quagmire into which you have fallen."

He raised his eyes to hers.

"I wish you would consult him in reference to your affairs. He would consider it a favor if you would permit him through you to return some of the favors received from your countrymen while we were in Rome."

"There is nothing he can do for me, signora."

"You mean that your ancestral pride will not permit you to accept anything at his hands. In that you are wrong. Indeed, you are absurd. You need some one to throw a switch to turn the rails of fate and place you on the main track."

"Give me your address."

He acceded to her request, and she secured a promise from him to answer any communication that might be sent to him. Then she permitted him to depart.

That was some years ago. Now Luigi Brandini is a member of the Italian parliament, and his wife, formerly Miss Tracy, is prominent in Roman social life and, possessing a fortune, can afford certain important charities. The Romans have often tried to learn where Brandini passed those years that he was lost to Rome, but have never succeeded. Of all concerned the Tracy family are the only ones who know that the legislator once swung a napkin in an American restaurant.

DIABETES

Sanol's Antidiabetes, the great discovery of a German Specialist, is the only practical and thoroughly tested Remedy for Diabetes-mellitus. It has a specific action against the poisons of the disease, and by its use the secretion of sugar almost immediately abates and disappears altogether after a short time. So long as the disease has not reached its last stages, a cure can be effected with "Sanol's Antidiabetes."

Open wounds heal after a little time, the disagreeable thirst disappears, after a few days the general health of the patient becomes speedily improved.

Sanol's Antidiabetes is used with an alternate diet regimen based on long experience in the study of this disease.

All sufferers from this terrible and hitherto considered incurable disease, should not hesitate to give "Sanol's Antidiabetes" a trial, as we feel absolutely certain that it will justify all the claims we make for it.

This remedy is perfectly harmless to the organic system, being composed only of herbs and extracts, and containing no poisonous or injurious matter whatever.

A Persian Fair.

The Maidan, a large open space at Ferikelar, the second town of the Barfrush district, was used as a market place for the great fair called the Khamseh bazaar, held forty days after the vernal equinox and which lasted a whole month. It was frequented by merchants of all kinds, both strangers and Persians from Astrakhan, Baku, Kashan, Teheran, Year, Isfahan, Resht, Mazanderan, Kerman, Astarabad and Khorasan, who brought products of their districts for sale at this fair. They assembled in such great numbers that sixty or seventy horsemen were required to keep the peace and prevent robberies. The total transactions at the fair are estimated at 250,000 tomans ($250,000 to $500,000, according to exchange and the fall in the price of silver). The fair was still held twenty years ago, but the attendance gradually fell off, and the fair was finally abolished some ten years ago.

TELEPHONY EXPERIMENTS.

Invention Being Perfected by Which Users Will See Each Other.

Though there are still many difficulties to be removed before seeing on the telephone ceases to be a problem, the realization by no means seems to be very far ahead.

Prof. Rosing, of the Technological Institute of St. Petersburg, taking advantage of the light-impressibility of a photo-electric element discovered by him, has invented what he calls a "phos-telephonic" system (from the Greek word "phos," meaning light), which is a remarkable approximation to the final achievement.

Two other scientists, Drs. Elster and Geitel, have even gone a step further; for they have discovered an element which, apparently, is more susceptible to the impressions of light than Dr. Rosing's "phos-electric" element. Considering these facts, it is not unreasonable to expect the last and crowning success within a comparatively short time.

When a person stands before Prof. Rosing's instrument and opens the circuit by taking the receiver off the hook, a small luminous pencil begins to draw his likeness on a dark screen, and in the twinkling of an eye the work is complete.

His visible counterpart is there, and is rapidly transmitted to the sight of the person with whom he is speaking. So it is with the person at the other end: his image is traced on a screen and is transmitted to another small screen.

How is this done? Two systems of mirrors are moving in such a way as to cast the image upon the phos-electric element inside the transmitter. An ingeniously made vacuum tube sends out fine rays, not seen by the eye.

These rays, falling on the screen, cause a certain part to appear very bright—that part where the image is—and an electric current transmits the image to the screen of the second person, wherever that person may be. He sees the sudden brightness on the screen and also the lifelike photograph—the miniature of the person to whom he is speaking.

The manner in which the mirrors move must be taken into account. By their movement they cause the light on the screen to accord exactly with the light rays reflected from the speaker's body. The image is thus transferred by the mirrors to the phos-electric element, in which is thereby excited an electric current that carries the image to the screen of the second person.

All this is done instantaneously, and being continuously repeated, causes the photograph to remain on the screen until the speaker withdraws, in the same way as moving pictures are possible through the cinematograph.

As the Rosing apparatus is yet in its infancy, only very small objects can be seen with it. But, considering the idea behind the invention, and in view of the favorable opinion of a celebrated expert, we may reasonably expect to have the final happy result at no distant date.

To see a person while speaking to him on the telephone will soon be a very familiar circumstance. Its utility is obvious. Conversation is not only carried on by the lips but by the eyes. Unconsciously we read a speaker's lips, and that is one of the reasons why 'phone talks are labored—one of the senses is shut off from a function which it takes two senses to perfect. Again facial expression is very important in conversation. The new "telephony" will remedy all this.

SUPREME COURT DECIDES THAT PARLIAMENT CANNOT ENACT LANCASTER BILL

Court Practically Unaminous in its Decision That Bill Cannot be Passed, Justice Idington Filing a Qualified Dissent—Objection Seems to be to the Form of the Bill—Other Questions Answered and the Rights of the Dominion to Interfere in Provincial Marriage Matters Defi .

Special to the Review

Ottawa, June 17th. — The Supreme Court at noon to-day delivered judgment in the marriage reference case. To the question as to the right of Parliament to enact the Lancaster Bill and as to whether the provisions of that bill were not within the authority of the Parliament of Canada to enact, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Justice Duff, Anglin and Davis answered "No". Justice Idington answered it was impossible as the bill stood, He said the probable purpose could be reached by a better bill,

The qustion as to whether the law of Quebec rendered null and void a marriage which would otherwise be binding when not contracted before a Roman Catholic Priest when the marriage takes place in the Province between persons both of whom are Roman Catholics, Justices Idigton, Duff and Davis answered "No," and Justice Anglin "Yes," while Chief Justice asked permission to decline to answer,

All answered "No" to the question as to whether the Quebec law would render null and void a marriage performed in that province between persons, one of whom only, is a Roman Catholic if not performed before a Roman Catholic Priest.

The court found that parliament had authority to enact with the concurrence of the respective legislatures concerned, that all such marriages as those referred to in the preceeding paragraph here-to-fore solemnized, shall be legal and binding. When a province fails to provide adequate means of solemnization of marriage parliament can also enact that all such marriages hereafter solemnized shall be legal and binding.

The questions submitted to the Supreme Court were as follows:-

Question 1—(a) Has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact in whole or in part, bill No. 3 of the first session of the twelfth Parliament of Canada, intitled "An act to amend the marriage act"? (b) If the provisions of the said bill are not all within the authority of the Parliament of Canada to enact, which, if any, of the provisions are within such authority?

Question 2—Does the law of the Province of Quebec render null and void, unless contracted before a Roman Catholic priest, a marriage which would otherwise be legally binding, which takes place in such Province (a) between persons who are both Roman Catholic, or (b) between persons one of whom only is a Roman Catholic?

Question 3—If either (a) or (b) of the last preceding question is answered in the affirmative, or if both of them are answered in the affirmative has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact that all such marriages heretofore solemnized or hereafter to be solemnized shall be legal and binding?

The Lancaster bill, on which the marriage reference is based, provides as follows:—(1) The marriage act, chapter 105 of the revised statutes, 1906, is amended by adding thereto the following section:—

"(3) Every ceremony or form of marriage heretofore or hereafter performed by any person authorized to perform any ceremony of marriage by the laws of the place where it is performed, and duly performed according to such laws, shall everywhere within Canada be deemed to be a valid marriage, notwithstanding any differences in the religions of the persons so married, and without regard to the religion of the person performing the ceremony.

"(2) The rights and duties as married people of the respective persons, married as aforesaid, and of the children of such marriages, shall be absolute and complete, and no law or canonical decree or custom of or in any Province in Canada shall have any force or effect to invalidate or qualify any such marriage of any of the rights of the said persons or their children in any manner whatsoever."

The marriage question was submitted to the court on May 27 last, and was heard by every member of the bench except Justice Brodeur. He refused to sit because he was a member of parliament when Sir Allen Alyesworth, the then Minister of Justice, gave it as his opinion that the Dominion Parliament had no right to pass a general marriage law. Justice Brodeur concurred in this view at the time.

Some of the best legal talent in the country was engaged to argue the question: E. L. Newcombe, K.C., deputy minister of justice, appeared for the Government; Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., and Eugene Lafleur, K.C., represented the prometers of the bill; J. F. Hellmuth, K.C. and P. B. Mignault, K.C., were retained by the opponents of the measure; R. C. Smith, K.C., and A. Geoffrion, K.C., on behalf of the Province of Quebec argued against the bill as an encroachment upon provincial rights, while Edward Bayly, K.C., appeared for the attorney general of Ontario. None of the other provinces were represented at the hearing.

Mr. Bayly, on behalf of Ontario, simply read a statement setting forth that this province was in favor of a general law which would recognize as valid all marriages performed by duly authorized parties in any part of the Dominion so long as the autonomy of the provinces was not infringed.

The whole discussion was precipitated by the promulgation of the famous ne temere decree, by which the validity of the marriage of parties of different religious faith, not performed according to the rules imposed by the Catholic church was called in question.

In the now celebrated Herbert marriage case, in which an effort was made to have such a union set aside, Judge Charbonneau, of a Quebec court, held that the marriage was legal because the contracting parties had been joined together by a person legally authorized to perform the marriage ceremony.

At the last session of the Dominion Parliament the Lancaster Bill, so named for its sponsor, and containing the provisions above set forth, was introduced. In order to ascertain whether Parliament had a right to pass such a law, the Government submitted the above questions to the Supreme Court. That body refused at the time to make answer on the ground that they had no jurisdiction to deal with the case in that form. On this point they were overruled by the Privy Council, and the questions were thereupon argued and submitted.

COLORED DELEGATES NOW HOLD BALANCE OF POWER

Both Factions at Chicago Are Working Hard to Secure the Black Vote—Col. Roosevelt Arrives and Gets a Whirlwind Welcome In Chicago—Steam Roller Process In Committee Benefits Taft.

Chicago, June 17.—The fight to force the Taft negro delegates from the south—the black sixty-six who claim to hold the balance of power in the convention — to break their pledges and vote for Roosevelt, is getting hotter every hour. Roosevelt is being preached as the race creed by some of the ablest negroes in the country and the enthusiasm has reached a pitch of almost religious fervor.

Saturday night at the Pekin, the negro theatre, on South State street, more than 1,000 negroes, among them some of the delegates, roared and shouted their approval as the Rev. R. C. Ransom, the colored preacher from New York, and a power among his people, told them that the delegates were freed from their pledges since President Taft had been "untrue to his oath of office and a traitor to the race."

Meanwhile the Taft people have awakened to the danger of the situation and are doing their best to keep their negro delegates in line and to start something like of wave of real enthusiasm for the President's cause. They are using the Brownsville case as their chief argument.

While the meeting at the Pekin was going on the Taft supporters among the negroes were gathered at the Olivet Baptist Church. There were several hundred of them and they adopted resolutions condemning Col. Roosevelt's action in the Brownsville affair. At the Taft headquarters in the Congress Hotel plans were made for a negro mass meeting last night at the Colored Institutional Church, where the negro delegates were marched in a body with the idea of showing the negroes the Taft strength.

Col. Roosevelt, wearing his new fighting hat, a compromise between the sombrero and a rough rider's headgear, came into Chicago late yesterday and was acclaimed by thousands of his supporters and admirers. The hat was in the air throughout the automobile ride from La Salle street station to the Congress Hotel, waving salutes of acknowledgement of the cheers that marked the former President's passing.

Mr. Roosevelt declared last night that he had not mapped out a plan of campaign. He was in consultation for several hours with the managers of his candidacy, and then assumed charge in person of "this naked fight between corrupt politicians and thieves and the plain people." He would not discuss his probable appearance on the floor of the convention, but there was no doubt among the delegates last night but that he would be there. Col. Harry New, in charge of convention arrangements, said Mr. Roosevelt had not applied for a seat.

The Californian delegation, the most aggressive and outspoken of the Roosevelt adherents of the delegation, which yesterday issued but a thinly veiled threat of independent action if things did not go well for the colonel in the convention, marched to the station in a body and escorted Col. Roosevelt to the hotel. They bore aloft a banner which read:

And on the reverse side:

"California's solid twenty-six for Theodore Roosevelt."

"Chicago is a bad place for people who steal," said the colonel, when the cheers which greeted his appearance had subsided. "California's 26 votes were cast for us at the primaries, and will be counted as such.

"The people will win," he continued. "We have won in every state where the people could express themselves, three to one, and sometimes eight to one. They are stronger with us now than they were then."

Its closing hours attended by exhibitions of tense partisan and personal feeling among its members, the Republican national committee concluded last night the hearing of the contents involving 254 seats in the national convention which is to assemble Tuesday. The sum of its work is: Roosevelt 19, Taft 235.

President Taft yesterday received 62 delegates, Col. Roosevelt 6. All of Washington's 14 went to the President, against the protests of Senator Poindexter that the "country would judge the cause." Out of Texas he secured 26 of the contested 30, over the prostrate form of Col. Cecil A. Lyon, who declared "you may depose me now, but I will be back four years from now when many of you will not."

In Virginia, where the issue was drawn between negro voters and the regular state organization, the President received the entire contested delegation of 20. In the District of Columbia he won 2, Committeeman Sidney Bisbey going to defeat with the Roosevelt delegation.

The Washington cases, almost the last to engage the committee's attention before the conclusion of its ten day's work, were preceded by a threatened personal combat between Francis J. Heney and Committeeman Kennedy of North Dakota, which was prevented only by the interference of their associates.

Seamen's Strike Throughout France.

Havre, June 17.—The central committee of the Seamen's Union announced yesterday that they intended to take such action as would demonstrate the solidarity of the Havre strikers. It is understood that this is to take the form of a national general strike of seamen and dockers extending over 24 or 48 hours.

SASKATCHEWAN ELECTIONS ON JULY 11TH

Special to the Review.

Regina, June 17—It was announced this morning, that the Saskatchewan elections will be held on July 11 Nominations will take place July 4.

Fenian Raid Veteran Passes.

Brantford, June 17.—Samuel Hall, a Fenian raid veteran, and prominent Mason, passed away here on Saturday, aged 84 years. He had been a resident of Brantford since 1846. Two sons, John H., Brantford, and George W., Toronto, survive.

Raised $5,000 for Nurses' Home.

Brantford, June 17.—The Fair of Nations, under the auspices of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, came to a successful close here Saturday night, over $5,000 having been secured for the nurses' home.

Transport Strikers Parade.

London, June 17—Several thousands of wives, mothers and children of the striking dock men and transport workers paraded through the streets from the east end to Trafalgar square on Saturday, on a "hunger march."

They solicited funds along the route and collected considerable in contributions.

LANGLOIS DEFIES THE ARCHBISHOP

Montreal, June 17.—Godfroi Langlois, the editor and proprietor of Le Pays, the paper which has earned the displeasure of the Archbishop of Montreal, answered his grace in a long article yesterday.

In it Mr. Langlois reiterates his intention to fight on in the cause of better education for French-Canadian children. He says in part:

"The creation of a minister of public instruction, free and obligatory, education with uniformity of school books cannot encroach on any religious teaching or hurt any belief. We have awakened energies, we have dispelled ancient beliefs. On this ground we were and upon this ground we shall still remain."

Concluding Mr. Langlois says:

"Assuredly Archbishop Bruchesi cannot make a crime of our stand against St. Jean Baptiste, against this evil which permeates French-Canadians who nurse illusions and wrong impressions, who look backwards instead of forwards and whom Archbishop Langevin denounced in the most eloquent terms at Winnipeg recently when he declared 'French-Canadians were men of words and not of actions,' that they were 'terrible talkers,' that they lacked initiative and that they receded instead of advancing."

GIVE WHITES FOUR DAYS

Santiago, June 17.—The rebel Gen. Julio Antomarchi, alias Pitilli, has issued a proclamation stating that he will grant four hours for every white man to abandon the vicinity of El Cobre, ten miles to the west of this city, after which he will burn all the buildings and plantations.

Gen. Antomarchi, who is operating in the vicinity of El Cobre, addresses his proclamation to all foreigners in that district, giving as his reason the action of the Government troops in mercilessly killing negroes in no way identified with the insurgents, and destroying their property.

The proclamation has caused consternation among the foreign residents of the district, who are hurrying into Santiago to advise their consuls.

TWENTY-SIX PERSONS MEET DEATH IN KANSAS CYCLONE

Terrific Storm Works Havoc In the Western Portion of the State—Sweeps a Space Which at One Point Measured Half a Mile by Five In Extent—Many Towns Are Wrecked.

Kansas City, Mo., June 17.—Twenty-six persons are known to have been killed and many injured by a storm that passed over Central West Missouri late Saturday, demolishing buildings, tearing down wires and leaving the smaller towns and country homes completely wrecked.

From meagre reports that have been received, it is believed that the storm that struck Kansas City late Saturday, causing the death of two persons and doing damage amounting to many thousands of dollars, swept to the south through Bates County, where it left a trail of death and destruction.

The path of the storm here was half a mile wide and five miles long. Between Merwin and Adrian 19 persons were killed. At Creighton, in Cass County, two are known to be dead, while at Leeton, in Johnson County, two are dead, and unverified reports say others have been killed.

In the country between Merwin and Adrian the storm came up suddenly and swept clean its path through the northern section of the country.

When Henry Cameron and three of his children were killed, the wind picked up another child and carried it away. The baby was found yesterday a mile from home, uninjurtd. The bodies of Gibson and Fred Groves were found more than a mile from their home, where they were when the storm struck. In other places the storm, in passing over a farm, killed fifty head of live stock, but did no other damage.

Throughout the stricken district wires are down and communication is carried on by messengers.

Relief trains have been sent from Windsor, Warrenburg and Sedalia to the country, and from Sedalia many undertakers were asked to hurry to the scene.

Eastern States Hit.

Pittsburg, June 17.—Two persons were killed, a score or more injured, and heavy financial losses were sustained as a result of a severe electrical and windstorm that swept western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and western Virginia yesterday. The fatalities are reported from Washington County, Pa., and northwest Virginia. From advices received last night, scores of persons are in a serious condition from being stunned by lightning, while others sustained hurts when trees were uprooted and buildings unroofed.

Falling Steeple Killed Three.

Zanesville, O., June 17.—Three were killed and a score or more injured yesterday when a tornado caused the steeple of St. Thomas' Catholic Church to crash through the roof while services were in progress. T. F. Finan, crushed, died two hours later in a hospital. The storm cut a path about a block wide through the town.

GOVERNMENT REDUCES TAX ON MANY RAW MATERIALS

By Order-In-Council Under the Provision of Council Act the Government Puts Materials Used In Various Lines of Manufacture on the Free List For Britain and on the Reduced List Elsewhere.

Ottawa, June 17.—The Government have by order-in-council made some sweeping reductions and suspension of customs duties on articles largely used in Canadian manufactures and which are not produced or sold to any great extent in Canada. A number of articles have been placed altogether on the free list, while the duty on others have been considerably reduced. Others have been placed or transferred to the list of goods which may be imported into Canada free of duty under the British preferential tariff and subject to the reduced duty of customs under the intermediate and general tariff.

Articles upon which the customs duty is totally abolished enter largely into the manufacture of special chairs, hats, rubbers, instruments of all kinds, ladies' combs and celluloid articles of all kinds, abraisive wheels, peroxide of hydrogen, explosives, optical instruments, braided fabrics.

For years past Canadian manufacturers, have complained that owing to the heavy duty on these articles, they were placed upon an unequal footing with foreign manufacturers, and the cost of production of the above-named manufactured articles was needlessly high. The matter was time and again brought to the attention of the late Government without any definite action being taken.

Hon. W. T. White, however, since assuming office, has given considerable study to the whole matter, with the result that he arrived at the conclusion that in the interests of both the manufacturers and general customers, the duties on certain articles should be abolished. The duty, which the Canadian manufacturers were compelled to pay upon the material, which have now been placed on the free list, likewise compelled them to charge a higher price for their finished product, and the result of the changes which the Government have introduced will undoubtedly tend to lower the cost to the people who buy the manufactured article, while on the other hand the removal of the duties cannot scarcely affect any Canadian interest, as the majority of the articles affected by the new ruling are not produced in Canada.

The same thing applies to articles upon which duties have been reduced, and which are used as material in the manufacture of cameras or kodaks, typewriter ribbons, silken fabrics, neckties, metal articles, etc.

The reductions are based entirely upon statistical information secured by the officials of the customs board, following representations made by a number of manufacturing companies. In fact the manufacturers have on different occasions during the past few years asked that these duties be removed. The reductions announced by the Government are not, however, of such a sweeping nature as a hasty glance of the list would at first indicate.

Every article can be used solely as manufacturing material and chiefly in the manufacture of celluloid novelties, photographic and kodak supplies.

The customs and finance department in addition to the information given by the manufacturers, secured a number of other important facts, which resulted in the reduction of the duties. The consumers must undoubtedly benefit by the reduction as well as the manufacturers. By securing much of his raw material free of duty, the manufacturer will be on an equal footing with his competitor across the line, and will it is promised lower the prices now charged for the finished product.

It is also understood that reductions of the tariff on other raw materials is being considered and the announcement of further reductions is expected within a few weeks.

Kingston Postal Clerk Found Dead.

Kingston, June 17.—Stanley Porter, clerk in the postoffice, was found dead on the railway tracks near Petawawa. He left Kingston Saturday night as a member of the Army Medical Corps for camp, complained of being sick and went out on the platform for fresh air and that was the last seen of him alive. It is supposed that he fell off. His body was found yesterday morning. He is survived by a widow and two children.

Four "Pen" Guards Dismissed.

Kingston, June 17.—The first shake-up as a result of the recent investigation at the penitentiary has resulted in four guards being relieved of their duties. The men are Guards George Doyle, Wm. MacDonell, John McQuare and Percy Johnston. They received letters stating they were physically unfit for service and were asked to resign at the end of the month.

FIREMAN'S BACK WAS BROKEN

Buffalo, June 17.—One man was fatally hurt, fifteen firemen were overcome by smoke and property valued at $175,000 was destroyed in the double fire that kept practically the entire fire-fighting force of the city busy for several hours early yesterday. The loss in Taylor & Crate's lumber yard where the fire began was $100,000. The Empire Beef & Provision Co.'s warehouse, four blocks away, where fire broke out at the same time, was destroyed with several small houses nearby, causing a loss there of $75,000.

Captain J. J. Leary, who was caught under the walls of a small building and who was reported killed, recovered consciousness several hours later. His back is broken and he probably will die.

Fifteen firemen working in a blind alley between lumber piles were caught by a shift of the wind and all of them were overcome. Their predicament was not discovered for some time and several of them are in a serious condition.

Confirmed 100 at Berlin.

Berlin, June 17.—Yesterday was an important day to the Catholic clergy and laity of the city, the event being a visit to the city by Bishop Dowling of Hamilton, who conducted the annual confirmation class, which this year was unusually large, there being over one hundred young people and adults confirmed.

Unknown Man Killed.

Toronto, June 17.—An unidentified man was killed while crossing the G.T.R. tracks shortly after four o'clock yesterday morning at the foot of Princess street. He was struck by yard engine 429 and was instantly killed. The remains were removed to the morgue and an inquest ordered.

GWYNNE ESTATE MUST PAY TAX

Toronto, June 17.—By the decision of Mr. Justice Middleton regarding the interpretation of the will of Eliza Anne Gwynne, delivered at Osgoode Hall Saturday, the legacy in favor of the British Union for the abolition of vivisection goes to that charity intact, but as the charity does not operate within Ontario, succession duties must be paid upon the legacy and are to be paid out of the remaining portion of the estate.

NORTH BAY PEOPLE THOUGHT END OF THE WORLD HAD COME

North Bay, June 17.—The worst electrical storm in the history of Northern Ontario, visited this section early Sunday morning, beginning about two o'clock and continuing, accompanied by cloudburst, intermittently until five. Very little sleep was possible to anyone, as crashing thunder shook the houses like cards, one peal succeeding another so quickly as to suggest a bombardment of giant forces.

The house of John Brennan was struck by lightning, which passed down the chimney and showered the occupants with plaster from the ceilings, but fortunately caused no injuries. Streets and cellars were flooded, and many gardens ruined. Mrs. Brousseau and her son, living in a small house on Harvey street, were flooded out, and were rescued by neighbors through the windows at five o'clock in the morning.

Haag's circus train passing north to Porcupine was caught in the storm and roars of frightened animals gave employes an anxious time.

The streets of North Bay in the west end presented an unique appearance with houses surrounded by water and people using hastily improvised rafts to navigate. Many people were thoroughly frightened and thought the end of the world had come, and no one could be found yesterday morning to say that they had ever experienced anything similar before. In the country sections many barns were destroyed and much damage done to crops.

Fifteen miles from North Bay on the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario, a freight train was hurled down a 25-foot embankment by a cloudburst, the engine and nine cars being piled up in a promiscuous mass of wreckage, more dangerous to trainmen by flying logs with which some of the cars were loaded. Engineer Newman was badly injured, having a broken shoulder, cut face and other injuries. He is now in North Bay hospital. Brakeman Fill and Fireman Sirous received minor injuries.

FOREMAN MEETS SUDDEN DEATH

Kingston, June 17.—Louis [illegible], aged 30, foreman on the C.P.R.'s new line at Echo Lake, west of Parham, Frontenac County, was killed as the result of a premature explosion of dynamite. He had filled five holes and was filling a sixth when the accident occurred. The deceased had been engaged in the work of loading dynamite holes for several months past and was considered an experienced man. The verdict of the coroner's jury was "death from explosion," the evidence indicating that the affair was of an accidental nature.

HOTEL MEN FINED

The crusade which the city of Guelph started against the hotelmen of that city can hardly be regarded by the most charitably minded as a move in the interests of temperance, although it resulted in the fining of eight liquor sellers to the tune of $20 each. The charge against them was selling whiskey that did not measure up to the require standard.

The move was made in the first place by the tipplers of the Royal City, who felt that they were not getting the worth of their money. You cannot deceive a Guelph man either in the value of fat stock or the quality of the drink which he is made to pay for. If, he argues, he wants water, he can get it without the addition of an expense upon the current water rates. He is averse to being taken in, with any decoction of sulphuric acid and rainwater compounded in the darkness of a hotel cellar. One resident experienced in the light ways of conviviality declared that some of the stuff served out to him over the bars was about as easy of deglutition as a section of a barbed wire fence.

The deduction to be made from the evidence submitted by the hotelkeepers is that the Guelph members of the fraternity are all total abstainers, and never sample the wares in which they traffic. They did not know, they asserted, that their goods were below the mark, and in this way strive to saddle the entire responsibility upon the manufacturers. They were, they claimed, the victims, and not the customers, but this line of defence failed and the fines were collected.

Some Peterborough citizens, since the exposure at Guelph, have been hinting darkly at local infractions of the revenue law by the manufacture of stuff that is sold for liquor, and they wish that the License inspector would get busy. However, there is a hesitancy about taking the initiative in the matter of laying a formal charge by those who feel they might forfeit their standing in the community by avowing themselves as possessed of a grievance on this score.

NO MORE DUAL SCHOOLS

The Ontario Government has disposed of the bilingual school question in a manner which cannot fail to meet with the approval of even the most radical opponents of the use of the French language in the public schools of this province. Another gun of the Opposition has been thoroughly spiked and another plank in Mr. Rowell's platform has been broken under his feet.

By the terms of the new regulations as issued Saturday by the Minister of Education, every French pupil upon entering the first form shall at once begin an oral course in English and as soon as he has sufficiently mastered that language he shall begin the course in the Primer. Practically all use of the French language is thus to be confined to the pupils who upon entering school are unable to speak English, and their proficiency in the latter tongue is to be made a test for advancement beyond the first form.

In schools where French has been a subject of study, instruction in that language is to be limited to one hour a day. The study of French is to be optional and must not interfere with instruction in English.

It is evident that under the new regulations a pupil taking a course in these schools must leave them with a better knowledge of the English language than it was possible for him to obtain under the old regime.

A thorough system of inspection is provided by the appointment of three regular and three supervising inspectors whose duty it will be to see that the course of instruction is followed according to the regulations, and four model schools for the training of English-French teachers are to be established.

The new policy will take effect with the beginning of the school year, September next.

THE CEMENT DUTY AGAIN

That staunch protectionist journal, the Brantford Courier, scents mischief in the lowering of the duty on cement. It thinks that if the West is granted the reduction in this case that it may become more voracious and insist upon further tariff concessions by pleading that there is a shortage in the supply of ploughs and mowers.

The Courier is tormenting itself with an imaginary danger. It is close enough to Hamilton to know that the International Harvester Company, and the Oliver Plough Company, are prepared to furnish all the ploughs, mowers or binders, required by East or West and that the supply is always adequate. These two institutions alone support a population sufficient to make a city half the size of Brantford. It is the protection policy of Canada that is responsible for the presence of these two factories in Hamilton and in the hands of the Borden Government the preservation of that policy in its integrity is assured.

Surely the Courier does not intend to insinuate that Finance Minister White is capable of being influenced by the clamor of any discontented element, claiming a shortage which does not exist. Mr. White can be depended upon as a man likely to satisfy himself as to facts before making a move.

A HOPELESS CASE

There really seems to be no help for the Globe. It is so blinded by partisanship that it cannot even see through the simplest proposition connected with the tariff. It clamored for a reduction of the duty on cement to relieve the situation caused by a shortage in the supply and no sooner is the reduction made than it assails the Government with the charge that an attempt is being made to bribe the West and influence the Saskatchewan elections.

Now it protests against the imposition of a duty on dressed lumber. It either cannot or will not see, the difference between rough lumber which is admitted free because it requires further manufacturing by Canadian labor, and the "sized" or dressed commodity which under the Laurier regime was admitted free even though it reached Canada ready for building purposes. And because a Canadian Court decided that a duty on such imports was legal the Globe cannot refrain from a reflection on the integrity and nonpartisan spirit of that branch of the judiciary.

Over its announcement of the Whitney bilingual school question the Globe says in a headline "French Instruction will be Limited." This stands to date as the most startling sample of what is popularly described as "drawing it mild."

NOTE AND COMMENT

Give the average Guelph citizen joy water of the required standard and he cares not who makes the laws of his country.

According to political ethics, the Southern colored delegate is not an honest man. After he is bought, he refuses to remain so.

The Chicago clergyman who opens the big convention with prayer might fittingly petition that the threatening cloud of civil war be averted.

The Cuban negro who works for 30 cents a day, and takes his pay in corn meal may be forgiven if he joins an insurrection where there is a chance for spoils, as well as the hope that the other side may buy him off.

The Canada Cement Company has purchased four steamers and will now rush its product to the West. Kind of waking up, as it were, since Finance Minister White pricked the merger.

Col. Sam Hughes has announced that he is opposed to the return of the Bunker Hill cannon. If the Americans wish to regain possession of that piece of artillery, the usual methods for the acquisition of such trophies is open to them.

Col. Roosevelt could have done worse than buy a pale blue necktie to go with that new cowboy hat which he is wearing in Chicago. He might have chosen red.

And so Hon. R. Rogers, Minister of the Interior, is to be a spectator at the Chicago convention. After such an experience, anything the West can produce in the way of election excitement will look to him like a Sunday school entertainment.

Col. Roosevelt's career is nothing, if not spectacular. He could not make the trip to Chicago without running into a railway accident, and so securing a mass of free advertising. The claim that a deliberate attempt was made to wreck his train, is sure to win him both sympathy and votes.

Twenty-eight colored delegates, we are told, fell for Roosevelt's new hat and necktie at first sight of the combination, and rushed to the ranks of his supporters. Rough Riders and others with Democratic ideas in the matter of dress, are expected to fall into line. Thus a little venture in the art of personal adornment, makes the whole world kin.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, June 15.—Wheat—The unexpected sharp break in American values and the weakness in Paris caused much realizing here, and at the opening the values were ¼d to ¼d lower than yesterday. These, however, were offset by the continued good demand from the continent and lighter American shipments this week, as shown by Bradstreet's. Following the opening there was covering by prominent shorts, and prices advanced ¼d to ½d, with October leading. There is a good demand for cargoes arriving, with Plate offerings firmly held and Manitoba offers higher. It is forecasted that there will be very light American shipments to Liverpool this week—barely half of the previous week. Strength in corn assisted in the advance, and at the close the market was firm, ½d to ¾d up from yesterday.

CHICAGO, June 15.—Soaking rains thruout the northwest, including the spring crop country beyond the Canadian line, made a lower market to-day for wheat. Despite week-end covering, the close was easy, ⅜c to ½c down. Corn finished at a net loss of ⅛c to ¼c; oats ⅛c to ⅛c, and provisions at a decline of 5c to 25c.

MONTREAL, June 15.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat were stronger at an advance of 1½d, but as they were still out of line with values in Winnipeg, no business was done. The demand for oats from local buyers was fair, with sales of 10,000 bushels extra No. 1 feed at 50½c and 25,000 No. 2 Canadian western at 50½c, c.i.f., here, to arrive. The domestic demand for flour is very limited, but the tone of the market is firm. Millfeed is quiet and steady. The demand for butter is quiet and the feeling easy, owing to increased supplies. Receipts for the week were 22,278 packages, against 25,407 a year ago. Cheese is fairly active, but the tone of the market is soft and prices have a lower tendency. Receipts for the week were 70,300, against 72,145 a week ago. A strong feeling prevails in eggs, owing to the good demand and cool weather. There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

having to depend upon his wits, he gave no further heed to the Frenchman, but, fancying he saw vestiges of recent footmarks on the right, or seaward, side of the road, and dragging the bicycle with him, he climbed to the top of the nearest dune, as he believed that a view of the sands could be obtained from that point. He was right. The sea was at a greater distance than he imagined would be the case, but a wide strip of firm sand, its wet patches glistening dully in the half-light, extended to the water's edge almost from the base of the hillock on which he stood.

At first, his anxious eyes strained through the haze in vain, until some circling seagulls caught his attention, and then he diserned some vague forms silhouetted against a brighter belt of the sea to the northeast.

Three of the figures were black and motionless, but two gave an eerie suggestion of whiteness and movement. Abandoning the bicycle, and hardly realising why he should be so perturbed, Dale ran forward. Twice he stumbled and fell amidst the stringy heath grass, but he was up again in a frensy of haste, and soon was near enough to the group of men to see that Medenham and Marigny bareheaded and in their shirt sleeves, were fighting with swords.

Dale's eyes were now half-blinded with perspiration, for he had ridden fast through the mud from Calais, and this final run through yielding sand and clinging sedge was exhausting to one who seldom walked as many furlongs as he had covered miles that morning. But even in his panic of distress he fancied that his master was pressing the Frenchman severely. It was no child's play, this battle with cold steel. The slender, venomous-looking blades whirled and stabbed with a fearsome vehemence, and the sharp rasp of each riposte and parry rang out with a horrible suggestiveness in the moist air. And then, as he lumbered heavily on, Dale thought he saw something that turned him sick with terror. Almost halting, he swept a hasty hand across his eyes—then he was sure.

Medenham, with arm extended in a feint tierce, was bearing so heavily on his opponent's rapier that his right foot slipped, and he stumbled badly.

At once Marigny struck with the deadly quickness and certainty of a cobra. His weapon pierced Medenham's breast high up on the right side. The stroke was so true and furious that the Englishmen, already unbalanced, was driven on to his back on the sand. Marigny wrenched the blade free, and stooped with obvious intent to plunge it again through his opponent's body. A warning shout from each of the three spectators withheld him. He scowled vindictively, but dared not make that second mortal thrust. These French gentlemen whom he had summoned from Paris were bound by a rigid code of honor that would infallibly have caused him to be branded as a murderer had he completed matters to his satisfaction. Nevertheless, he bent and peered closely into Medenham's face, gray now as the sand on which he was lying.

"I think it will serve," he muttered to himself. "May the devil take him, but I thought he would get the better of me!"

He turned away with an affectation of coolness which he was far from feeling, while the doctor knelt to examinne Medenham's injury. He saw someone running towards him, but believed it must be one of the witnesses, and his eyes fell to the stained blade in his hand.

"I rather forgot myself——" he began.

But the excuse was stopped short by a blow on the angle of the jaw that stretched him by Medenbam's side and apparently as lifeless.

Assuredly, Dale was not versed in the punctilio of the duel, but he knew how and where to hit with a fist that was hard as one of his own spanners. He put weight and passion into that punch, and scarcely understood how effective it was until he found himself struggling in the grasp of two excited Frenchmen. He cursed both them and Marigny fluently, and vowed the most horrible vengeance on all three, but soon calmed himself sufficiently to see that Count Edouard could not stir, and his perturbed wits then sought to learn the extent of his master's injury. Still he swore at Marigny.

"Damn you!" he cried hoarsely, "you would have stabbed him as he was lying there if these pals of yours hadn't stopped you!"

At last recovering some degree of self-possession, he assisted the astounded and rather frightened Frenchmen to carry Medenham to the waiting carriage. One, who spoke English asked him to help in rendering a like service to Marigny, but he refused with an oath, and the others dared not press him, he looked so fierce and threatening.

"Is he dead?" he asked the doctor brokenly.

There could be no mistaking the meaning of the words, for his redshot eyes glared fixedly at the limp body of his master. The other shook his head, but pointed in the direction of Calais, as though to suggest that the sooner the injured man was taken to some place where his wound could be properly attended to, the better would be the faint chance of life that remained. By this time the seconds were approaching, and Marigny had seemingly recovered to a slight extent from the knockout blow which he had received so unexpectedly.

The doctor, who was the only self-collected person present, pointed to the bicycle.

"Hotel," he said emphatically. "Go hotel—quick!"

Dale was minded not to desert his master, but the anxiety in the doctor's face warned him that the request ought to be obeyed. If the spark of vitality still flickering in Medenham's body was to be preserved not a moment should be lost in preparing a room for his reception.

Gulping down his anguish, Dale mounted and made off. At a distant bend in the road he turned his head and looked back along that dismal heath. All five were packed in the cab, and the coachman was urging the unwilling horse into a trot.

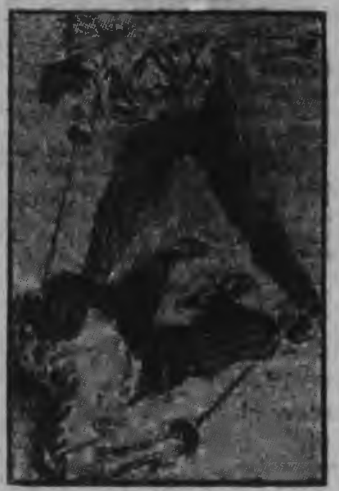
And what of Cynthia?

The break in the weather was the one thing needed to put an abrupt end to all pretense of enjoyment so far as the Windermere tourists were concerned. Strained relations existed from the moment Vanrenen arrived at Chester. For the first time in her life, Cynthia thought her father was not acting with the open-eyed justice which she expected from him, and for the first time in his life Peter Vanrenen harbored an uneasy suspicion that his daughter had not been quite candid with him. It was impossible, of course, in the close intimacy of long hours spent together in a touring car, that there should not be many references to Fitzroy and the Mercury. They were inevitable as the milestones, and Vanrenen, who was just as prone as other men to look at facts through his own spectacles, failed to understand how an intelligent girl like his daughter could remain in constant association with Viscount Medenham for five days, and yet not discover his identity.



Stooped, with obvious intent to plunge it again through his opponent's body.

More than once, indeed, notwithstanding the caution exercised by the others—engaged now in a tacit conspiracy to dispel memories of a foolish entanglement from the girl's mind—the identification of Fitzroy with the young Viscount trembled on the very lip of discovery. Thus, on Friday, when they had motored to Grasmere, and had gathered before lunch in the lounge of the delightfully old-fashioned Rothay Hotel, Vanrenen happened to pick up an illustrated paper, containing a page of pictures of the Scarland short-horns.

Now, being a busy man, he gave little heed to the terminological convolutions of names among the British aristocracy. He had not the slightest notion that the Marquis of Scarland's wife was Medenham's sister, and, with the quick interest of the Stock-breeder, he pointed out to Mrs. Leland an animal that resembled one of his own pedigree bulls, at present waxing fat on the Montana ranch. For the moment Mrs. Leland herself had forgotten the relationship between the two men.

"I met the Marquis last year at San Romo," she said heedlessly. "Anyone more unlike a British peer you could not imagine. If I remember rightly, he is a blunt, farmer-like person, but his wife is very charming. By the way, who was she?"

Such a question could not pass Mrs. Devar unanswered.

"Lady Betty Fitzroy," she chirped instantly.

Cynthia, who was looking through the window at the square-towered church, throned midst the sombel yews which shelter the graves of Wordsworth and his kin, caught the odd conjunction of names—"Betty" and "Fitzroy."

"Who is that you are speaking of, father?" she asked, though with a listless air that Medenham had never seen during any minute of those five happy days.

"The Marquis of Scarland—the man from whom I bought some cattle a few years ago," he said, trusting to the directness of the reply to carry it through unchallenged.

Cynthia's brows puckered in a reflective frown.

"That is odd," she murmured.

"What is odd?" asked her father, while Mrs. Leland bent over the periodical to hide a smile of embarrassment.

"Oh, just a curious way of running in grooves people have in this country. They call towns after men and men after towns."

She was about to add that Fitzroy had told her of a sister Betty who was married to a man named Scarland, a breeder of pedigree stock, but checked the impulse. For some reason known best to her father, he did not seem to wish any mention to be made of the vanished chauffeur, but she did not guage the true extent of his readiness to drop the subject on that occasion.

Montreal Man So Ill With Dyspepsia Thought He Would Die.

No more convincing evidence was ever put on paper than the following letter from one of Montreal's well-known citizens, Mr. D. R. Larose, of 338 Joliette street.

"Permit me to write you a few words concerning Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for five years. I suffered so much that I could hardly attend to my work. I was weak and lost all courage. I enjoyed no rest until I decided to follow your treatment after having read your advertisement in the paper. To my great surprise I immediately began to feel better. I am now using the second box and I feel so well that I want to tell you that I owe this great change to your famous pills. I recommend them to every person who is suffering from dyspepsia. Your grateful servant, D. R. Larose, 338 Joliette st., Montreal, P.Q.

Let all who have weak stomachs, and those who suffer with indigestion, headaches, biliousness, know they can be perfectly cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Successfully used for many years, mild and safe. 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

KING AS A GARDENER.

His Majesty Has Grown Vegetables Ever Since He Was a Boy.

The fact is not generally known that King George is extremely fond of gardening, though he has not now so much time to devote to this pastime as was the case when he was Duke of Cornwall and York. Then the present King and Queen passed the greater part of their year at York Cottage, Sandringham, and His Majesty cultivated a small garden entirely by himself, resolutely refusing any assistance save that of the Queen, who would occasionally help him to prune the rose trees and other light tasks of that description.

Vegetable growing strongly appealed to His Majesty, and he was always highly delighted when he could send a couple of cabbages or a basket of peas to Queen Alexandra for her especial use that he had planted and grown himself.

This love of gardening has existed with His Majesty since he was quite a boy, when he and the late Duke of Clarence and Avondale were each assigned a plot of land in the kitchen gardens of Sandringham for their own use. This garden they were expected to keep trim and in proper order throughout the year. Here the tastes of the two young princes varied in rather striking fashion. The late Duke of Clarence grew flowers, to the exclusion of everything else. Roses in particular were a passion with him, and throughout the summer months, wherever Queen Alexandra might be staying, there was always one small vase upon her writing-table filled with a handful of blooms grown for her by her elder son.

King George, however, modelled his garden in more practical shape, and devoted his attention to growing useful things, such as potatoes and turnips and carrots. As he once put it, with boyish frankness, "Roses are all very well, but you cannot eat them when you are hungry." Only those who know His Majesty can realize what an extremely good agriculturist he is. Anything connected with farming, from the rearing of prize cattle down to experiments with new varieties of seed potatoes, appeals to him most strongly, and he will often sit up far into the night reading some work upon a new phase of farming.

The King encourages his sons to take an interest in gardening, and each has his own plot at York Cottage. It is a matter for constant regret with little Prince Henry, the third son of the King and Queen, that his absence at boarding school prevents him from tending this all the year round, since he shares his father's love of gardening to a very considerable extent. He has, however, a small garden at his school, and Queen Mary was both surprised and delighted to find a large bunch of sweet peas placed upon her breakfast table upon the morning of her coronation last June. These the little prince had grown for his mother.

The King has been heard to declare that gardening is the most invigorating pastime in the world, and that if more men would devote only an hour or two every day to work in their gardens there would be fewer complaints of liver trouble and less need for physical culture of an artificial nature. Within the past twelve months he has been known to take a spade and dig most vigorously for some time, scarcely pausing to rest. Afterwards he has declared himself to feel ever so much better for it.

Book Bound In 1,000 Gems.

The most costly bound book in the world is shortly to be sold by auction in London. It is a copy of the original edition of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, the green morocco covers of which are literally studded with a thousand gems set in gold. To be exact, there are 1,050 stones in gold settings, firmly fixed in the leather, the book having taken nearly two years to produce. The gems include rubies, amethysts, emeralds, garnets, turquoises, topazes, and olivines.

The front cover, besides being richly gemmed with flashing jewels, is decorated with three peacocks inlaid in the natural colors. The eyes of the feathers are jewelled with ninety-seven topazes, all being specially cut to the correct shape of the eye. The eyes of the birds are of rubies and the crests of topazes. A border depicting a vine has 250 amethysts studded in groups to represent bunches of grapes.

On the back cover of this marvellous book is a faithful model of a Persian mandoline made of mahogany and inlaid with silver, pearl, satinwood, and ebony. A snake with eyes of emeralds and a skull with teeth of ivory are other ornaments of this unique book, which is cased in a carved-oak casket.

Man v. Bear.

Maryborough, Queen's County, Ireland, had the curious spectacle recently of a fight between a man and a bear, happily involving no serious injury to the man. The animal, which belonged to a traveling circus, was being led by a boy along a road in Maryborough when it became vicious and attacked its custodian. Mick Hale, a man from Belfast, went to the rescue, and an exciting contest on the roadside followed for about 15 minutes. Eventually, Hale, who is a powerfully built fellow, got clear of the bear's embraces, and made a dash for a farmhouse some distance away, with the now infuriated, but, luckily, muzzled beast in hot pursuit. Fortunately, neighbors turned up with pitchforks and spades and the bear was driven off. Hale was in a very exhausted state when taken into the farmhouse, but fortunately he escaped with a few slight flesh wounds.

James Walger, aged 26, an electrician, was killed by a live wire while investigating the wiring in a residence under construction.

The firm of R. G. Sturgeon have recently completed the installation of a sedimentation tank for the Town of Bowmanville, which is giving entire satisfaction to the people of that place.

While the system installed in Bowmanville by R. G. Sturgeon also is on a small scale compared with what would be required for Peterborough, Mr. Sturgeon feels positive he could install a system for Peterborough at a low cost that would give entire satisfaction.

PRESENTATION AT THE SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL

Mr. H. A. Yenney, principal of the South Central school, who has been promoted to the principalship of the Queen Alexandra, was pleasantly surprised on Saturday by a totally unexpected and very substantial presentation in the form of a finely upholstered mission oak chair, accompanied by a gold mounted fountain pen The gifts came from the South Central teaching staff, the pupils and Mr. John Lachour, caretaker of the building. During the years that Mr. Yenney has been in charge at the South Central he has been a popular and successful instructor, and always taking a keen and active interest in the sports connected with the school, especially in the public school baseball league.

It is hardly necessary to state that Mr. Yenney was greatly surprised by the evidences of the esteem in which he was regarded by the staff and pupils of the school, which he is leaving

HOURS FOR LAUNCHES AT THE LIFT LOCK

Arrangements have been made at the Lift Lock, whereby launches will be locked at 8 and 11 o'clock each morning and at 3 and 6 o'clock, each afternoon. These hours apply to launches travelling up the canal or down.

Owners of these crafts will appreciate the privilege, which is now theirs and it is hoped that none will abuse it. Next to a baulky engine a launch owner generally opines that a lockmaster is the meanest of the mean but as there are always two sides to the story, the launch owners in this case can facilitate matters considerably by following rules and regulations and co-operate with the men at the Lock.

FIRST MARRIED IN NEW CHURCH

To-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon at three o'clock the first wedding to be celebrated in the new Murray street Baptist church will take place, that of Mr. Hanlan Sisson and Miss Edna Fitzgerald, daughter of the late G. W. Fitzgerald, of Peterborough.

In conformity with an ancient and time-honored custom, the trustees of the church will present to the young couple a handsome family bible, the ceremony of marriage and presentation being performed by Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor.

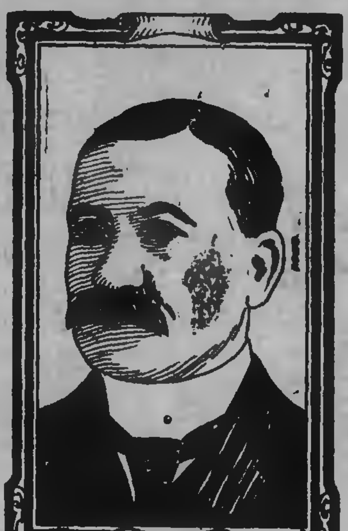
While the custom of presenting a bible to the first couple to be married in a church, after its erection, is one generally observed, it may be of interest to note that not only is it an ancient English custom, but the ancient law as well. No doubt no one would go so far as to enforce the law, but it was so provided, and our friends of the Murray street church are gracefully doing the right thing, and what is always commendable, keeping outside the arm of the statutes. It is well.

THE PEOPLE'S LAWYER

MAHLON K. COWAN IS FAST EARNING THAT TITLE.

Canadian Lawyer, Who Was Formerly Assistant Solicitor For the Grand Trunk Railway, Has Appeared of Late on Behalf of the Public and His Victories as a Champion of the People Are Many.

Mahlon K. Cowan, K.C., is fast becoming known throughout Canada as the "People's Lawyer." He was for a number of years assistant solicitor of the Grand Trunk Railway System and in that capacity appeared hundreds of times before the Dominion Railway Commission. He may fairly be regarded as a traffic expert, and when he appears now-a-days against the railway companies they find it difficult to get away with the old-time bluffs. He scored a big victory as counsel for Saskatchewan and Alberta when the Railway Commission put the burden of proof upon the railway companies to justify their charging higher freight rates in the west than in the east, and those who followed the anthracite coal case in Toronto the other day believe that in this case "Mel" Cowan is going to win another victory for the people.



MAHLON K. COWAN, K.C.

Mr. Cowan was born in Essex County, May 10, 1863. He was called to the Bar and practiced for years in Windsor. In 1896 he was elected to the House of Commons as a Liberal and was re-elected in 1900. His home is now in Toronto. He lives at the Alexandra Apartments and is carrying on his profession as a member of the firm of Beatty, Blackstock, Fasken, Cowan and Chadwick.

Mr. Cowan must have been a great politician in his time, being magnetic, companionable, and with a never failing memory for faces and friends. As a lawyer, his great strength lies in his ability to seize the one important point and cling to it without fussing over trivialities and details. He is in a position to render great service by appearing in the public interest before the Railway Commision, the committees of Parliament and the courts.

Col. Seely's Forecast.

Col. Seely received officials of the Aero Club and airmen at the British House of Commons recently, and explained to them the details of the scheme for the Royal Flying Corps. He mentioned that married men would be eligible for the corps. Referring to the prospects of an officer in the Royal Flying Corps, he said he could not undertake to find him employment in the state after having finished his time. It was very probable if the scheme developed, as he thought it was bound to do, that officers who had finished their time might find employment in connection with some of the branches of the art apart from actual flying. The Royal Flying Corps must be ready, in the hour of national emergency, to serve anywhere beyond the seas. When all was complete Britain should have a far larger proportion of aircraft than any Continental nation. It might be that they ought to have a still greater proportion, but it was a good beginning. In answer to Mr. Cody, Col. Seely said that the Government were prepared to undertake the repair of an airman's own machine if it was damaged in reasonable circumstances, at the Central Flying School, and the machine would still remain the property of the airman.

True In Every Language.

Tennyson once attended a dinner where G. L. Craik proposed "The Ladies." In doing so he recalled the cynical advice given by a brother Scot to his children: "Tak my advice and dinna marry for siller. You can borrow cheaper." Some time later Tennyson at his own table repeated Mr. Craik's story, but expressed the idea without attempting dialect. His son, Hallam, remarked, Surely, father, Craik did not use those words." "Na, he did not; but, then, Craik is a Scotchman, and I am afraid to venture on repeating him exactly. However, it's almost as good in English as in Scotch, and it's tremendously true in both."

A Love Tragedy.

A Welsh M.P. is telling this story: "Gwr," it appears, is Welsh for "husband," and the fact has led almost to a breach of promise action. A beauteous Welsh maiden descended from her native hills to visit her lover, who had been taken on as a porter at a Great Western Railway station. When she saw him arrayed in the uniform, with "G. W. R." on coat collar and cap, she denounced him as a base deceiver and returned home again, indignantly rejecting his attempts to explain.—London Tit-Bits.

P. C. MEHARRY RESIGNS FROM LOCAL FORCE

Numerous Applications for Position of Police Officer

The Police Commissioners, at a meeting on Saturday, appointed J. F. Reid as constable on the Peterborough police force to fill the vacancy caused by P.C. Kidd's promotion. The new officer hails from Hamilton, previous to then being stationed in Scotland. He is a Scotchman by birth, and a promising looking addition to the force.

A letter was read from John Meharry, tendering his resignation as constable to take effect on July 15th, 1912. The resignation was accepted, on motion of Mr. Dumble and Major Bradburn.

Applications for the position of constable were read from William Sill, H. J. Peake, B. R. Fishburne, J. H. Benson, Arthur W. Blade, W. J. Wakeling, Henry Clancy, Thomas Weller, Alfred Garland, Malcolm Campbell, Robert Scott, Bernard Elliott and James F Reid.

The chief constable was instructed to obtain further information regarding Wm. Sill, R. Scott and W. J. Wakeling.

FISTIC BATTLE AT MARKET ARCADE

George Gauthier One of the Principals Was Marked

A fight occurred late Saturday night in the market arcade, in which George Gauthier was rather severely battered up about the face.

The origin of the fracas could not be ascertained, owing to the jam of people who rushed to the spot.

The crowds melted away quickly, however, as a blue coat hove in view, the combatants also disappearing in remarkably speedy manner. No arrests were made.

CLERKS WANT HALF HOLIDAY ON THURSDAYS

What about the usual Thursday afternoon half-holiday this summer, during July and August? That question is being freely circulated just now among the clerks, salesmen and other store people, who have in past summers found the half-holiday to be a decided boon. The rapid approach of the summer months is ample reason why some definite announcement should be given out by the merchants and those in control.

The clerks feel that the holiday would afford them an opportunity to attend some of the baseball games.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Thos. Turnbull

The death occurred at Kingston on Thursday of last week of Mrs. Thos. Turnbull, mother of Messrs. Joseph and George Turnbull, of Peterborough. The deceased was 68 years of age and her death terminated a long illness. The funeral took place on Saturday.

Death of Mrs. Crafts

Word was received in the city this morning of the death at Toronto of Mrs. Crafts, formerly of Peterborough. The only particulars given are that the remains will be brought here on the 5.57 C.P.R. train to-night. It is believed that the lady referred to is Mrs. Crafts who, before going to Toronto four years ago, resided on Water street and was a member of George street Methodist church. There are three daughters and one son, one of the daughters, Miss Amy Crafts, being with her mother, who had not been in the best of health for some time.

Melven Joseph Scott

Melven Joseph, aged two years and eleven months and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Scott, 565 Harvey street, passed away yesterday. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery.

REV. D. SPARLIN HAS PASSED AWAY

Winnipeg, June 17.—The Rev. Dr. Sparling, Principal of Wesley College, died here yesterday as the result of an attack of cerebral hemorrhage, which occurred on Thursday morning.

Dr. Sparling graduated from Victoria University in 1871, and after filling various pastorates was appointed principal of Wesley College, Winnipeg, in 1888. He was born in Blanchard, Perth county, 69 years ago.

BRITISH CAPITALISTS PASSING THROUGH PETERBORO'

They Represent Two Hundred and Forty Million Dollars of Invested Capital and Employ Over One Hundred Thousand Hands.

The special train bearing the 72 distinguished British capitalists, was due at Peterborough at 5.08 this afternoon, via C.P.R. She was running about thirty minutes behind the regular 4.19 express to Toronto.

His Worship Mayor Bradburn and as many of the City Council members as possible will be present at the station to meet some of the capitalists who may alight during the six minute stop at the special here.

Included in the list are Mr. James N. Vickers of Vickers, Limited, Sheffield, and Barrow-in-Furness, having a capital of $39,760,000 and employing 25,000 persons; Mr. George T. Neilson, of William Beardmore and Company, Glasgow and Dalmuir, Dumbartonshire, of $12,500,000 capital and employing 15,000 men; Mr. Alfred Moorehouse, F.I.A., of the Friends Benevolent Institution, Bradford Yorks, with $17,000,000 capital; Mr. A. Beckerton, Balmfort, engineer of the National Gas Engine Company, with a capital of $5,000,000; Mr. D. McLogan, representing six engineering and steel manufacturing companies of a combined capital of approximately $9,000,000; Mr. Thomas Davidson, manager of the India Rubber, Gutta Percha and Telegraph Works, Limited, of a capital of $4,060,000; Mr. Edward Andrews, manager of the Festiniog District Slate Quarry Proprietors' Association with a capital of $4,000,000; and Mr. James Deuchar, of James Deuchar, Limited, brewers and wholesale spirit merchants, with a capital of $4,000,000.

The visitors are looking over the country with a view to developing trade and investigating capital.

The men represent two hundred and forty million dollars of invested capital, and they employ more than one hundred thousand men.

MEAT DEALERS IN NEW YORK WILL CLOSE THEIR SHOPS

Special to the Review.

New York, June 17—The trade organisation, recently formed by six thousand kosher butchers in greater New York, to combat the increased prices of meats, to-day, ordered all its members to close their shops tomorrow as a spectacular protest against the wholesalers' exactions. As a result it is expected that the supply of meat for over three thousand people will be cut off and wholesalers will be left with an immense quantity of meat on their hands.

LAID AT REST

The funeral of the late Rolland Howden took place this afternoon, from the late residence, Lansdowne Avenue, to St. John's church, and thence to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. J. C. Davidson and Rev. F. J. Sawers officiating.

Among the many beautiful floral tributes were those from Collegiate Institute, Y.M.C.A., and St. John's Sunday school. St. John's church was crowded by friends of the family. The pall-bearers were Norman Wilson, Percy Stock, Burton Throop, Harold Hill, Ernest Kilney, and Arthur Hall. The hymns sung were "Nearer My God to Thee," and "On the Resurrection Morning."

Miss Tilley Dead.

Toronto, June 17.—The death of an old and respected resident of the city occurred at St. John's Hospital yesterday afternoon when Miss Julia Tilley, daughter of the late Mr. Leonard Tilley, Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick, and Finance Minister under Sir John A. Macdonald, passed away after a short illness from heart trouble. Miss Tilley had been a resident of Toronto for the past 25 years, coming here shortly after her father's death in 1887. She was 60 years of age.

Train Wreck In Sweden Kills Twenty.

Linkoeping, Sweden, June 17.—Eighteen persons were killed and sixteen injured in a collision which occurred Saturday night between a mail train proceeding to Stockholm and a freight train at Malmslaett Station. Among the victims was a daughter of the late Auguste Strindberg, the novelist. The first sleeping car of the express was completely wrecked and two others were badly damaged.

Two of the injured died last night, bringing the total up to twenty.

Big Mission Collection.

Toronto, June 17.—The largest sum that has been raised in a single day since their first convention held here was contributed yesterday by the Christian and Missionary Alliance, at the concluding day of their annual convention, held at the Toronto Bible Training School. Following appeals at the afternoon and evening sessions, the sum of $20,100 was pledge to be devoted to the support of missionaries in the foreign field.

Hon. Col. Hughes gave an address in which he stated that he was opposed to returning the Bunker Hill cannon.

FLYING HIGH AND LOW.

There is a distinct advantage in flying at a reasonably high elevation. In case of accidental stoppage of the motor or other incident necessitating descent without power the production of sustaining force ceases. The inertia of the machine, notwithstanding this, keeps up its velocity for a time, so that descent will begin gradually. It may even be checked or altogether offset for a time by increasing the inclination of the planes, but this introduces a supernormal direct resistance and accelerates the exhaustion of that very inertia of velocity which is necessary to suspension.

Yet by properly manipulating the planes it is quite possible to retain a margin of velocity which shall be available at the last instant to decrease the rate of downward movement suddenly while at the same time bringing the machine as a whole to rest within a very short distance of the point where it strikes the ground. The whole manipulation which produces this result is merely that of adjusting the inclination of the planes so that they make a very slight angle only with the trajectory until the latter has brought the machine close to the ground, and then, abruptly increasing the inclination until descent is entirely checked.

Many accidents have occurred during descent, and the character of the ground on which landing is to be effected is a matter of moment. The higher the altitude of flight the more choice is there as to the point of landing and the more control (if the altitude be not too great) will the operator possess over his machine with regard to such landing position. The safest altitude, should the motor fail, is not necessarily, therefore, a low altitude. A fall of thirty feet is just as serious as one of a thousand feet.—Engineering Magazine.

The politician who is ready to promise all kinds of wonderful things went out of date along with the lightning rod man.—Washington Star.

"Sir, are you opposed to votes for women?"

"Certainly not, but if women had the ballot then suffragettes would want it too."—Siren.

I'm for the Mother Hubbard.
With me it takes the prize.
It may lack lace and style and grace,
But it's minus hooks and eyes.
—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Tax on Bachelors Over Twenty-four.

At the last sitting of the town council of Nagyperkata, Hungary, it was decided almost unanimously to introduce a special tax on bachelors over twenty-four. The amount is to vary between 20 pence and £4, according to the pecuniary circumstances of each unmarried man. The proceeds will be entirely devoted to the foundation and maintenance of an asylum for poor homeless children.—Vienna Cor. London Daily News.

PETES DROPPED SECOND GAME TO THE TECUMSEHS

The despatch on the London Peterboro game Saturday says—

Tecumsehs took revenge on the lowly Peterboro team to-day, handing them a shut out, the score being 4 to 0. Swell pitching by Matt Hynes London's best bet, was responsible for the win, the Palmerston lad holding the visitors to three hits, two of them being very scratchy. Fielding features were furnished by Cocash and Templin, both of whom played the sunfield in remarkable fashion. Bierbauer had three hits in three trips to the plate, being responsible for three of London's runs. Left MacDonald, released by Bowerman on Friday, pitched against his old teammates, and did good work. Feard badly misjudged two flies in centrefield, allowing three runs to score. Templin replaced him and prevented further damage.

Score		R	H	E
London	10200100x —	4	7	5
Peterboro	00000000 —	0	3	1

Batteries—Hynes and Speer; MacDonald and Trout. Umpire—Phyle.

NEW LEADER PLACED IN CHARGE OF THE WHITE CAPS

The Peterborough White Caps as they play in Berlin to-day and to-morrow, will be guided by a new leader in the person of Mr. Dave Rowan, who was with Toronto Eastern League team part of last season, he having been bought by Manager Kelly, from the St. Louis Americans.

While with St. Louis, he was third in the team's batting record. Mr. Rowan has owned and managed a baseball club, and he takes charge of the Peterborough Club, highly recommended by Manager Kelly, of the Toronto Club. Mr. Rowan was in the city on Saturday, after having been in touch with the Directors for some time past, and the result was that the meeting terminated in the departure of Mr. Rowan and one of the directors for London, where the former was placed in charge of the team.

The White Caps after the series in Berlin, will return home for the remainder of the month. The Hamilton team will be here next Wednesday and Thursday, and St. Thomas for the next four playing days. London and Brantford will finish out the month, after which the Petes pass on to Ottawa, playing two games on Dominion Day.

Riverside Park will be in grand shape for the home games and there is every assurance that the strengthened Petes and their new manager will make things interesting for the visiting clubs.

London, Ont., June 16—It was announced here to-day that Old Folks Templin, manager of the Peterboro team had been released by the owners, and Davy Drohan, of Toronto, who played with Kelly's crew last season under the name of Rowan, had been appointed manager in his stead. Peterboro has been going badly all Spring, and the fault has been laid to Templin. There is plenty of material for a first-class team, although the pitching staff needs bracing badly just now. Drohan will take charge at once.

Templin is still in possession of $150 receipts of London games, and $50 expense money, given to him by A. G. Denham, president of Peterboro. This he has refused to give up pending a settlement with the directors. It is thought Templin will go to Peterboro to have the matter amicably arranged.

C G.E. DEFEATED BETHANY BY 3-0 IN LEAGUE GAME

At Brinton Meadows Saturday afternoon, the C.G.E. champions defeated Bethany eleven in a Midland League football contest by 3—0. Ernie Brumwell handled the game and the teams were:

Bethany—Goal Price; backs, Kennedy and Sisson; half backs, Cairns, Bigelow, Brereton; forwards, Wake, Bigelow, Gilles, Delong; centre, Hordman.

C. G. E.—Goal, Evans; backs, Gribb, Hall; half backs, Mason, Pagett, Vickers; forwards, Smith, French, Discon, Williams; centre, McGeeham.

In the senior series, Bowmanville defeated Oshawa by 2—1 and lost the round, Oshawa having won at home by 2—0. Bowmanville has entered a protest.

In the junior series Bowmanville won from Oshawa by 3—0.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Connolly, the Brantford pitcher who beat the Petes here has been released to allow of the limit.

Bartlett was pulled out in the third at Berlin after six hits and four runs were against him.

Bill Shaeffer won another game for Guelph, allowing St. Thomas only 4 hits. Guelph made 26 hits off two pitchers.

AN EXPLANATION REGARDING REPORT ON FALL GAME

Directors of the Peterborough Baseball Club have taken exception to the article in the Review of last Friday, regarding the game between Peterborough and the London team, they feeling that certain statements made were a reflection on themselves.

The terms "four flushers" and "fraud" were used, but in all sincerity it can be stated that it was not intended that the Directors of the Ball Club were included directly or indirectly.

An injury has been done unintentionally and no one regrets it more than the writer, who believing that an explanation is due, offers the same and hopes that it will be accepted.

The gentlemen who make up the Directorate of the Club are all busy men, yet they have given generously of their time to the arduous work of running a ball team, and they have acted in a manner that places them far above those statements made in the report of the game.

Novelist Loved Another Woman.

Chicago, June 17.—Testimony in the divorce suit of Mrs. Richard Harding Davis against the author was heard Saturday by Superior Judge McDonald. Mrs. Davis and her brother, Bruce Clark of New York, told the court that she was deserted by her husband in May 1910.

"He cared for another woman" was the reason given for the desertion.

Mr. Davis was represented by attorney, but did not contest the case. The testimony was ordered transcribed for submission to the court.

McLAUGHLIN-BUICK MOTOR CARS

Automobile purchasers may be divided into three classes:

Those to whom low price is a greater consideration than service ability.

Those to whom price is no obstacle in gratifying a taste for the exclusive and the luxurious.

Then there is the great middle class—those who are prepared to make only a moderate expenditure but at the same time demand a car with power, style, stamina, and beauty.

It is the latter who will purchase the two thousand odd cars the McLaughlin Carriage Co. is building this year.

The style and beauty can be judged from the many McLaughlin cars to be seen on the streets and in the McLaughlin showrooms.

The power plant and the stamina of the McLaughlin car as a whole is guaranteed by the stability and integrity of the house of McLaughlin. To appreciate what this means it must be known that the McLaughlin Carriage Co. embodies in every car forty-three years of experience.

The service of a McLaughlin car is assured by the immense factory at Oshawa and the branch houses and agencies in all the leading cities and towns in Canada.

CLAIM OFFER IS NOT JUST

When Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, visited Campbellford last week, he heard the complaints of manufacturers, Electric Light and Waterworks Commissioners, the Board of Trade and the Town Council with regard to the removal of the dam and the loss of what is practically free power now enjoyed by the several concerns mentioned. The Government has decided that the dam must go and July 1st is the date set for beginning the work of removal.

It is stated that the Minister made the Campbellford manufacturers an offer to supply a certain amount of power and to pay half the cost of equipping their factories with electric machinery.

The Campbellford Dispatch says this offer is considered as neither just to the present owners of the dam or to the manufacturers.

HOW WE MAY EXTRACT THE BEST THAT THIS LIFE OFFERS

Practical Sermon by Rev. Isaac Couch, to the I.O.F. "Show Thyself a Man"

The sermon that Rev. Isaac Couch preached to the Independent Order of Oddfellows last evening in George st. Methodist church, was replete with good practical suggestions for the guidance of those in the order, and also for all who would extract the very best that life offers.

A fairly good representation of the Society, were in attendance occupying the front pews of the centre aisle, specially reserved for them. The motto of the order, said the pastor, should be "By Love Serve Ye One Another." "It is because of others that you men have joined the society" he continued in prefacing his adress. "You did not expect to derive much out of your connection with the order; you were thinking of others. It is a noble thing to see men caring for the weaker sex, for the children and for others. The recent Titanic disaster reminded us of this law that prevails upon the waters, that the women and children are to be saved first.

Choosing as his text the words found in King 1-2-2, "Be thou strong therefore, and show thyself a man" the pastor then proceeded with his main address.

To be an ideal man, one must possess a trinity of qualities; a strong body, a full orbed mind, and a spiritual nature.

Beginning with the first of these three requirements, Rev. Mr. Couch enlarged on the means whereby their development and cultivation was possible. "It is no credit to any man to neglect the house in which God has placed his mind and soul."

"If we are going to be efficient in this busy age, and hold our own in these fierce competitive days, we must be in possession of sturdy muscles, a healthy liver, and a good digestion. A man seriously handicaps himself in life, if he does not pay rigid attention to the rules of health.

"There is many a man who strictly adheres to the ten commandments and who yet breaks with impunity the laws of health.

Speaking next of mental development the speaker pointed out that in a prize-fighter, one usually sees a good physical body, but outside of the prize ring, he didn't count much, meaning thereby that the prize-fighter's mental culture was subsidiary to his physical.

"In the pages of history the men who have attracted the world's attention, have been men of mental and moral muscle. If we were to take physical strength alone as a standard, we would rank lower than the animals. But a man to-day is not to be measured by his body. To-day the world is not ruled by muscular strength, but rather by mind.

The speaker here urged the congregation to read literature that would stimulate their thinking powers and to thoroughly digest what they read.

"That man's opinion is no good which is merely the echo of the last editorial he has read."

The pastor also made an earnest plea for his hearers to guard well the door of their minds, and to present an impregnable barrier to evil thoughts.

"Just as we cultivate the intellect by study; the taste by art, and the imagination by poetry, so the only way to cultivate the will is by exercising it.

The saddest thing under heaven is a man whose will is decayed; for example the drunkard.

Referring in conclusion to spiritual development, the pastor likened a man without it, to a magnificent ship without a rudder.

"A man may have great muscular strength, an intellectual mind, and yet not enough will power to control his lower nature. He may allow sensuality to drag him down. The best athlete is the man who is willing to try conclusions with his lower nature and put his foot on its neck, and to do this requires more than intellectual brilliancy. The best way to do this was to make a study of God's word, and by prayer and communion with God.

In concluding he exhorted the I.O.F to be strong physically, look well after their mental development and their spiritual culture, thereby exerting an influence that would cause their order to be more than ever looked up to and respected.

On the return of the order to their lodge rooms, a vote of thanks was tendered to the pastor, Rev. Mr. Couch, the choir and those who helped to make the annual church service a success.

Brother Allison and Ingram, marshalled the parade.

REV. J. G. BROWN SAYS FAREWELL TO ST. JAMES' CONGREGATION

He Goes to Enderby B. C. After Three Years of Fruitful Work Here.

Both services in St. James' Methodist church yesterday were largely attended, especially in the evening, the occasion being the farewell sermon of the pastor, Rev. J. G. Brown, who leaves soon for Enderby, B.C.

Rev. Mr. Brown has been a faithful and much beloved pastor at St. James' for the past three years, during which time he has extended the hand of church fellowship to two hundred and fifty souls.

In speaking a few words of farewell last evening at the close of the evening service, he remarked upon the great joy it gave him to witness the unmistakable spiritual blessings which had followed in the path of those who had entered into the folds of the church. He expressed the regret called forth by his necessary departure, and referred to the many happy and pleasant memories he would carry with him to his new field.

He chose for his text in the evening, Heb. 13; 8—"Jesus Christ, the same, yesterday, to-day and forever."

His discourse in part was as follows:

"It is part of the office of the minister to preach Jesus. The Apostolic band preached it, and only it. Paul said, 'I magnify my office of Apostle, but to preach. Christ was his highest theme. I know nothing but Christ and Him crucified.' We feel a great distance between us and Paul, but we are not so far beneath him, but we would also get Christ before us. Christ finds some like the widow of Nainsson, but He can speak, and they rise up. Some are like Lazarus, steeped in corruption, Christ can speak and they come forth.

"It is one thing to know Christ as a head fact, but another thing to know Him as a living personal experience."

During the service Mr. F. Pratt, sang very effectively, "My God, My Father. While I Stray."

PREACHERS ORDAINED FOR THE GOSPEL BUT NOT TO MAKE LAWS
(Rev. Dr. MacLeod at St. Andrews)

Rev. Dr MacLeod of Barrie, one of the veteran pastors of the Presbyterian church, preached in St. Andrews yesterday morning and evening. Although the doctor has reached the allotted term of life, his eye is not dimmed nor his mental or physical vigor abated. He still reads without glasses and preaches with all the power and vivacity of youth. Among his hearers yesterday were some persons who thirty years ago were members of his congregation and they failed to note any evidence of advancing age in the venerable doctor.

"We preachers," he said, in the course of his morning sermon, "have been ordained to preach the Gospel, not to preach either national or municipal politics. We were not ordained to make laws. No body of men are less fitted for the making of civil laws than are the preachers. If we would confine ourselves to the work for which we have been ordained, the preaching of the Gospel this country would be a great deal better morally than it is to-day."

The doctor expressed the pleasure it gave him to see so many children and young people present at the service.

The annual Sunday School Picnic of this church has been postponed until Wednesday, July 3rd. A steamer has been chartered for the day and family tickets will be sold at 75 cents each.

MISS BESSIE POWELL ESCAPES DROWNING AT GRAVENHURST

A letter to Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Powell from their daughter, Miss Bessie Powell, tells of an accident at Gravenhurst on Thursday of last week, in which Miss Powell and several friends were the principals.

They had been taken for a trip on the water, and when quite a distance from the shore their launch struck a rock and water began to enter the craft.

It so happened, however, that a passing canoeist came to their aid, and taking away as many as possible from the launch, he paddled in all haste to the shore. By quick work to and from the launch all the occupants were taken ashore, shortly before the boat went down.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Members Sorry to Lose Two of Their Number

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association this morning a resolution was passed expressive of the regret felt at the coming departure of Rev. J. G. Brown and Rev. G. W. Henderson. Rev. Mr. Brown is going to British Columbia and Rev. Mr. Henderson to St. Catharines.

GETTING AFTER CATERPILLARS WITH FLY PAPER

Some Peterborough citizens have inaugurated a new system of warfare against the pestiferous caterpillar. Around the trunks of trees on their premises or in front of their residences, six feet or so from the ground so as to be beyond the reach of the predatory small boy, they bind strips of ordinary fly paper with the sticky substance outward. When the caterpillar climbs the trunk of the tree to feast on the foliage, he encounters the fly paper and there meets his doom.

The leaves of the shade trees in the city may yet be saved from distruction if every citizen would adopt this means of fighting the caterpillar.

CAMPBELLFORD HAS AN ACTIVE MOTOR CAR CLUB

Campbellford has organized a motor car club, and, following the example of the Peterborough organization of auto owners is offering prizes to the pathmasters for the best improvements made on the rural highways during the season up to July 31. The raking off of loose stones and the filling up of holes and ruts are to be the chief points considered in the awarding of the prizes. The first prize is 280; second, $15; third, $10; fourth, $5, and the judging is to be finished before August 15th.

TWO FEET OF WATER ON FLOOR

Although the waters in the upper stretches of the lakes are nearly down to the normal level, the water below the Peterborough Lock is still high. A few persons who went down to inspect their cottages yesterday report that the water is far upon the banks and in some cases in their houses. One prominent banker says there is nearly two feet of water on the floor of his cottage. The water is gradually sinking as the heavy supply from the upper lakes slackens.

CHRISTIAN AND MISSIONARY ALLIANCE CONVENTION CLOSED

Rev. J. E. Fee has returned from the Christian and Missionary Alliance Convention for the Dominion of Canada, which has just closed in Toronto and reports it the most successful convention they have held in Canada There seems to be a feeling of greater hope and confidence for the future work of the Alliance. In fact this feeling is not only in Canada, but in all parts of the United States there is a more aggressive spirit shown and a determination to move onward. The following extract from the Mail and Empire gives an account of the last day of the convention, and the results of the great missionary collection.

The success of the convention, which closed last evening, was shown by the amount of the annual missionary offering which was taken immediately after Dr. Simpson's address. The grand after Dr. Simpson's address. The grand total, including amounts collected at local conventions in various Ontario towns and in Toronto churches, was $20,121 in cash and pledges and was the largest ever taken at a convention of the alliance in Canada. Of this nearly $15,000 was collected at yesterday's meeting, eloquently demonstrating the growing interest in Toronto of the work conducted by the organization.

The money was donated in various amounts from $1 up to a magnificent gift of $5,000 from one of the wealthier members. Rev. E. J. Richards, of Binghampton, N. Y., preached an inspiring evangelistic sermon at the evening session, and afterwards conducted a prayer service. A special service of song was rendered by the Toronto Sacred Chorus.

INSPECTOR'S CONFESSIONS.

Pupils Had a Sensational Notion of the Duties of That Officer.

Much has been written concerning the lighter side of school life — the unconscious humor of children, and the amusing episodes in which the teacher, master, and educational authorities have figured. It is doubtful, however, if a more entertaining and instructive volume on the subject has been written than "Memories of a School Inspector." In this book the author, Mr. A. J. Swinburne, who has had many years' experience as His Majesty's inspector of schools, gives a bright and interesting picture of school life. Every parent and every teacher should obtain a copy.

He does not mind telling a story against himself.

"What is a spectre?" he asked one child.

For a moment the awe-stricken youngster could not reply, but at last Mr. Swinburne received the answer:

"One as comes round to examine."

Subsequently it transpired that this child "imagined that the inspector passed his nights among the tombs, whence he issued in daylight enveloped in a mist of blue schedules on which her name would be engraved for eternal weal or woe."

It would seem, however, that it is not always the children who make quaint and amusing replies. In a chapter entitled "Answers," Mr. Swinburne gives some examples of the replies of pupil teachers. Here are a few selections:

"Avoid tight-lacing. Nowadays people have a great tendency to look slight and tall, but a person who is natural and abstains from such degradations is by far the better-looking of the two. If life is wanted, garters must not be tight."

In regard to the same subject, another teacher wrote: "Tight-lacing is horrible, leaving no room for the expansion of the feelings." While another one, without thinking, penned: "Mutton broth makes excellent beef tea."

"Debating societies," says Mr. Swinburne, "please note a budding female teacher's opinion about you: 'Debating societies are often the means of ruining homes and home life. A man's place after the day's work is done is beside his own fire. Often he is drawn away to a certain society. Unhappily, it does not always end in debating, but gradually, by getting with bad companions, he is led on to drink, cards, and numerous other vices, and this means a foresaken home, foresaken wife and children, and often to prison or suicide. Debating societies are evidently best for single persons."

One pupil teacher remarked that "the clinical thermometer should be held in the mouth while the patient holds his breath for five minutes"; adding, "This is too fatiguing for a patient seriously ill."

Another, writing of green vegetables, said: "Sailors who have been living for a considerable time on dried substance experience a longing and dissatisfied feeling. They also make excellent soup."

While another, writing on thrift, said: "Mortgages paying 7 per cent. are a good investment—but a high rate of interest should be regarded with suspicion. I prefer the Bank of England."

Check on the Doctor.

In Beloochistan when a physician gives a dose he is expected to partake of a similar one himself as a guarantee of his good faith. Should the patient die under his hands the relatives, though they rarely exercise it, have the right of putting him to death, unless a special agreemnet has been made for freeing him from all responsibility as to consequences; while, if they should decide upon immolating him, he is expected to yield to his fate like a man.

WAR DECLARED BY ROOSEVELT FACTION RIGHT AT START

Republican Convention Opened at Chicago This Morning With a Taft Man as Temporary Chairman—Roosevelt Men Prepare to Force an Issue by Sweeping Resolution.

SPECIAL TO THE REVIEW

Chicago, June 18th—The opening day of the National Republican Convention saw 1078 delegates assembled to nominate candidates for president and vicepresident and formulate a platform. Frederick Upham is chairman over the great gathering.

It has been estimated that there are over one hundred and fifty thousand visitors in Chicago for the convention. Five hundred policemen have been assigned for duty at the Coliseum, where the convention is meeting and the police authorities are already busy hauling in thieves who have flocked to town for the occasion, necessitiating the increas of the detective force by hundreds of plain clothesmen. An almost unprecedentedly bitter feeling prevails between leaders in the nomination contest. The air is electrically charged and sensations are expected.

The Taft managers figure that the temporary roll as prepared by the National Committee will show a small Taft majority, and that the temporary roll of the Committee will become the temporary roll of the Convention.

Roosevelt leaders on the other hand, familiar with the calculations of the Taft managers, propose to introduce the following resolution in the convention;—That no act or proceeding of this convention shall be in any way effective, unless it shall be supported on roll call by an affirmative vote of 540 delegates, a majority, whose seats are uncontested, and this resolution shall be in force until the permanent organization of the convention shall be effected.

If such a resolution comes to a vote, it will practially decide the nomination, indicating as it will the strength of the opposing factions.

Chicago, June 18.—On the eve of the Republican National Convention, Col. Roosevelt last night disclosed the line of attack which he will make. He laid down two principles. He said that the delegates whose selection he contests must not vote in the organization of the convention or upon the settlement of the contests, and made it clear that he would resist it. He declared that no action of the convention based upon the votes of these "fraudulently seated delegates would be binding upon the Republican party."

It was at the Roosevelt rally in the Auditorium that the ex-President made his challenge. He was facing a cheerful throng which jammed the huge building as tightly as the fire marshal would permit. Reaching far to the rear, to the last line of seats, and to the top of the topmost balcony were solid rows of men and women, delegates from every part of the country, Roosevelt leaders and a host of privates in the Roosevelt army. They gave the ex-President a mighty welcome. Col. Roosevelt made a fighting speech. His hearers were in fighting mood. They cheered him on as he denounced his opponents and shouted to him.

Summarized tersely, the situation is, whether the Republican "elephant" will respond to the vigorous digs of either of two drivers, one ordering it to the left and the other commanding it to turn to the right, or whether it will twist its trunk about each of the drivers in turn and hurl them aside to go its own way. There were indications yesterday that the last contingency is not at all impossible.

In this connection it becomes apparent that the division of delegates between Col. Roosevelt and President Taft on the question of nomination does not hold on any other question to come before the convention. This was shown plainly by the attitude of the Virginian delegation. Although practically all for the renomination of President Taft, nine of the Virginian delegates declared they would vote to overrule the action of the national committee in seating Taft delegates over Roosevelt delegates from California, Texas and Washington.

This sentiment among arriving delegates was seized upon quickly by Col. Roosevelt and his advisers, who have determined to attempt to break down President Taft's strength in the convention through the medium of preliminary ballots.

The Roosevelt managers purpose to focus the fight the minute the convention be called to order, by precipitating a roll call in which only the delegates whose seats are undebated by Col. Roosevelt shall vote.

The Roosevelt men expect to achieve this end by demanding a roll call on the temporary chairmanship or the very first question that comes up before the convention. Then it is expected to have Governor Johnson of California, cast the twenty-six votes for that state on the question. This action by Governor Johnson, it is expected, will be objected to by the two Taft delegates from the fourth California district. This juncture will be grasped by the Roosevelt floor leader as the one upon which to get the "expurged" vote of the delegates. The floor leader will move at once that the temporary roll as made up by the national committee be rejected, and that a substitute roll, including the seventy or eighty delegates claimed by Col. Roosevelt, be adopted. In thus submitting the matter of the debated seats en bloc no delegates affected by the contests could vote on the question, and the Roosevelt men believe that such a poll would give them the upper hand in the organization of the convention.

Fears for the order of the convention were freely expressed and predictions of serious trouble were made frequently during the day. Officers in charge of the convention management extended the police arrangements and the sergeants-at-arms were given emergency instructions.

NEW WORLD'S RECORD MADE IN RIFLE SHOOTING

Special to the Review.

METHODISTS SAY THE GAINS IN CHURCH WORK ARE SMALL

Report at Conference In Toronto Declares That the Labor and Expense of Carrying on Conversion Is Far Greater Then the Number of Accessions—Canada Is Too Prosperous Says One Minister.

Toronto, June 18.—"We are compelled to confess that the additions to the membership of our churches are painfully out of proportion to the investment of men, money and effort which has been made in and by the church."

This clause, embodied in the report of the committee on the state of the work and evangelism at the Methodist conference yesterday, brought forth some warm discussion on the part of the members.

Rev. E. E. Scott thought the general prosperity of the country was the cause of the falling off in church membership. "It is not only in our own Methodist Church where a decline has been felt; it has been evidenced in every denomination," he said. "You can hardly get on a street car nowadays without hearing ministers or church members discussing real estate."

Dr. Speer thought the Methodist leaders seemed to have lost confidence in themselves to hold old-time revival services. "What we now need," said he, "is a season of prayer to God, and we also need the laymen of the church to stand by us in our endeavor to bring in the unconverted."

Rev. J. R. Aikenhead quoted figures to show that last year over 34,000 church members drifted away, and the ministers did not know where they are. Mr. Aikenhead thought that three-quarters of the ministers' time is given to coddling the members out to church and that takes up nearly all their time which should be spent elsewhere.

The following are some interesting statement as submitted in the report:

"The comparatively slight attractiveness of the pulpit to young men as a place of service and an opportunity to invest one's life to the highest advantage, is a widespread complaint. Our own church has, perhaps, suffered less in this regard than some other denominations; but that we, too, are suffering from this cause cannot be denied.

"Let us carefully guard against the temptation to panic, or a resort to the use of methods which cannot effect a cure of what we may deplore; but which, like some patent medicines, will only deceive and ultimately create a worse condition of affairs. For example, in order to secure increased attendance upon our preaching services, let us not degrade our message, or substitute for the evangel of Jesus Christ something more immediately winsome to the carnal mind."

The committee report read by J. W. Flavelle into the inefficient salaries now being tendered ministers in some sections of the community declared that some of these men were absolutely impaired in their work on account of the meagre allowance allotted them.

Although ministerial salaries committees have been organized in nearly every circuit, a great many report inability to accomplish anything on account of the laxity of members and laymen.

Embodied in the report was the clause:

"The committee believes that larger salaries can be given without the loss of one single pleasure or gratification on the part of church members."

At the morning session, the report of the committee on temperance, prohibition and moral reform was adopted almost in toto and with very little discussion. It was thought that Mr. Rowell's policy with respect to the "abolish the bar" policy and observations on race track gambling would arouse much comment. Col. Sam Hughes' stand on the army canteen question was praised, while H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught came in for censure for his presence at race tracks.

Other things the report referred to were the use of tobacco, the white slave traffic, the fact that the presentation of plays, shows or entertainments calculated to corrupt public morals should be made a criminal offence.

Crystal Palace a Gift.

London, June 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Several boroughs surrounding London concur in the proposition that the Crystal Palace should constitute London's gift to the Empire, its maintenance to be defrayed by the Imperial and Dominion Parliaments.

Royal Journalists.

There have been royal journalists as well as royal authors. George III. contributed seven articles to the Annals of Agriculture, a monthly magazine edited by Arthur Young. These were published under the pseudonym of Ralph Robinson and, according to one of his biographers, "display a most profound knowledge of agriculture." Louis XVIII. was a journalist of quite another type. For some years after his accession to the throne he was in the habit of sending anonymous political articles to various Paris dailies. Some of the opinions expressed in these were so advanced that the King had the pleasure of seeing them vetoed by his own censor.

Many Kinds of Paving.

London uses more different kinds of paving material than perhaps any other city in the world. Besides wood and asphalt, macadam, granite, flint, tar macadam, gravel, clinker and a special proprietory material, which furnishes what is known as an "iron" road, on account of its imperviousness, all are used in paving the streets of the metropolis.

London "Moveys."

In London the cost of a ticket to a moving picture show is from 4 to 61 cents. The length of a film required for an average performance lasting from one and a half to one and three-quarter hours approximates 4,500 feet. Important and popular events are often shown on the same day as their occurrence.

TANGIER IS BRITAIN'S CARE

Gibraltar, June 18.—It is reported here on what appears to be good authority, that Tangier will remain under international control, as determined by the Algeciras agreement, but that the British will be in direct charge. The intention is to remove the customs houses beyond the city limits and make Tangier a free port. The plan is regarded with favor here as Gibraltar's business interests in Morocco are large and constantly increasing.

Spaniards in Gibraltar and vicinity look upon the plan with satisfaction, while the large Moorish colony here is wild with joy at the prospect. They prefer an English administration to any other.

California Democrats on Joy Ride.

San Francisco, June 18.—The California Democratic delegates left here yesterday for Baltimore on a special train. The train carries 1,400 quarts of wine, the same amount of grape juice, half a car load of fruit to stock state headquarters and two Champ Clark mascots, a "houn' dawg" and a bear cub.

PREMIER SCOTT GOES TO COUNTRY

Regina, Sask., June 18.—The third Legislature of the Province of Saskatchewan has been dissolved and the writs for a general election issued.

Nominations will take place Thursday, July 4, and polling on Thursday, July 11.

The Legislature just dissolved had a membership of 41, but the next House as a result of a redistribution bill put through at the last session, will have 54 members.

The chief issue of the Liberals is reciprocity, and Conservative railway development. Premier Scott has issued a lengthy appeal to the electorate.

"Leaders may say what they like, the reciprocity issue exists. It is made by the people themselves. Conservatives would like to believe it dead, but it is alive and must ultimately triumph. The issue embraces the entire field of wider markets, freer trade and lower tariffs. By a majority of nearly twenty thousand votes our people declared for these principles last September. They were in earnest then, and unless I misjudge public opinion, the severe lessons of this past season have made them more earnest and more determined to carry on the struggle for their rights.

"It would be idle for me to state this issue is not at stake for this contest. The provincial Conservative party has adopted a policy and formed an alliance that make the situation clear. Let us no longer try to conceal the fact that they look almost solely to the assistance of the Federal Government and its principal machine to bring about their success. The battle cry of the Conservatives became, 'Saskatchewan for Borden and Haultain.' This can only be interpreted as meaning Saskatchewan for limited markets, restricted trade and higher tariffs."

DOMINION MEMBER ON SUPREME COURT DECISION

Largely Satisfactory to Those Who Believe in Supremacy of the State in Dealing With Matters Concerning the People—Legislatures Have Supreme Power in Matters of Marriage.

Mr. Burnham in an interview with a Review representative said to-day, that the decision of the Supreme Court was very largely satisfactory to all those who believe in the supremacy of the State in dealing with matters concerning the people.

"While the Lancaster Bill has been declared ultra vires," said Mr. Burnham, "this does not mean that Parliament has not the power to pass a Bill even more far-reaching and general in its application. The wording of the Lancaster Bill was unfortunate in that it included the word 'Solemnization.'

"The other questions, however, and their answers make it quite clear that Parliament has the supreme power in matters of marriage.

"I do not mean to say that any member of the Court was actuated by other than his consideration of the meaning of the law but the view even of a Judge must necessarily be influenced by the point from which he takes that view. Last winter Mr. Borden in a written answer to a question on the Order paper put there by an Opposition member, the very same question that had been put to Sir Wilfrid Laurier by a Conservative last year, expressed an opposite opinion. Laurier and Aylesworth had said that Parliament has not jurisdiction and they did not propose to submit any question accordingly, but Mr. Borden maintained that Parliament had the power to rectify all such things and he answered the question accordingly, and he submitted the questions to the Supreme Court which have now been answered largely as he foreshadowed.

"The Government, however, has announced that it will appeal to the Privy Council of England and we may expect before the next session of Parliament ends the whole question of supremacy in Canada will be decided once for all in a final manner.

"It must be remembered that these questions have all become acute only since the recent papal decrees which have taken such strong stands and have issued such positive orders to the priesthood that it must now be settled whether the Church of Rome has been given, as she claims, the custody of the whole world and all the people in it or if the people in it are going to have the privilege of saying how they shall govern themselves.

"It is a wonderful spectacle that has taken 2,000 years to mature, this conflict between the greatest ecclesiastical organization that ever existed and the aspirations of the Common People to decide and determine for themselves not what a few of their number clad in black shall decide for them, but what they, themselves, may think best for their own interests. This is Liberty and we must either decide for liberty or bow our heads once for all in deference to this claim of absolute supremacy over us.

"It is worth while quoting the following statement of Mr. Borden from the Revised Hansard, page 1679, where Mr. Borden says: 'I have already stated that in speaking on the question before. The thing to be submitted to the Privy Council or to the Supreme Court of Canada first, and the Privy Council afterwards, is the validity of this Bill, that is to say, the question whether it is within the legislative competence of the parliament of Canada. But I also said that I was quite willing and the Government had determined to submit any further questions in addition to that which would be necessary to define clearly the power of parliament to legislate in such matters.' This plainly shews what Mr. Borden's opinion was."

A special to the Review says that the marriage law case will be carried to the Privy Council and heard about the end of July.

ONTARIO GETS $175,753 FOR AGRICULTURAL PURPOSES

A Cheque For Half That Amount Has Been Turned Over to the Province—How the Money is to be Expended.

Toronto, June 18—The Ontario Government has received its share of the $500,000 grant for agriculture, which the Dominion Government decided to divide among the nine provinces at its last session. It was announced at the Parliament Buildings yesterday that this province would benefit to the amount of $175,753 of the Federal grant. A cheque for one-half of this sum has been received and the balance will be payable when Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, decides that it is necessary to further promote the work of development throughout the province.

Hon. J. S. Duff has been in conference with Hon. Martin Burrell at Ottawa during the past few days mapping out the work that the Provincial Government wished to accomplish with the financial assistance from the Dominion Government. In all, 17 branches of the Department will benefit by the grant.

This grant has no connection whatever with the work of C. C. James, former Deputy Minister of Agriculture, who was recently appointed to a Dominion post in the Department of Agriculture. It is explained that this money is merely a preliminary to a permanent scheme that Mr. James is trying to bring about for the Government, fixing the amount that each province is to receive each year. The Federal grant comes at a very opportune moment to further advance some of the schemes of Hon. Mr. Duff.

Field Husbandry Building, Ontario Agricultural, $40,000.

This will provide for accommodation for the department of field husbandry at the college. It will also give greatly increased facilities for the work in seed improvement carried on in conjunction with 5,000 farmers throughout the province.

District Representatives, $21,000.

This will be used to pay the expenses and some of the salaries in connection with the work of new representatives, and also to extend the work and usefulness of representatives already appointed.

Poultry Work, $10,000.

The object of this is to further develop the poultry industry throughout the province. To do this it is necessary to extend the equipment at the college to carry on breeding work on a larger scale in order to supply both birds and eggs of the best breeds.

Milking Shorthorns, $12,500.

This provides for the purchase in England of a small herd of high-class milking shorthorns in order to test the possibilities of the development of a class of cattle in Ontario which will be profitable both for beef and milk production.

Fruit Works, $9,000.

This includes $3,000 for the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition in addition to the $2,000 they are now receiving, $3,000 for orchard competition, and $3,000 for a market commissioner to develop markets for the sale of Ontario fruit in the west.

Short Courses, $7,000.

This makes provision for a largely increased number of short courses in stock-raising and seed improvement, which have proven so effective and popular.

Eastern Ontario Live Stock Building, $16,000.

Special Grants for Agricultural Exhibition Buildings, $10,000.

This includes $5,000 for Fort William and Port Arthur, $2,500 for London, and $2,500 for Windsor.

Other items are: Agricultural work in connection with public schools, including school garden, seed displays, etc., $10,000; drainage work, $5,000; live stock in Northern Ontario, $5,000; women's institutes, $3,500; dairy survey, $2,000; Western Ontario creamery works, $1,500; soil survey, $5,000; miscellaneous work, $3,733, and Ontario Veterinary College (additional land), $25,000.

BEATTIE NESBITT'S TRIAL IS NOW ON

Special to the Review.

Toronto, June 18.—At the preliminary hearing of the charges of falsifying returns of the Farmers Bank preferred against Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, a letter was read, which showed that Hon. W. S. Fielding, had asked for assurances that the provisional director had not put in money borrowed on subscribers' notes for stock as paid up capital. The letter was written to W. R. Travers while he was in Ottawa to secure the certificate and the reply, which was, according to Travers, directed by Mr. Guthrie, on Ottawa layer, assuring the then minister of finance, that the provisional directors had not borrowed money on subscribers' notes. Travers claimed that the loan from the Trusts and Guarantee Co. was a personal loan to himself.

Try a Want Adv. in The Review

EDITOR BRYAN TALKS SOME MORE

Chicago, June 18.—"I want a chance to show how I can fight for a progressive Democrat. Our convention at Baltimore will be controlled by the progressives. The Conservatives already are whipped."

This was the statement made yesterday by Wm. J. Bryan, several times candidate for President, who is here in a reportorial capacity, and is, whenever he moves, the centre of an acclaiming throng of followers.

Bryan renewed his denial that he is a candidate or that he had even a lingering belief that he may be named again as the Democratic candidate. He expects the fight to be between Clark and Wilson and will tour the country for whichever shall be named.

Of the coming Democratic convention at Baltimore, he said:

"Our platform will be a model of brevity and clarity, and will express in plain terms just what the people may expect when they return the Democratic party to power, as they will next November."

JUSTICE ANGLIN'S OPINION IN THE MARRIAGE HEARING

Ottawa, June 18.—The only opinion in the marriage question which was ready yesterday was the dissenting views of Justice Anglin, extracts from which are here given:

After expressing his concurrence in Sir Louis Davies' "reasons for answering the first question in the negative," Mr. Justice Anglin proceeds with the second question, as to the civil validity in Quebec (a) of marriages of two Catholics, (b) of mixed marriage solemnized by Protestant clergymen.

His lordship gives several reasons why the court should represent to the Government that it is undesirable to answer this question.

But in deference to the views of the majority of his colleagues, who think an answer should now be given to the second question, the learned judge proceeds to discuss it at length and to answer it. He first states, however, that ecclesiastical law can be recognized in Canadian civil courts so far, but so far only, as the common law incorporates it, or, the Legislature has recognized and given civil efficacy to it. The discretion of the Legislature is supreme.

The Quebec civil code was passed in 1866 by the Legislature of the then Province of Canada, which had full legislative jurisdiction over marriage.

The decree of the Council of Trent was in force in the Catholic Church in Quebec in 1866. It renders void any marriage not solemnized before the parish priest of the parties, or a priest authorized to act by him or the bishop. It declares the parties incapable of thus contracting marriage. Therefore, says his lordship, the impediment thus created was made part of the civil law of Quebec by article 127 of the code as an impediment recognized by the religious persuasion of the Catholic Church

But, because by the later benedictine declaration, which was made applicable to Canada in 1764 and remained in force in 1866, the Catholic Church excepted mixed marriages from the Trinidentine decree and declared them valid, though not solemnized before a Catholic priest. His lordship holds that mixed marriages celebrated before a Protestant minister are civilly valid in Quebec, the recent ne temere decree, he says, has no civil force in Quebec. It is excluded from Article 127 by the word hitherto," and it has not been otherwise recognized by the Legislature. Mr Migneault conceded this.

The learned judge then proceeds to demonstrate that, apart from any laws of the Catholic Church, by the civil law of the province a marriage by a Protestant clergyman of two Catholics is invalid.

His lordships says: "Primarily, if not solely," for the purposes of their own congregation, the exclusive right of Anglican clergymen to marry Protestants was thus taken away, but the requirement of the civil law that Catholics must be married by their proper cure was not altered.

That was the law of Lower Canada in 1866. The code was intended to express that law. Such were the instructions to the codifiers.

They reported that in dealing with marriage they had left everybody in "the enjoyment of his own usages and practices according to which the celebration of marriage is entrusted to the ministers of the worship to which he belongs."

FIFTY YEARS A NATION

Dominion Day, 1917, will usher in the Semi-Centennial of Federation, the jubilee of the Canadian people, the fiftieth anniversary of the consummation of a political triumph for which the best Canadian statesmen of the day toiled earnestly for years.

There is a movement on foot, inspired by the Canadian Clubs throughout the country, to celebrate this event in a fitting manner and details are already being arranged. Charles R. McCullough, of Hamilton, is president of the Association of Canadian Clubs, who have the matter in charge. The plan of celebration suggested is that on the auspicious date there assemble at Ottawa the surviving Fathers of Confederation—but of that brilliant coterie of public men none survive but Sir Charles Tupper—as well as all the members of parliament and senators who have sat at Ottawa since 1867.

It is further suggested that at every provincial capital members of the legislatures and councillors and all the lieutenant-governors since Confederation, hold a reunion. Universities and colleges are asked to call together their graduates from all parts of the world.

To this great union of Canadians it is proposed to invite the premiers from England and all the British Colonies and, if possible, to secure the attendance of King George that the festival of nation and empire may be complete.

THE COLORED DELEGATE

The colored delegate at Chicago is getting out of American politics all that he ever receives either as a delegate or as a citizen. It is only in certain states that he is allowed to vote at all, the colored man in many Southern States having been disenfranchised by constitutional amendment. Even where he is still supposed to exercise the right to cast his ballot his vote is seldom counted. If it was the solid Democratic South would be broken in states where the negroes outnumber the whites in the ration of about three to two.

There must be something radically wrong in any political system in which a despised and downtrodden race, to all intents and purposes denied the rights of American citizens, can hold the balance of power and decide who shall be the nominee of the Republican party. Yet that, according to the press despatches, is the situation at Chicago to-day. There are sixty-six colored delegates at the Convention and if they hold together, as they generally do, and vote as one man for a particular candidate, then that candidate will win.

Unstable as water in politics as in everything else, the colored man excells in nothing. But he avails himself of the opportunity to get all that he is ever going to obtain by possession of the franchise, and sells himself to the highest bidder. The faction or candidate that buys him last and pays the highest purchase price is the one most likely to hold the colored man in his ranks.

For the last day or two the professional campaigner has been doing his utmost to secure the votes of the colored delegation. Not only is money used but every trick is resorted to for the accomplishment of this purpose. The delegate is told that Taft has done nothing for the colored race, a statement that can be truthfully made of every United States President since the time of Lincoln. Roosevelt is the man for them, they are told, for was it not Roosevelt who acknowledged the social equality of the African race by having Booker T. Washington, the negro leader, dine with him in the White House!

But the negro cannot forget the Brownville episode even with the jingling of campaign coin in his ears. A colored company of the United States army some years ago becoming unduly filled with military ardor and other inspiring fluids, one night ran wild in Brownville, Texas, and "shot up" the town. For this prank Roosevelt, then President, promptly disbanded the entire company, although only a comparative few of the members took part in the escapade. This action is now being used as an argument to herd the colored delegation into the Taft enclosure.

A system of election where such implements are employed must in the very nature of things be rotten to the core and the negro will continue to remain the despised of the South and the tool of the North so long as he consents to accept the part of a mere political puppet. In those states where he is denied the right to vote he is infinitely better off, saved as he is from a position as humiliating as the one he holds in Chicago to-day.

He can vote at the convention but is to all intents and purposes deprived of his franchise when it comes to the election. He cannot even accept the gift of office in his own state for if the Republican party should appoint him to a federal position his white neighbor would do one of two things—run him out of the community or have his life.

THE MARRIAGE QUESTION

The decision of the Supreme Court in the marriage reference case, to the lay mind, unaccustomed to the intricacies of legal verbiage, may appear self-contradictory in some of the details, but by a roundabout method peculiar to lawyers the real contention of the supporters of the bill seems to have been sustained. It has been established by the decision just rendered that so-called mixed marriages are legal, and that was the chief point in dispute after all.

Four of the five judges who sat on the case agreed that the Dominion Parliament has no right to pass the Lancaster bill, or, in other words, to enact a general marriage law. Justice Idington held that while the bill as it stands is an impossibility, a measure modified in form might be made effective.

So far then as the Lancaster bill is concerned, the decision is final, and will stand until the case is reviewed by the Privy Council. Hon. J. C. Doherty and other members of the government, who always disputed the right of Parliament to enact a general marriage law, are upheld in their views of the case.

The second question submitted to the court involved the right of the Province of Quebec to declare void a marriage performed by any but a Roman Catholic priest between persons who are both Roman Catholics. To this question Chief Justice Fitzpatrick declined to make answer. Justice Idington, Duff and Davies voted "no," and Justice Anglin "yes." If in such a marriage, so celebrated, only one of the contracting parties is a Catholic, the court unanimously voted that the law of Quebec has no power to declare such marriage void.

As to the question whether in the event of it being found that Quebec had the power to render such marriages illegal the Dominion Parliament had authority to declare them legal by legislation to that effect, the court again divided, four of the Justices answering no and Justice Idington maintaining that Parliament has the power if the enactment of such legislation is concurred in by the legislatures of the provinces interested. He also held that the Dominion has a right to provide for the solemnization of marriages when the province fails to do so.

The last question on the list was, of course, practically disposed of when the court decided that the Lancaster bill could not be enacted. The great points of dispute set at rest by the decision are these:

A Protestant clergyman can officiate at a mixed marriage and such marriage is legal. The court was unanimous in this decision and Judge Charbonneau's decision in the Hebert case is accordingly sustained.

A Protestant clergyman has the right to solemnize the marriage of two Catholics. This was supported by the votes of three Justices, Idington, Duff and Davies. Justice Anglin dissented and Chief Justice Fitzpatrick declined to vote.

In a word, then, the promoters of the Lancaster bill, and all the friends of that measure, have by this decision of the Supreme Court, secured that for which they were contending. All disputes over mixed marriages or the solemnization of the marriage of Catholics by Protestant clergymen are now set at rest, and the ne temere decree as well as the Lancaster bill is dead.

It is possible, however, that the Privy Council may overrule the Supreme Court, and decided that the enactment of the Lancaster bill is within the province of the Dominion Parliament.

NOTE AND COMMENT

In the days of slavery the negro was sold by others. Now that he is free he exercises his rights and privileges by selling himself.

"Who wrecked the Farmers' Bank?" has become a standing query with the Globe. And the World, with every appearance of truth on its side, is prepared to answer that it did not.

A Toronto paper says every colored delegate belongs to the Union of Officeholders. If a negro can be found in an office in the South he would be worth more as a natural curiosity than as a purchased delegate.

If any man wishes to go up against something real hard, let him, as has been suggested, attempt to organize the victims of the Farmers' Bank into a company to work the Keeley mine with a view to recouping the subscribers and depositors for their losses.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, June 17.—Assertions that the weather was too cold northwest and too damp southwest, had much to do to-day with an advance in wheat. The market closed strong, ⅜c to ⅝c above Saturday's close. Latest trading left corn unchanged to ⅛c down, oats varying from the final figures of last week to ⅛c to ⅜c off and provisions irregular, strung out from 7½c decline to 5c increase in cost.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅛d higher to ⅛d lower than yesterday on wheat, and unchanged to ⅛d lower on corn. At Berlin wheat closed ⅝c higher, at Budapest 1⅝c higher, and at Antwerp unchanged.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 17.—The export trade in all lines of grain continues very quiet. The foreign demand for wheat is limited, and bids were 1½d lower. The local demand for oats continues fair, and sales of some round lots were made for shipment from Fort William. The outside demand for car lots is fair at steady prices. Flour is firm, with only a small volume of business doing for both domestic and export account. Millfeed is quiet. The butter market is soft, owing to increased supplies and a smaller demand. Cheese was easier at a decline of ⅛c. Foreign demand good and considerable business done. Eggs fairly active. Provisions steady.

Corn—American, No. 2 yellow, 85½c to 86c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 52½c to 53c; do., No. 3, 50½c to 51c; extra No. 1 feed, 51½c to 52c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, June 17.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 83 cars—1455 cattle, 1089 hogs, 220 sheep, 167 calves and 19 horses.

Exporters.

Morris & Co. bought 110 distillery-fed steers, 1271 lbs. each, at $8.40.

Butchers

Choice butchers sold at $7.75 to $8.10; loads of good, $7.50 to $7.65; medium, $6.85 to $7.40; common, $6 to $7; cows, $4 to $6.65; canners, $2.50 to $3.

Milkers and Springers

About a dozen milkers and springers sold at $45 to $70 each, but only one brought the latter price.

Veal Calves.

About 107 veal calves were on sale, prices ranging from $4 to $8.75 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, light ewes, sold at $4.50 to $5.50; heavy ewes, $4 to $4.50; rams, $3 to $4; spring lambs sold at $9 to $10.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, $8.60, and $8.25 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 17.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ended June 15 were 1600 cattle, 650 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 1000 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 800 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 250 calves.

There was no change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being firmly maintained for all grades, notwithstanding the fact that the supply was fully 200 head larger than a week ago. The quality of the stock in some instances was above the average, it being well finished and in prime condition, which sold readily at $8.50 per 100 pounds. There were a few loads of Manitoba domestic, hay-fed cattle on the market, and straight loads of steers and heifers sold at $8, and mixed loads at $7.50 per 100 pounds. Choice bulls were in demand at $7.50 to $7.75, and choice butchers' cows sold as high as $7 per 100 pounds.

The tone of the market for small meats was steady under a good demand, and light offerings. Ewe sheep brought $5 to $5.50 per 100 pounds, and spring lambs from $3 to $5 each, as to size and quality.

Hog prices advanced 25c per 100 pounds, which was due to the smaller offerings. The demand was good and an active trade was done in selected lots at $9 to $9.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.25 to $8.50; do., medium, $6.50 to $7.50; do., common, $5.25 to $6; do., choice cows, $6.50 to $7; do., medium, $5.75 to $6; do., bulls, $6.25 to $7.75; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $65 to $75; springers, $50 to $60.

Sheep, ewes, $5 to $5.50; bucks and culls, $4.50 to $4.75; lambs, $6.50 to $6.75.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9 to $9.25.

Calves, $3 to $10.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

Mrs. Leland looked up, caught his eye with a smile, and asked how many miles it was to Thirlmere. Cynthia's thoughts brooded again on poets and lonely graves, and the danger passed.

Mrs. Devar, in these days, had recovered her complacency. The letter she wrote from Symon's Yat had reached Vanrenen from Paris, and its hearty disapproval of Fitzroy helped to re-establish his good opinion of her. She heard constantly, too, from Marigny and her son. Both agreed that the comet-like flight of Medenham across their horizon was rapidly losing its significance. Still, she was not quite happy. Mrs. Leland's advent had thrust her into the background, for the American widow was rich, good-looking, and cultured, and the flow of small talk between the newcomer and Cynthia left her as hopelessly out of range as used to be the case when that domineering Medenham would lean back in the car and say things beyond her comprehension, or murmur them to Cynthia if she happened to be sitting by his side.

Luncheon had ended, but the clouds which had been gathering over the lake country during the morning suddenly poured a deluge over a thirsty land. Thirlmere, and Ullswater and the rest of the glories of Westmoreland that lay beyond the pass of Dunmail Raise were swallowed up in a fog of rain. Simmonds, questioned by the millionaire, admitted that a weather-beaten native had prophesied "a week of it," more or less.

Four Britons might have sat down and played Bridge stolidly, but three of this quartette were Americans, and within two hours of the change in the elements, they were seated in the London-bound train at Windermere Station.

Not one of them was really displeased because of this rapid alteration in their plans. Cynthia was ill at ease; Mrs. Leland wished to rejoin her guests at Trouville; Vanrenen, who was anxious to complete certain business negotiations in Paris, believed that a complete change of scene and new interests in life would speedily bring Cynthia back to her own cheery self; while Mrs. Devar though the abandonment of the tour meant reversion to a cheap boarding-house, was not sorry that it had come to an end. In London, she would be more in her element, and, at any rate, she was beginning to feel cramped through sitting three in a row in Simmond's car, after the luxurious comfort of two in the tonneau of the Mercury.

So it came to pass that on Friday evening, while Medenham was driving from Cavendish Square to Charing Cross, Cynthia was crossing London on a converging line from St. Pancras to the Savoy Hotel. Strange, indeed, was the play of Fate's shuttle that it should have so nearly united the unseen threads of their destinies! Again, a trifling circumstance conspired to detain Vanrenen in London. One of his business associates in Paris, rendered impatient by the failure of the great man to return as quickly as he had promised, arrived in England by the afternoon service from the Gard du Nord, and was actually standing in the foyer of the hotel when Vanrenen entered with the others. As a result of this meeting, the journey to Paris arranged for Saturday was postponed till Sunday, and on this trivial base was destined to be built a very remarkable edifice.

It chanced that Mrs. Leland, too, decided to have a day in London, and she and Cynthia went out early. They returned to lunch at the hotel, and the girl, pleading lack of appetite slipped out alone to buy a copy of Milton's poems. From the bookseller's she wandered into the Embankment Gardens.

She was a dutiful daughter, and had resolved to obey without question her father's stern command not to enter again into communication with a man of whom he so strongly disapproved. But she was not content, for all that, and the dripping trees and rain-sodden flowers seemed now to accord with her distraught mood. The fine, though not bright, interval that had tempted her forth soon gave way to another shower, and she ran for shelter into the Charing Cross Station of the Metroplitan Railway. She stood in one of the doorways looking out disconsolately over the river, when a taxicab drove up and deposited its occupant at the station. Then some unbidden impulse led her to hail the driver.

"Take me to Cavendish Square," she said.

"What number, miss?" he asked.

"No number. Just drive slowly round the square and return to the Savoy Hotel."

He eyed her curiously, but made no comment. Soon she was speeding up Regent Street, bent on gratifying the truly curious whim of seeing what manner of residence it was that Fitzroy occupied in London. Fate had failed in her weaving during the previous evening, but on the present occasion she combined warp and weft without any error.

The cab was crawling past the Fairholme mansion, and Cynthia's astonished eyes were regarding its style and general air of magnificence with some degree of heart-sinking—for it did then seem to be true that Mrs. Devar's original estimate of Fitzroy was correct—when a man sprang out of another taxi in front of the door, and glanced at her while in the very act of running up the steps. Recognition was mutual. Dale muttered under his breath a wholly unjustifiable assumption as to his future state, halted dubiously, and then signaled to Cynthia's driver to stop. He strode towards her across the road, and thrust his head through the open window.

"Of course, miss," he said roughly, "you don't know what has happened?"

"No," she said, too greatly surprised to resent his strange manner.

"Well," he growled, "somebody's been nearly killed on your account, that's all."

"Somebody," she repeated, and her lips went white.

"Yes, you ought to guess well enough who it is. He and that rotten Frenchman fought a duel this morning on the sands near Calais, and Marigny as good as murdered him."

Dale's heart was sore against her as the cause of his master's plight, but even in his own distress he was quick to see the shrinking terror in the girl's eyes.

"Are you speaking of Mr. Fitzroy?" she demanded. "Are you telling the truth? Oh, for Heaven's sake, man, tell me what you mean."

"I mean what I say, miss," said he more softly. "I have left him almost at death's door in an hotel at Calais. That damned Frenchman . . . I beg your pardon, miss, but I can't contain myself when I think of him—ran a sword through him this morning, and would have killed him outright if he hadn't ben stopped by some other gentlemen. And now, there he is, a-lying in the hotel, with a doctor and a nurse trying to coax the life back into him, while I had to scurry back here to tell his people."

Some women might have shrieked and fainted—not so Cynthia. At that instant there was one thing to be done and one only. . She saw the open road, and took it without faltering or thought as to the future.

"When is the next train to Calais?" she asked.

Dale's voice grew even more sympathetic.

"Was you a-thinking of going to him, miss?" he asked.

"Would that I could fly there," she moaned.

"At nine o'clock to-night, miss.'

"Oh, God!" she wailed under her breath.

He scratched the back of his ear, for it was by such means that Dale sought inspiration.

"Dash it all!" he cried. "I wish I had seen you half an hour earlier. There is a train that leaves Charing Cross at twenty minutes past two. It goes by way of Folkestone and Boulogne, and from Boulonge one can get easy to Calais. Anyhow, what's the use of talkin'—it is too late."

Cynthia glanced at her watch. It was just twenty-five minutes to three.

"How far is Folkestone?" was the immediate demand generated by her practical American brain.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"Ah, little boy," remarked the stranger, who was rather nearsighted, "it does my heart good to see you appreciate you beautiful cloud effect!"

"Yes, sir," replied the lad; "I've been watching it for ten minutes."

Upon the boy's face there appeared a smile of radiant bliss.

"A real poet, without a doubt. And do you watch sunsets often, little boy?"

"Sunsets? Why, that ain't a sunset, guv'nor! That's the village school burning down."—Answers.

NE TEMERE DECISION

Judges Say Dominion is Powerless to Pass Marriage Law.

Canadian Supreme Court Agrees That the Provinces Have the Right to Supervise the Marriage of Residents — Majority Say Protestant Can Marry Two Catholics or One Catholic in Quebec.

Ottawa, June 18.—The Canadian Parliament has no authority to enact a uniform federal marriage law, as proposed in the famous Lancaster bill.

The law of the Province of Quebec does not nullify a mixed marriage, or a marriage between two Roman Catholics, otherwise legally binding, when performed by other than a Roman Catholic priest.

These are the two outstanding features in the eagerly awaited judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada, delivered at noon yesterday on the reference submitted by the Dominion Government. Yesterday's proceedings were brief.

No final judgment will be reached until the judicial committee of the Privy Council has made its pronouncement, as the Dominion Government will now proceed to appeal and a judgment may be reached by the coming autumn.

The court answers the questions as follows:

Question 1.—(a) Has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact, in the whole or in part, bill No. 3 of the first session of the 12th Parliament of Canada, intituled, "An act to amend the Marriage Act?" (b) If the provisions of the said bill are not all within the authority of the Parliament of Canada to enact, which, if any, of the provisions are within such authority?

Answer 1.—(both branches)—Chief Justice Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Justices Duff, Anglin and Davies, answer "No."

Justice Idington answers: 'It is an impossible bill as it stands. If I must answer categorically, then I say as follows: The retrospective part would be good as part of a scheme for concurrent legislation by Parliament and by the Legislatures confirming past marriages, which probably neither can effectively do. The prospective part so far as it is possible to make effective prohibition a religious test may be good, but it is doubtful, and the probable purpose can be reached by a better bill."

Question 2.—Does the law of the Province of Quebec render null and void, unless contracted before a Roman Catholic priest, a marriage which would otherwise be legally binding which takes place in such province, (a) Between persons who are both Roman Catholics, or (b) between persons one of whom only is a Roman Catholic?

Answer—The chief justice asks permission to decline to answer the first branch. To branch one, Justices Idington, Duff and Davies: "No." Justice Anglin, "Yes."

To branch two of question two, the court unanimously answers, "No."

Question 3.—If either (a) or (b) of the last preceding question is answered in the affirmative, or if both of them are answered in the affirmative, has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact that all such marriages whether (a) heretofore solemnized, or (b) hereafter to be solemnized, shall be legal and binding?

Answer—(Branch a): The chief justice, Justices Davies, Duff and Anglin, "No." Justice Idington says: "As to question three, branch 'a,' answer 'Yes,' to be concurred in by the respective Legislatures of the provinces concerned, and as to branch 'b,' answer 'Yes,' if and when province fails to provide adequate means of solemnization."

The answers to question two show the court unanimous in confirming the decision in the Hebert case that a Protestant clergyman can officiate at a "mixed" marriage. A majority of the judges go further and say a Protestant clergyman can solemnize the marriage of two Roman Catholics.

Hon. Col. Hughes gave an address in which he stated that he was opposed to returning the Bunker Hill cannon.

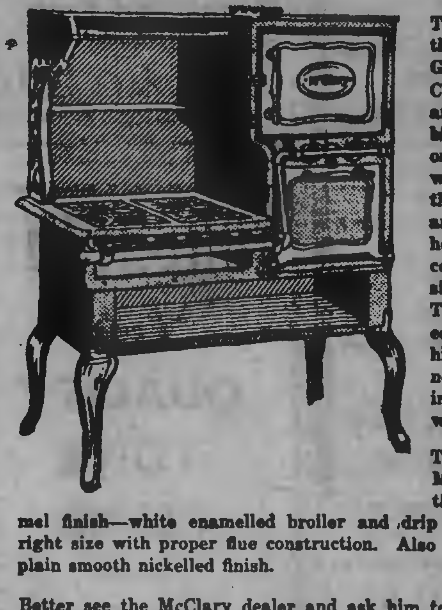
Summer cooking with comfort

NO need to stew your life out over a coal range during the hot weather. Gas is a much cheaper cooking fuel than coal, and far more convenient in the summer time. Why fatigue yourself and make the house uncomfortable for the whole family when you can save money by cooking with gas. Any "McClary" Gas Range will pay for itself in a very short time by the actual cash it saves, not to say anything about its handiness.



The Model shown in the cut is a handsome Gas Range — "McClary's" 1912 Model—and considered the biggest range value on the market. You will see at a glance that the convenience and comfort of the housekeeper has been considered by the designers and makers. The Ovens are elevated — just conveniently high—so that there is no "stooping or bending" when cooking with this range.

This Model like other McClary Ranges has the bright black enamel finish—white enamelled broiler and drip pan—Ovens just the right size with proper flue construction. Also Anti-Rust linings and plain smooth nickelled finish.

Better see the McClary dealer and ask him to tell you the reasons why you should buy a McClary gas range. He will explain the exclusive features of the range suitable for your kitchen without placing you under any obligation to buy. All we want you to do is to make perfectly certain that the Gas Range you buy will pay for itself very quickly.

Household Hints.

French chalk will do much toward removing a scorch on silk or delicate wool if a coating of the chalk be left on the spot for several days.

A good treatment for soiled coat collars is naphtha applied with a brush. Dip the brush in naphtha until thoroughly saturated, then give the spot or grime a few brisk rubs. The most delicate velvet will yield to this treatment, though satin should not be treated in this way.

A teaspoonful of peroxide of hydrogen in half a tub of cold water is a splendid bleach for lingerie and white clothes. Let the clothes remain in the water overnight and after rinsing wash in the usual way. White silk and wool as well as linen may be treated in this way.

To remove white spots from furniture dip a cloth in hot water nearly to boiling point. Place over the spot, remove quickly and rub the spot with a dry cloth. Repeat if spot is not removed. Alcohol or camphor quickly applied may be used.

To prevent glassware from being easily broken, put in a kettle of cold water, heat gradually until water has reached boiling point. Set aside and when water is cold take out glassware.

New Zealand's Pigs.

Pig raising is one of New Zealand's most profitable occupations. The main food of New Zealand pigs is skim-milk, supplemented with roots, grain and molasses. The latter is the mainstay of the dairy farmer in finishing off his stock, the proportion of meal increasing until the bacon weight of 140 to 160 pounds is reached.

PRICE OF BREAD TO BE RAISED

It is stated that the bread dealers of the city have under consideration the question of a raise in the price of bread.

The decision will likely be known within the next few days.

FIRST WEDDING IN NEW CHURCH

Sisson--Fitzgerald, Nuptials at Murray Street Church

An extremely pretty and charming church wedding was witnessed this afternoon in the new Murray street Baptist church, when Miss Edna Fitzgerald, daughter of the late G. W. Fitzgerald, became the bride of Mr. Hanlon Sisson, in the presence of a large and fashionable audience. About thirty guests were present in all.

Promptly at three o'clock the bride entered the church and passed up the aisle, leaning on the arm of her brother, by whom she was given away. Rev. J. R. Webb officiated.

The nuptial parties were unattended. The witnesses were Mr. Gordon Adams and Miss Dolly Sisson. Miss Edith Richardson presided at the piano during the entry of the contracting parties.

During the offertory Mrs. Telford sang very sweetly, "Oh Promise Me." Mr. George Schneider supplying the accompaniment.

In conformity with the usual custom, adopted when a wedding is solemnized in a new church, the young couple were presented with a family bible at the conclusion of the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Sisson left on the afternoon C.P.R. express for their wedding trip.

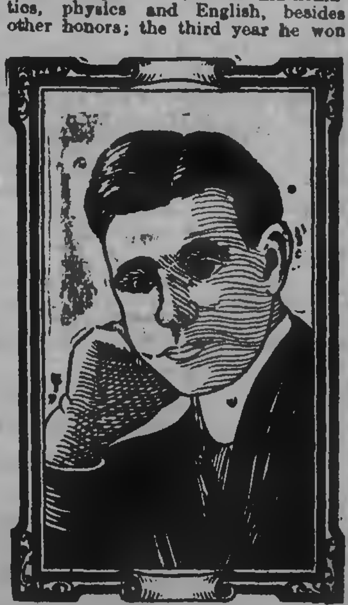
OTTAWA BOY HAS WON HONORS IN LONDON, ENGLAND.

W. Buell Meldrum, Although Only Twenty-Five Years Old, Has Carried Off Honors and Scholarships Throughout His University Career —Goes to German Universities to Complete His Course.

Ottawans, generally, are very proud of the honors won by the younger generation of citizens in different schools and universities, but the recent achievement of W. Buell Meldrum is particularly gratifying to his many friends in that city. His academic career has been unusually brilliant, and he has now been awarded the special science scholarship by the London, Eng., commissioners, established in 1851. This scholarship may be held for two or possibly three years and is of annual value of $750.

W. Buell Meldrum was born in 1887, on a farm near Hull, Quebec, the son of Thomas Meldrum, a retired farmer, who has been a resident of Ottawa for some few years. Buell Meldrum was educated by private tuition until he passed the entrance examination into the Ottawa Collegiate in 1901. Three years later he matriculated into McGill University, winning a scholarship of $125 for general proficiency. During his first year at McGill he won first honors in mathematics; the second year he secured a prize of $100 in mathematics, physics and English, besides other honors; the third year he won first rank honors in chemistry, and the fourth year he graduated as bachelor of arts with first rank honors in chemistry. During the summer of 1909 he worked in the coal tests laboratory for the Dominion Government and during the following years he carried on an advanced study in physical chemistry and obtained the degree of master of science for research. He also, during that year, became demonstrator in chemistry in the faculty of applied science at McGill, and during 1910-1911 he was senior demonstrator at McGill, as well as instructor in organic chemistry, and quantitative analysis at the Montreal Technical Institute. A few months ago he captured the Austrian teaching fellowship at Harvard University and since that time he has assisted with the undergraduate class in organic chemistry there, besides continuing research work in electro-chemistry.



W. BUELL MELDRUM.

During the summer he will undertake a special work at Cologne and Heidelburg, Germany, and when his work at Harvard is completed he will received the degree of doctor of philosophy.

Nests In Odd Places.

Within a comparatively small area of Cheshire, England, writes Mr. H. H. Wardle in The Field, I have inspected a thrush's nest, containing eggs, built in the shafts of a farmer's cart; another, containing five eggs, fashioned between the spokes of a railway wagon wheel; and a blue tit's nursery established inside a street gas lamp. In other districts also cases of nests in odd places have been reported this spring. A pair of robins made a nest on the top of a traveling oil van, belonging to a grocer, at Bocking, Essex. Two pairs of sparrows built on the ornamental ironwork of a tram standard opposite a cemetery in Sheffield, the nests being within a few feet only of the electric wires, along which the whirring wheels of the trolley travel. Recently a blackbird was found sitting on five eggs in a nest built on the blade of an oar in the Derwent Angling Association's bungalow.

Singular though these preferences are, I am not sure, Mr. Wardle proceeds, that any of them equal the strangeness of choice displayed by two blackbirds which, in April last year, constructed their nest on a ledge under a railway wagon at the L. & N. W. station, Ingleton. When discovered there were two eggs in the nest, which had made the double journey between Clapham Junction. Of late years the tendency has been to concede that birds are governed in their habits and movements by mental attributes similar to those which control our own. It will, perhaps, be objected that such odd selections of nesting sites do not sustain this view; but neither do they support the theory that their actions are controlled by instinct, the very essence of which is its unchangeableness.

He Went to Jail.

When a defendant failed to answer a judgment summons at Acton, England, recently for non-payment of rates, it was stated that for the last eight or nine years he had gone to prison every half-year instead of paying the rates.

Three hundred Winnipeg business men visited Fort William and Port Arthur yesterday.

A Seasonable Fad.

The tailors are doing surprising things with taffeta this spring, and the little afternoon suits of changeable taffeta are fetching affairs indeed.

TAILORED SUIT OF CHANGEABLE TAFFETA.

Crochet Buckle.

Why not make for yourself a belt buckle of Irish lace? Any oval or oblong shape may be used for a foundation, or a shape can be cut from heavy cardboard, with slides sewed on the under side when finished.

The foundation is covered first with a layer of cotton wadding, then with black or white silk, according to the outside.

The separate flowers are first crocheted, then a shaped background of the openwork stitch just big enough to cover the buckles neatly. This is stretched tightly over the covered belt buckle and sewed with tiny stitches.

WHEN TEACHERS SMILE.

Unconscious Humor of the Notes Sent Them by Parents.

The unconscious humor of schoolboy "howlers" is sometimes eclipsed by the amusement derived by teachers from the letters which illiterate parents of pupils send, apologising for the non-attendance of their son or daughter, or criticizing the method of teaching, says an English paper.

Sir,—My boy has been learning shorthand at your school for more than a year, and he can't speak it yet. I intend to send him to some other school where they know how to teach.

Dear teacher kindly excuse Willie we kept him at home yesterday. We wanted to give him a little pleasure so we took him to see his grandmother's grave.

After examining the eyesight of a number of scholars, a master wrote to the father of one lad, telling him that his son was suffering from myopia, and needed attention. The father wrote back, saying:

Thanks for your note about Harry. Just you knock it out of him, for I haven't time.

Another note, about hair cutting, was received through a teacher asking a scholar where he got his hair cut:

Sir—You seem to be anxious to know where my boy got his hair cut, I wish to tell you that I put him in the cellar all last night so as the rats could nibble it off and I could save tuppence.

Another parent, who apparently wished to impress the teacher with his medical knowledge, wrote:

Dear Master,—Excuse James from attending school as he had had an illustrated throat with glaciers on both sides and cannot yet eat any solemn food.

An assistant master who had spent a good half-hour in teaching the exercises in drill termed jumping got this note for his pains:

Dear Sir,—Please leve off teeching Fred any more jimnasticks. If I want him to jump I can make him jump.

It often happens that object lessons in school bring the teacher into trouble:

Sir,—You told my boy that drinking beer injures the coat of the stomach. Please do not interfere with my family affairs.

On another occasion a parent wrote:

Sir,—Tom came home to-day with his clothes all covered with mud. He says he had to mix some clay for the teacher. His father is a navvy, and God knows I've enough washing without having to wash the lad's clothes. The next time Tom comes home dirty I'll send you the clothes to wash.

Printing Without Ink.

Printing without ink is a discovery of an English inventor. In the course of some electrical experiments he accidentally pressed a coin, which had fallen on to the table and was rolling off, against a metallic plate covered with a piece of paper, and at the same time against an insulated electric line. To his amazement he saw a sepia print of the coin impressed upon the paper. This happened about twelve years ago. Since then the inventor has followed up this observation and has now developed a process for printing without printing ink. He uses dry paper impregnated with certain chemicals, whose nature is not disclosed. In the process of printing the paper travels over a metallic plate and the type is applied on the opposite side, a current of electricity passing through the paper. According to the particular metal used for the substratum and according to the mode of impregnation of the paper, a great variety of different colors can be produced, so that multicolor printing becomes an easy matter.

A Debt Owed the Grasshopper.

On top of the Royal Exchange, in London, Eng., is a great golden grasshopper. And thereby hangs a tale. Sir Thomas Gresham, a noted merchant, put it there when he built the first Royal Exchange in the time of Queen Elizabeth. All the Greshams were very fond of grasshoppers, and they took it as their crest. The founder of the family was born in the Norfolk village of Gresham, and his wicked mother left him in a wood there to die, but a grasshopper hopped down beside the poor little urchin and began to chirp. It chirped so loudly that an old woman was attracted, and, finding the baby, she took it home and cared for it.

PROGRAM FOR CELEBRATION OF DOMINION DAY HERE

Sacred Band Concerts May be Given on Sunday.

A meeting of the chairmen and member of committees interested in the celebration on Dominion Day, was held in the armories last night, and the proceedings of the day roughly blocked out. The idea is to have a day free for all and one of general enjoyment. There is only a limited amount of money at disposal and the committee do not wish to ask subscriptions, but such things as fireworks, prizes for the games, etc., have to be paid for.

The program as outlined will include the following:

6 a.m.—Ringing of chimes and of city churches.

10 a.m.—Parade of the local and visiting corps, with bands, and march past.

11.30 a.m.—Parade of automobiles, decorated and in competition for prizes.

1.30 p.m.—Trip of visiting Regiments over the lift lock.

3 p.m.—Games and sports in Riverside Park. A full and interesting program is being prepared, and which will include a lot of competitions designed rather to entertain than as tests of strength or skill.

8 p.m.—Band concert and fireworks.

Full details will be given on the programs to be issued next week.

If it can be arranged it is expected that one of the visiting bands will give an hour of sacred music at Victoria Park on Sunday afternoon after 4 o'clock, and the other band in the evening about 9 o'clock.

SALIENT POINTS IN THE FARMERS' BANK INQUIRY

The Farmers' Bank investigation has been postponed until Saturday, June 22, at 10 o'clock in Toronto, when Dr. Beattie Nesbitt will be called to the stand. Up to date the salient points that have been brought out in the enquiry may be summarized as follows:

The fact that some one received a check for $3,000 from the bank as an inducement to secure from the Dominion Government a certificate for the Farmers' Bank has been admitted. When the police department took possession of the bank's private papers after the failure, this check was among those seized but it afterwards mysteriously disappeared and no trace of it can be found. W. R. Travers knows who received the money but refuses to tell and there is no way in which he can be compelled to do so. Toronto detectives are unable to account for the disappearance of the important document.

In order to secure sufficient capital to qualify for a Government certificate to do business, Travers borrowed $80,000 from the Trust and Guarantee Company, of Toronto, putting up the notes of subscribers to the bank's stock as security. For this loan he paid a bonus of $1,000 and interest at the rate of ten per cent.

Ex-Finance Minister Fielding testified that if he had known that part of the bank's capital had been raised in this way, by borrowing money which had to be paid back, he would never have advised the granting of a certificate to the Farmers' Bank. However, he thought, that if the affairs of the bank had been honestly administered, there was no reason why it should not have succeeded.

Chief Justice Meredith has intimated his belief that the plunge made by the bank in the Keeley mine speculation was what really caused the wreck.

ENSIGN MERRETT SECURES WELL DESERVED PROMOTION

After eighteen months of fruitful work with the local corps of the Salvation Army, Ensign Merrett has been promoted to Winnipeg, where he will have charge of station No. 1, which is considered one of the best, if not the best station in Canada. A successor has not been announced as yet. Ensign and Mrs. Merrett expect to leave next Tuesday. Farewell services will be held at the Temple on Sunday.

Mormons In England.

English people always have opposed steadily the growth of Mormon propaganda in that country, even to the extent of wrecking the Mormon temples and maltreating the elders. Renewed activity of the Latter Day Saints in the midland and northern countries at the present time is causing bitter resentment, especially in South Lancashire, where the clergymen and the young men of the parishes are conducting an organized campaign to combat the influence of the missionaries. Their denials of polygamous practices are scouted and numerous petitions for their suppression have been sent to the home office.

ELLIOT'S
PETERBORO

SOME LIVELY HISTORY OF THE CAVAN BLAZERS

Cannon Brought from Mount Pleasant to Peterboro

Port Hope Times—Mr. Edward Sutton, of the Fallis line, Cavan township, was at Cobourg attending the Bay of Quinte Conference as a lay delegate. We had an interesting chat with him on Monday relative to the early history of Cavan. Mr. Sutton spoke of the Cavan blazers to whom he referred incidentally as free booters, having regard to their propensity to appropriate to their own use the choicest turkeys, geese and chickens. He told how these Blazers would not permit a Roman Catholic to settle in the township. On the farm of his father, John Sutton, a Roman Catholic, named John Lucas was occupying the house, but they tore off the roof and Lucas took his departure for Emily township.

Mr. Sutton's grandfather, Edward Sutton, who married Susanna Swain once carried in one day from Cobourg to the ninth line, Cavan, sixty pounds composed of a logging chain and six harrow teeth. The distance would be about thirty miles. This Edward Sutton and Richard Staples, came to Cavan about 1817. The two were most intimate friends, and happened to lose each other at Montreal. Their rejoicing at finding each other again was like a meeting between David and Jonathan or Damon and Phythias.

The father of Mr. Reid Ball of the Fallis line, carried a bag of wheat to Port Hope in the early days, a distance of over twenty miles.

In the early times the Sheriff's officers were given warm receptions out in Cavan when they came out from Cobourg to force payment of debts. One of them was forced to eat the paper he wished to serve. Another man, who has a near relative now living in Cobourg, got badly in debt, and carried a gun to keep away the sheriff.

Mr. Sutton referred to the time in the 60's when the cannon was taken from Mount Pleasant to Peterborough by the Cavan blazers on the occasion of the seventeenth of March demonstration. A relative of his, Mr. Dundas, had charge of the company of troops. Phelan's hotel in Peterborough was surrounded, as it was understood a Roman Catholic clergyman had taken refuge there, and the big gun was directed at the stone building. After threats had been made, the Cavan boys were permitted to search the hotel, but they found no priest.

Among the Cavan blazers were a son of the Magistrate (Swain) and the son of the minister (Armour.) Wm. Armour was one of the band, and it is just possible that the late Chief Justice Armour was a member.

Mr. Sutton rightly calls this a backward spring, and referred to the summerless year of 1816, speaking of a man who was frozen to death in June.

VIOLIN RECITAL

Last night at the Conservatory of Music Miss Julia Choate proved in an exceedingly gratifying way her claims as a teacher of the violin. Her pupils, young and old, expressed this in a very evident and convincing manner. Miss Choate was assisted in her recital last night by Miss Eleanor Hinchliffe, who sang two numbers with great facility and ability. She possesses a soprano voice which has clearness and sweetness and distinct enunciation.

The star piece of the program was the magnificent rendering of Danola's Trio by Master William Wilson and Miss Lora Logan and Miss Choate. It abounds in intricacies of time and execution, which was beautifully carried through to the end of the selection. The most striking number was the violin solo played by Master Carlos Greene, aged 5 years, who played his difficult piece exceedingly well for one of his years. Master Baden Greene also played Handel's 'Largo' nicely and accurately. Miss Jeannie Barlow played her selections very prettily, as also did Miss B. Pentland. Traumerei was very well played indeed by Miss Lois Braund. The Bridal Valse, played by Miss Lora Logan, was exceedingly well rendered as to time and expression. The selections played by the orchestra were well executed. Miss Choate has probably the youngest orchestra in Canada, but they acquitted themselves were well indeed. The children in the orchestra are:

Cornet Paul Glidden.

Clarinet—Otto Glidden.

Piano—Miss Hazel Dean.

The program was very ably presented and Miss Choate is to be highly congratulated on the splendid way in which her pupils acquitted themselves.

POLICE COURT

Three Drunks Made Their Appearance Before Magistrate.

Three unfortunates appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged with drunkenness. All three, it was apparent, were victims to the drink habit, one being a local man whose downward course has been a source of regret on all sides, he being a man richly bestowed with gifts that should have placed him at the pinacle of his profession. He was remanded to jail for a week, while the others, elderly men, were fined $2 or ten days on the hill.

TURNBULL'S

THE HOUSE THAT VALUE BUILT

RIDDLE FOR POULTRY MEN

Mr. James Switzer has some fine barred Plymouth Rock fowl, and about two weeks ago one of the hens showed signs of illness. The bowels gradually enlarged until it became difficult for the bird to walk, and finally it was unable to get about as the body touched the ground. The bird ate well, but it was decided that it would be better to kill it, and on being opened, a large jelly filled lump was found like the raw white of an egg. In shape the largest part was round and the upper pear shaped, the thick end of the pear joined in the round part. It was seven inches in length and four wide, and sunk when placed in water. The hen had a number of partly formed eggs, having only the yoke, and she appeared to have about only half the usual a quantity of blood. Possibly some bird fanciers may know what it was. —Bobcaygeon Independent.

Fresh Fishing Stories From the Little Lake

The fishing is very good in Little Lake, especially maskinonge fishing. One gentleman in a canoe caught four yesterday, ranging from four to nine pounds. Another angler caught an eighteen pounder by the C.P.R. bridge piers.

One man was trawling around the lake all the day in a canoe; when he came in in the evening he gently confided to some fellows just setting out, 'There are some 'lunge out there about 30 feet long.

TWENTY-FIVE NEW ARRIVALS IN PETERBORO'

There were twenty-five immigrants landed in Peterborough yesterday on the 4.19 C.P.R. There were three married couples and all have secured positions.

Five families left Bristol on 12th of June on the Royal George, for Peterborough. They are all skilled farm laborers. Positions are desired for them with farmers who need help in the house or on the farm, and by farmers who have empty houses.

CHARITY BOARD HEAR REPORTS FROM RELIEF OFFICER

Some Facts Which Come to His Notice Regarding Certain Immigrants and Others.

A very sad case of an immigrant family in distress in this country was reported by Relief Officer Miller last evening at a special meeting of the Central Charity Board.

The case in question referred to a family consisting of a husband and wife and four children. The wage-earner is prostrate with consumption and his recovery is impossible. The woman has been working to support the family, but was forced to give up. The family have no funds, have no place to go, and at present are being looked after by friends.

Their case was so plainly one for deportation that the relief officer wrote to the Immigration Department, Ottawa, submitting the full details of their plight.

He received in reply a letter to the effect that the family are not deportable immigrants, having been in Canada over two years, which exceeds the time allowed for taking deportation proceedings. The letter stated that it would be necessary for the superintendent at Ottawa to write to the London, England, office, with a view to ascertaining whether there will be any objection to their return home, provided they themselves are willing to leave.

In regard to the communication Mr. Miller reported last evening that the family are anxious to be deported.

The R.O. was instructed, therefore by the Board to endeavor to have them deported, and in the meantime look after the family as far as possible.

COMING WITHOUT FUNDS.

Another case reported by the Relief Officer related to certain immigrants said to have arrived in Peterborough without money. The parties in question were three Bulgarians, who were met at the C.P.R. station by Mr. Miller some time ago, and who were found by him to be very meagerly supplied with money. Mr. Miller took this matter up, it being at variance with the requirements of the immigration laws, which compel every immigrant entering the country to have at least $25. He wrote to the department at Ottawa in reference to their case, and received a reply, stating that in investigation, the Bulgarians on being searched by the police, were found to have considerable sums of money in their possession, out of which tickets were purchased to Montreal.

Mr. Miller stated that the men whom he met and conversed with were on their way to Campbellford to work on the railroad.

Mr Miller also reported at the time a case of a family of immigrants, the head of which the immigration officer had supplied with a letter asking for relief from Mr. H. Rush, chairman of the Charity Board, until the family could get to work. Mr. Miller also took their case up with the Department at Ottawa. The reply stated that they had discovered that this family, owing to bad weather, had not been able to get to work, thereby incurring a board bill of $4.25. The family had recently arrived and were without money. It was proposed to the head of the family that he take up farm work, but owing to the size of the family and the fact that none of them had ever been on a farm, it was decided that they would be better to work at their trades.

BREAD WINNER GONE.

To illustrate some of the hard luck stories that come to him from time to time, Mr. Miller referred to the case of a woman whose husband was killed a few weeks ago. The woman belongs to the Free Methodist sect, and has been well looked after by the Free Methodist minister, and also by the Relief Officer, as hers was a very deserving case. Four children were also left.

Mr. Miller stated that he received a report that the woman was in need, but the Free Methodist minister vigorously denied the report, saying that she was not in want, and that money had been collected for her, and that there was money set aside for her use. It appears, however, that certain creditors have been pursuing her for back debts, which she naturally would be unable to pay.

Mr. Miller merely reported this case to illustrate the quality and unreliability of the numerous hard luck stories which came to his knowledge.

RELIEF WILL STOP.

Another case referred to was that of a mother and four children, who have been receiving charity now for a considerable period. As the woman has a son, six feet tall, well able to support her if he would, and also a grown up daughter, Mr. Miller felt their case was not one for charity. The Board seemed to feel of the same opinion, and a motion passed to have her supply from the Board cease after this month.

GUARANTEES FOR IMPERIAL HOME RE-UNION FUND

A meeting of the Imperial Home Re-union Association, for Peterborough was held in the offices of Mr. G. N. Gordon last night. Fifty business men have united in signing a bond under which each of them becomes liable for a sum not exceeding $100. This bond—aggregating $5,000—has been taken over by the Union Bank, and the necessary advances by which the heads of families wishing to bring their families from England to Peterborough will be made by this bank.

BOX OF CIGARS FOR HOME RUN BY PETERBORO' BALL PLAYERS

Mr. F. L. McIntyre, representing S. Davis & Sons, Limited, Cigar Manufacturers, Montreal, arrived in town last evening and on behalf of his firm, has offered a box of their celebrated "Perfection" brand of cigars to any Peterborough player knocking a home run over the fence at Riverside Park. Here is a chance for some of our hard hitters to gladden the hearts of the fans, boost their batting averages and at the same time win a box of good smokes. Mr. McIntyre says he hopes the boys commence making good on this proposition to-morrow in the game with Hamilton, and that they will continue to do throughout the season. The more homers they crack out, the merrier.

Any player winning a box of "Perfections" may secure same by calling on Mr. Dan McCabe, George St., who will hand the smokes over.

LONDON BALL CLUB WILL PAY THAT LEAGUE FINE OF $200

Hamilton, June 18.—At a meeting of the Canadian League held here to settle the London matter, the Cockneys were represented by Secretary Buzzell, who claimed that the newspaper reports from London regarding the talk of the Cockneys dropping out were false, and that the club had every desire to see harmony in the organization. The club will pay the $200 demanded by President Fitzgerald, but objects to the demand being put in the form of a fine. The league also decided that when double-headers are played the second game shall be of only seven innings duration, but the first game shall go the full nine innings.

PETES HOME TO-MORROW FOR GAME WITH HAMILTON KOLTS

By hitting the ball and taking advantage of Berkin's misplays, the White Caps overcame a two run lead at Dutchtown yesterday and defeated the champions by 5—4.

Manager Rowan worked at right field, and took one fly, contributed an assist, a hit and two runs. He also had a stolen base.

Jimmie Beard was bound to make up for his performance in the London game. He had a double, a single, two sacrifices and a run.

Henderson, the new twirler, kept his seven hits well scattered and helped in the good work with a timely single.

Ed. Killian and Hemlock the Indian catcher have been released by Manager Needham of the Guelph club.

The Petes are assured of a hearty hand when they line up against the Hamilton Kolts at Riverside Park tomorrow afternoon. The game will be called at 3.45

Templin, whom it was reported would join St. Thomas at Guelph yesterday, did not make his appearance.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

St. Thomas Times.—Templin after getting his release from the Peterborough team came to St. Thomas and negotiations were at once started to get him to sign up with St. Thomas. The directors and Manager Stewart were all agreed to Templin joining the team but while Secretary Robinson of Hamilton was trying to readjust the troubles between Templin and the Peterborough people, Templin got a phone message from his wife in Peterborough and he left in the evening for Buffalo to join her there. They decided to go on to Reading, Pa.

AVERTED A WAR.

How Earl Cowley Prevented an International Catastrophe

Sir Francis Bertie, British ambassador in Paris, represented the British Government at the unveiling of the statues of Queen Victoria and King Edward at Nice and Cannes respectively on April 8 and 10. For forty years Sir Francis was a member of the permanent staff of the Foreign Office in London, and though he had never represented the Court of St. James abroad he was suddenly made ambassador to Italy. It was an unusual appointment, but it was entirely justified. Sir Francis was, however, in no need of tuition as a diplomat, for diplomacy was in his blood. And when the time came for his transference to the Quai d'Orsay he was simply following in the footsteps of his forefathers.

Lady Bertie's father was the Hon. Sir Henry Wellesley, one of the sons of that Earl of Mornington who fathered the great Duke of Wellington and the first Marquis Wellesley. His fifth son, the before-mentioned Sir Henry, became Earl Cowley, and the father of Lady Feodorovna Bertie. Earl Cowley was British ambassador in Paris, and during a great crisis, between England and France, Lord Malmesbury sent a "highly patriotic despatch" for delivery to the French Government.

The despatch amazed Lord Cowley, who saw that its delivery would mean war. So Lord Cowley said nothing, but just went round to Count Walewski, for a "quiet little chat," in the course of which he drew from his pocket the warlike despatch, and "allowed" the French statesman to peruse it.

Said Count Walewski, "You may hand me that despatch; but if you do I shall send you your passports to-morrow morning!" Lord Cowley carefully tucked the despatch away in his coat-tail pocket, went back to the British Embassy, and sent the despatch back to London, so that its "i's" might be dotted, and its "t's" crossed. Twice Lord Cowley had to return that dangerous document to London before he would present it to the French Government, and when all the verbal squibs and crackers were expunged he sent it to Walewski—and peace reigned!

Second son of the sixth Earl of Abingdon, Sir Francis was born in August, 1844, and entered the Foreign Office at the age of nineteen.

Big African Railroads.

Five vast railway projects for the opening up of Africa are at present either in progress or seriously considered. First, there is the great Cape to Cairo Railway, whose northern and southern sections are pushing slowly to an ultimate junction in mid-Africa.

Then there is the French Trans-Saharan which may be extended eventually through Equatorial Africa to Cape Town and the further scheme of that nation to join the valley of the Niger and Lake Tchad with the Atlantic coast by means of the Trans-Sudanese Railway. Germany also has planned the Trans-Equatorial road, her first important railroad development in Africa.

The fifth enterprise contemplates building a line from the straits of Gibraltar southerly along the Atlantic coast by way of Casablanca and Agadir to Dakar, which is an important point of shipment for west Africa, where France has lately built an important naval station.

Pistols In Parliament.

For a parallel scene to that which was recently witnessed in the lobby of the House of Commons when a young clergyman discharged a revolver—happily without causing injury to any one—one must go back 100 years, when on May 11, 1812, John Bellingham assassinated Spencer Perceval, who was then Prime Minister of England. Bellingham, who was a bankrupt of disordered brain and who had a grievance against the Government, which had refused to interfere with the regular process of the Russian law, under which he had been arrested, went up to Perceval as the Premier passed through the lobby, placed a pistol at his breast and fired. Perceval walked on one or two paces, faintly murmured, "Oh, I am murdered!" and fell on the floor. Bellingham was afterward tried, convicted and hanged.

These are the only two occasions that shots have been fired in the House of Commons.—London Answers.

IT DOESN'T PAY.

English Prison Governor Discusses Earnings of Criminals.

Certainly not! was the emphatic answer of the governor of one of England's prisons, to whom a writer put the question, "Does it pay to be a criminal?" "I have no hesitation in saying that forty-nine out of fifty criminals could make a better living out of any respectable form of work than by breaking the law," declares the official.

I have made inquiries on this point from scores of men, from burglars to pickpockets, who have been under my charge; and, almost without exception, they endorse this statement. One man, a most expert and daring burglar, confessed to me that in forty years he had not averaged 30s. a week; and in no year had his "takings" exceeded $1,500. It is true that he had spent nearly half the period within prison walls; but that, of course, is "part of the game." "I should have done better if I had stuck to my carpenter's bench," he said, ruefully. And so he would.

That this man's case is not exceptional is proved by official figures. In a recent year there were just over 500 burglaries in London; and the total value taken was $22,000—according to the estimate of the victims. In 428 cases the spoil did not exceed $25. The average was $40; and the sum netted by the burglars, probably about $10.

At $10 for an average haul, you can see that a burglar must be very active to make even a reliable $7.50 weekly all the year round.

And it is the same with picking pockets. I know one very old hand who told me that he would gladly retire any day on an allowance of $5 a week; "for that's more than I have earned on an average in thirty years," he added. For weeks together this particular thief has often not known how to get a meal or a bed. Then perhaps he would have a haul worth $250 or more in a day. But "what is the good of that?" he asked, "when you have to part with a red toy and tackle (a gold watch and chain) for a couple of quid, or a half-century in pap ($250 worth of notes) for $25?"

Of course, as a rule, the pickpocket gets better prices than these for his booty—the usual sum is about a fourth of the value. But, in the most favorable circumstances, he is a lucky man who makes anything like $10 a week by his "profession."

I am convinced that if the spoil were equally divided among the thousand of housebreakers and thieves in London the individual share would not come to $5 a week; which is, of course, a smaller sum than the criminal could earn by honest labor.

And of other branches of crime, from forging to counterfeit-coining, a similar story can be told. It is true that here and there a man makes a really big haul and lives to enjoy it; but such cases are scarcely one in a hundred. The average earnings over a number of years are less than could be earned by the same men (for many of them are exceedingly clever) by honorable work.

Add to this that the criminal's life is much shorter than that of the honest man; that it is full of danger and nerve-shattering experiences; and that a good part of it usually spent in durance—and you will agree with me that crime is distinctly not a paying game.

A Shower of Gold.

A sudden outburst of generosity which prompted a strangely-dressed young man to throw handfuls of gold and silver to passers-by in the Strand and Fleet streets, in London, Eng., ended abruptly in his being marched to Bridewell, where he was charged with obstructing the traffic. Newspaper boys near the Gaiety Theatre were the first to benefit from the strange young man's generosity. He was dressed completely in green, having gone to the length of putting on a pair of bright green spats. He gave the newsboys outside the Gaiety Theatre a sovereign each, telling them that they were "Bright little fellows, and deserved presents." The boys expressed boundless admiration for him, and natually accompanied him when he walked towards the Law Courts.

After reaching Fleet street the man's generosity completely mastered him, and extraordinary scenes were witnessed. He threw handfuls of sovereigns and shillings into the air, and a large crowd struggled desperately on the pavement and in the roadway to capture the coins. In a few minutes traffic was completely suspended, and the man varied the proceedings by throwing handfuls of money into private motor-cars, which were held up by the crowd of people round him. Four or five policemen fought their way through the excited people, and arrested the extraordinary individual who had brought such a rich harvest to the newspaper sellers. On his way to the police station the man made attempts to throw more money away, but was prevented from doing so by the police. He threw away at least $500 in gold before he was arrested, and the street had to be cleared a number of times after he had gone, for crowds of people continued to hunt for stray coins in the gutter.

The Newest Peril.

A new danger threatens England, according to Sir William Ramsay. Speaking at the British Science Guild, he said that Great Britain's supply of nitro soda, which came from Chile and Peru and was an absolute necessity for the manufacture of explosives, might be cut off if Great Britain was involved in a war. The Government ought to be warned that it was living on the edge of a precipice.

Unless it did the same as the other European countries and made nitrates from the atmosphere, England would be without ammunition a few months after war broke out.

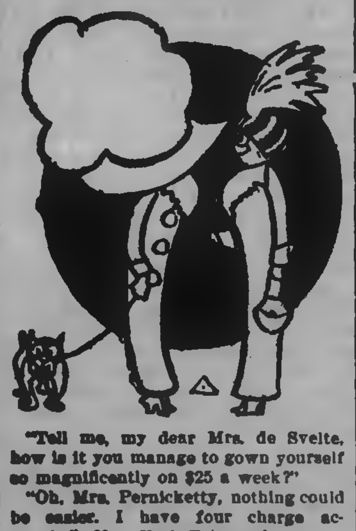
THE LURE OF THE SAP TIME.

I join the throng in the crowded street.
We are slaves in search of pelf;
I am sorry for the fettered gang;
I am sorrier for myself
Just
Because
I know a place up country,
In God's great out of doors,
A quiet sheltered corner
On which the springtime pours
The wine of warmth and magic,
And well I know the sun
Has kissed the grove of maples
And the sap begins to run.

There are sounds and sights that money brings.
They are good to hear and to see,
But they're city sights and city sounds,
And right now they've no charm for me—
Just
Because
I want to see the bluebirds
And watch a sap snow fall,
To see the pussy willows
And hear the robin's call;
To see the frisky chipmunks,
As oft before I've done.
I want to be up country
When the sap begins to run.

I sit in the seats of the mighty
And gather my share of the best,
Nor weary of toil that brings treasure,
Still, now I am filled with unrest,
Just
Because
I want to see the sap bush
And smell the wood fire smoke,
To watch the boiling kettles
And see the old home folk;
I'm hungry for hot sugar
And the simple, homely fun
That's sure to be up country
When the sap begins to run.
—National Magazine.

How Perfectly Simple.



"Tell me, my dear Mrs. de Svelte, how is it you manage to gown yourself so magnificently on $25 a week?"

"Oh, Mrs. Pernicketty, nothing could be easier. I have four charge accounts."—New York Telegraph.

He Was Game.

A St. Paul youth called up his sweetheart in Chicago by long distance and enjoyed a little talk.

The time slipped by and the rates slipped up.

It was a pleasant half hour all right, but presently he came back to earth, and then a rapid mental calculation showed him he had talked $18 worth.

But he was game.

"What are you laughing at?" the girl inquired.

"I'm laughing to think that this little talk has cost me as much as a railway trip to Chicago and return."

"Mercy!" screamed the girl. "Why don't you stop?"

"Well," replied the youth, "I want to add enough for a parlor car each way."

So they talked a little longer.

"Just one more word," said the youth.

"What's that for?"

"Tips for the porters."

Then he rang off.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In His Father's Suit.

Colonel Winter Wimberly of Macon, Ga., enjoys a wide reputation as a story teller in Georgia, that land of story tellers.

Colonel Wimberly was once engaged in a case in which the plaintiff's son, a lad of eight years, was to appear as a witness.

When the youngster entered the box he wore shoes several sizes too large, a hat that almost hid his face, long trousers rolled up so that the baggy knees were at his ankles and, to complete the picture, a swallowtail coat that had to be held to keep it from sweeping the floor.

This ludicrous picture was too much for the court, but the judge, between his spasms of laughter, managed to ask the boy his reason for appearing in such garb.

With wondering look, the lad fished in an inner pocket and hauled the summons from it, pointing out a sentence with solemn mien as he did so. "To appear in his father's suit," it read.—New York Sun.

A Matter of Reach.

Judge W. C. Rice, clerk at the west side court, who is a six footer, and J. H. Bergen, five feet four inches, who is also a clerk in the criminal court, were arguing about a fishing expedition they had taken to Long Beach, Cal.

"I caught a bass down there one day that long," said Judge Rice, measuring the length of one arm—which is very long.

"That's nothing," returned Bergen. "I caught a tarpon down there this long," he said, stretching out both arms to their full length.

"Well, one time down there," came back Judge Rice, "I caught a small shark this long," and he, too, stretched his arms at full length, beating Bergen's greatest capacity for measuring by a good twelve inches.

"Oh, there's no use my arguing with you," said Bergen, turning away in disgust. "You know you've got longer arms than I have."—Denver Times.

A Lingering Suspicion.

A sudden thunderclap sent little Billy running to his father with a scared whimper. "Come, come!" said pa. "Be brave! Be a man!"

As they sat together on the veranda Billy boldly declared, "Us men aren't 'fraid of nothin', are us, pa?"

"Why, of course not, sonny!"

"Nothing at all, Billy, boy."

A pause. Then Billy looked up with a sly face and said, "Aren't us 'fraid of ma neither, pa?"—Judge.

An Unrealized Idyl of the King.

"Can you invent a bureau that a man's wife will let him have two drawers off?" we asked.—New York Sun.

INCOMPETENT, BUT HONEST.

He Didn't Offer the Usual Excuses, Anyway.

"What's the matter—you're not working?"

"No. I'm out of a job."

"But you had a good position. Did you resign?"

"No. To be perfectly frank with you, I was discharged."

"Oh, I see. Had trouble with the boss, I suppose, and you told him where he got off."

"No."

"That's queer. He probably wanted you to work overtime and you refused?"

"No, nothing like that."

"Then I presume the boss let you go to make room for one of his relatives?"

"No, I'm sorry to say. He had to advertise for a man to fill my place."

"Now I've got it. You insisted on having more money, and he let you go so that he could hire a cheaper man."

"No, I don't think that is the reason."

"For goodness, you don't mean to say that you were fired because you couldn't"—

"Couldn't do the work. That's it exactly. I was fired for incompetency, just as nine-tenths of the people are who give all those other excuses."—Detroit Free Press.

Seconding the Motion.

"Did you tell the janitor we'd move if he didn't send up more heat?" asked Mr. Meekton's wife.

"I did. He seemed perfectly reconciled to the idea of our moving and, in fact, went so far as to suggest a destination that would render all complaint of deficient heat quite unnecessary."—Washington Star.

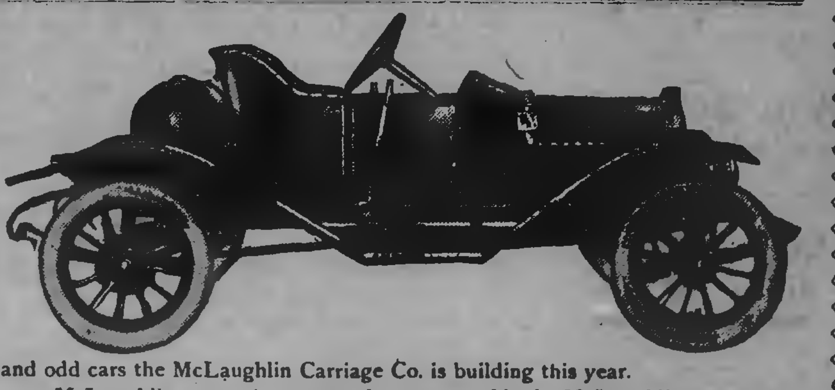
McLAUGHLIN-BUICK MOTOR CARS

Automobile purchasers may be divided into three classes:



Those to whom low price is a greater consideration than service ability.

Those to whom price is no obstacle in gratifying a taste for the exclusive and the luxurious.

Then there is the great middle class—those who are prepared to make only a moderate expenditure but at the same time demand a car with power, style, stamina, and beauty.

It is the latter who will purchase the two thousand odd cars the McLaughlin Carriage Co. is building this year.

The style and beauty can be judged from the many McLaughlin cars to be seen on the streets and in the McLaughlin showrooms.

The power plant and the stamina of the McLaughlin car as a whole is guaranteed by the stability and integrity of the house of McLaughlin. To appreciate what this means it must be known that the McLaughlin Carriage Co. embodies in every car forty-three years of experience.

The service of a McLaughlin car is assured by the immense factory at Oshawa and the branch houses and agencies in all the leading cities and towns in Canada.

If moderate price, power and beauty are considerations, your choice is logically the McLaughlin-Buick.

AN INCLINED PLANE CLOCK.

Its Motive Power Obtained by Use of the Force of Gravity.

Clocks come about as near to illustrating perpetual motion as any mechanism in general use. People are so familiar with them and with watches that they have lost their admiration of them, but really it is a very wonderful thing that a little machine can be made to run so perfectly and for such a long time on such a small expenditure of force. Numerous clocks have been devised which come very close to being perpetual.

Here is one that works on the gravity principle and that gets along entirely without a mainspring. When you want to "wind it up" you simply place it at the upper end of an inclined plane, and that's all there is to it. The clock in question will run thirty days. But the inclined plane in this case is only sixteen inches long. If the plane is made four feet long the clock will run three months. Hence it could be made to run a year if the plane were extended to sixteen feet. A heavy weight inside the clock furnishes the motive power, as it hangs suspended in such a way that it causes the wheels to go round as the clock slowly rolls down the inclined plane.

The maker, a Swiss-American, claims that this clock is more accurate than any spring clock, as the power is perfectly uniform.—Technical World.

Statue of Peter Pan.

The children who frequent Kensington Gardens must have spent many pleasant hours in imagination in company of Peter Pan and his comrades in adventure, and they must have been pleasurably surprised recently when they reached their playground to find the "boy who wouldn't grow up" there to greet them.

Not in the flesh, of course, but a very life-like representation in bronze of the pilot to the Never-Never Land. The statue has been placed in a glade overlooking one of the most picturesque stretches of the Serpentine.

It is not a formal, uninspired and uninspiring figure. Peter is represented standing on a gnarled and knotted old tree stump playing his pipe. In the crevices of the tree are snails and mice and rabbits and squirrels, and round the statue there is a little walk made of odd-shaped broken stones, so that the children can go close to Peter, though they cannot reach to touch him.

The statue, which is by Sir George Frampton and was exhibited in the Royal Academy last year, harmonises with the trees and shrubs and grass all round it. The donor of the delightful Peter is Mr. J. M. Barrie.

My soup makes noise whate'er I do.
I cannot ball it.

A CANADIAN ABROAD

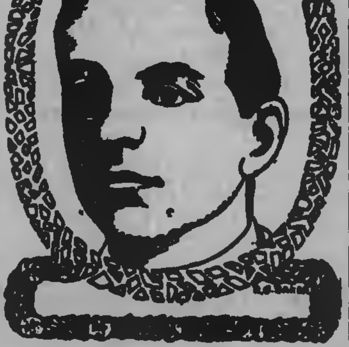
DR. METZLER IS FAMOUS IN EUROPEAN LEARNED CIRCLES.

Graduate of Toronto University Is the Discoverer of the Metzler Theorem in Mathematics and Has Won Laurels in European Societies, Although His Own Home Knows Little of Him—Still a Canadian.

In a profound German mathematical work, prepared by a profound German professor, you will run across a profound "theorem" called the "Metzler Theorem." Deceived by the name, you will probably think it given in honor of some be-spectacled German savant in a sleepy German university town. But the "theorem" is named in honor of a Canadian boy—a graduate of Toronto University.

Dr. William H. Metzler—the architect of the "theorem"—is a Canadian who has won in Europe a reputation which we have been too busy even to appreciate here. They know him in France as a member of the "Societe Mathematique de France." They know him in Germany as a member of the "Deutsche Mathematiker - Vereinigung." They know him in Italy as a member of the "Circolo Mathematico di Palermo." Then he is one of the 250 members of the London Mathematical Society. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh. In fact, he is a member of so many mathematical societies all round the world that it is fortunate that he is an expert mathematician, else he could never keep count of them.

Of course, he has written a number of mathematical papers and books, including a College Algebra. Still we do not think that this last offence should be harbored against him, even if any of us have suffered from the said Algebra. We must remember that he "eats" mathematics, and that he probably did not know how much he was hurting us. He is an editor, too, of the Mathematics Teacher—a periodical which, we are thankful to say, is not on our exchange list.



DR. WILLIAM H. METZLER.

Dr. Metzler was born at Odessa, Ont., in 1863, and was educated at Port Dover High School; Albert College, Belleville; Toronto University, and the Teachers' Training School, Kingston. He began by teaching in Canada. Then he won a fellowship at Clark University; and, after some miscellaneous teaching, settled down as a member of the staff of Syracuse University. Those were the days when we were producing more good men than we could employ at home; and the Americans seemed glad to get them. But Dr. Metzler has always remained a Canadian. There is nothing that he is prouder of than that he is one of the twelve Corresponding Fellows of the Royal Society of Canada.

For seventeen years he has served Syracuse; and is now not only professor and head of the Department of Mathematics, but is dean of the Graduate School as well. They think a lot of him in Syracuse; but his friends have always been hoping that he might return to his native country, now that we have more room here for the sort of exceptional ability of which he is the possessor. Canada is just entering upon her proper inheritance; and it is time that we summoned all our children home—all who have been faithful to us in heart—to share in the good fortune which has at long last fallen into our lap. And, in the day of our prosperity, we need just such scholarly men as Dr. Metzler; and there is no necessity of going outside the "home circle" to get them.—Canadian Courier.

Wolfe.

History is a stumbling block to many. "Wolfe," wrote an English lad recently, "was a very able man. He was sent out by the Honorable East India Company to take Calcutta; this he did, then he died. He is reported, as he led his men to the charge, to have quoted those memorable lines from 'Graves Energy': 'Up, Guards, and at 'em,' and to have said, 'Gentlemen, I would rather be the editor of these lines than take Calcutta'."

This is almost equal to the girl who wrote: "Early in the war Cromwell proceeded to train an austere band of followers under rigid discipline—to be henceforth known all the world over by the title which so well describes their characteristic qualities — viz., Cromwell's Regicides."

Flowers In a Boot.

An extraordinary floral curiosity was recently exhibited at the Birmingham flower show. Three fine blooms were firmly rooted in an old boot, and their splendid condition proved that they did not find their "home" uncongenial.

Wm. Farquharsen, proprietor of the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, died suddenly.

Cookery Notes

Good Things For the Spring Table.

Cocoa Flavored With Cinnamon.—If the afternoon cocoa served in place of tea at the sewing meet or at the little supper is especially delicious it might be well to inquire into its secret if such familiarity is warranted by acquaintance with the hostess. The mixture of some such delicious cup is often a surprise to women who have always supposed that chocolate is chocolate and cocoa cocoa. For instance, one woman flavors her cocoa with cinnamon, sherry and vanilla and often adds a cupful of strong coffee to the potful. And she gives a creamy consistency by using a tablespoonful of arrowroot for every quart of hot milk. Four tablespoonfuls of cocoa are allowed to this amount, and it is cooked slowly for twelve minutes with the cinnamon, arrowroot and about three tablespoonfuls of sugar. At the end of this time a tablespoonful of sherry is stirred in with a teaspoonful of vanilla and a saltspoonful of salt. Then the cocoa is whipped with a revolving egg beater until it is a mass of foam. The coffee, very strong, is turned in at the very last if it is wanted.

Swiss Steak.—Put two and a half pounds of round steak into a saucepan with just enough cold water to keep it from burning as it slowly cooks until tender enough to fall to pieces. Keep the saucepan well covered. A casserole is the best dish for cooking this tender. Then remove the bones, fat and gristle and mince very fine. Add salt and pepper to suit the taste, a pinch of nutmeg and a little catsup or hot table sauce. Press out the juices and work into the meat one unbeaten egg. Mold into shapes four inches long and three inches wide. Saute these a nice brown in good sweet dripping or bacon fat; arrange on a hot platter and garnish with parsley. Make a sauce by adding a large tablespoonful of butter to the pressed out juices, a cupful of milk, half a cupful of water and salt and pepper to taste. Thicken with a little flour paste and add half a can of button mushrooms or a dozen small oysters parboiled in their own liquor. If the oysters are used take the oyster liquor instead of the water for making the sauce.

Jelly Filled Oranges.—Take as many large China oranges as liked, then with the point of a sharp knife cut out from the top of each a round about the size of a quarter; then empty out the pulp, taking care not to break the rinds.

Throw into cold water. Make some jelly of the juice pressed from the pulp and strained quite clear. Color one-half a bright rose color with prepared cochineal, leaving the other very pale. When the jelly is nearly cold, drain and wipe the oranges and fill with alternate stripes of the different colored jelly, each color being allowed to get quite cold before the other is poured in.

When they are perfectly cold cut into quarters with a very sharp knife and arrange tastefully on a dish with sprigs of myrtle between.

New England Pie.—Use a deep pie plate. Pare Baldwin or greening apples, core and cut in thin slices. Line your pie plate with pastry, place a layer of apples over this and sprinkle with brown sugar. Then another layer of apple with the sugar until the pie plate is well filled and heaped in the middle. Over the top dot bits of butter, shake a pinch of salt over the whole and a small dash of red pepper, which will give a rich, pungent seasoning that other spices will not. Wet the edge of the lower crust, sprinkle with flour, put on the upper crust and press the edges firmly together. Bake a rich brown.

Parsnip Stew.—Wash and scrape half a dozen parsnips and slice the round way. Put on to cook in just enough water to cover. Add half a dozen thin slices of fat salt pork, two large onions, sliced, half a dozen medium sized potatoes. Stew all together slowly, adding salt, pepper and a dash of cayenne fifteen minutes before serving. When done, add half a cup of cream, a small piece of butter and flour enough to thicken the gravy. Serve hot on a platter around boiled salt mackerel or finnan haddie cooked in milk or broiled.

Puree of Carrots.—Boil enough carrots to make two cupfuls after they have been put through a sieve. Add three cupfuls of milk, add salt to taste and place over the fire and let come to a boil, then add three small tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with a little cold milk. Stir constantly until it boils, add a tablespoonful of butter, a dash of pepper and take from the fire and serve. A little light brown sugar may be added and a dash of grated nutmeg if you like.

Casserole of Chops.—For a casserole of chops, saute the chops in a pan with minced onions until they are well browned. Then put the chops into the casserole, cover them with two minced peppers, the contents of a bottle of button mushrooms, diced potatoes that have been parboiled and a can of peas drained from their liquor. Moisten the contents with hot water, season with salt and pepper, and cook slowly for about half an hour. Some persons add a tomato.

W. B. Sanders, for 33 years postmaster at Stouffville, has been dismissed as an alleged partisan.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

PRESIDENT TAFT SCORES ON THE FIRST DIVISION IN THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

Senator Root Elected Temporary Chairman, Beating Governor McGoveren, the Roosevelt Choice by a Majority Of 56—First Contest in the History of the Party for This Position.

Special to The Review.

Chicago, June 19— Temporary Chairman Root called the convention to order at 11.15 this morning. It is expected that the proceedings of to-day will be practically as follows—

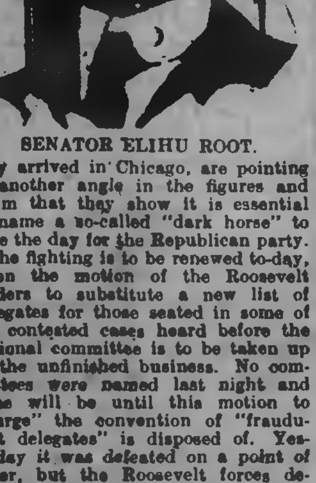
Ex-Gov. Hadley will move that 92 Taft delegates, seated by the national committee in contested election cases be struck from the roll and Roosevelt delegates be substituted.

An amendment will be proposed that this contested list be referred to the credentials committee, and there will be three hours debate on the motion and amendment, followed by a roll call of delegates. Afterwards there will be short night session. It is expected that the convention will get properly down to business Thursday morning and that the credentials committee and the platform committee will report Thursday night.

Chicago, June 19.—Against the threats, charges and bitter invective of the Roosevelt, the Taft supporters in the Republican National Convention put through the first portion of their program by electing Senator Elihu Root of New York as temporary chairman. It required more than five hours to reach a vote on the chairmanship.

The calling of the roll was beset with difficulty from the very first name on the list of delegates, but in the end, when the tumult had died away, Senator Root was found to have won by a vote of 558 to 502 for Governor Francis E. McGovern of Wisconsin, with 14 scattering votes and four not voting.

Last night both the Taft and Roosevelt forces are claiming that this vote indicates that their candidate is absolutely sure to win. The advantage appears to be with the President, however, for while he is sure to lose some of the votes that were cast for Senator Root, it is claimed that he will gain, if instructions are lived up to, some of the votes independently cast for McGovern.



SENATOR ELIHU ROOT.

Those leaders who have been urging a compromise candidate ever since they arrived in Chicago, are pointing to another angle in the figures and claim that they show it is essential to name a so-called "dark horse" to save the day for the Republican party.

The fighting is to be renewed to-day, when the motion of the Roosevelt leaders to substitute a new list of delegates for those seated in some of the contested cases heard before the national committee is to be taken up as the unfinished business. No committees were named last night and none will be until this motion to "purge" the convention of "fraudulent delegates" is disposed of. Yesterday it was defeated on a point of order, but the Roosevelt forces declare that Parliamentary practice will not be permitted to stand in the way to-day.

There was one promise of real trouble, when State Senator Flinn compelled the repetition of the call of the Pennsylvania delegates, fighting the vote of one of the alternates who, he said, was being called out of proper order. The point was that the man called and who voted for Root was the second on the list, whereas the man first on the list of alternates from that district would have voted for McGovern.

"If you steal that vote," shouted Flinn, "there will be no roll called in this convention to-day."

That was all there was to it. The chairman overruled him, and the grinding voice of Secretary Gleason went on rolling out the vote.

With few exceptions the negro delegates from the south, about whose steadfastness there has been so much speculation during the last few days, stood fast for the Taft candidate.

Immediately after the vote was announced, Senator Root appeared on the platform. The crowd yelled itself hoarse, while the band swung into a lively tune. Sergeant-at-Arms Stone had the utmost difficulty in restoring order, and the cheering broke out anew as Chairman Rosewater, after a brief speech, which could not be heard, handed the big gavel to Root.

Flynn demanded attention from his place in the Pennsylvania section, but was disregarded. A minute after Senator Root stepped out to the front of the platform to begin his speech a storm of cat calls and jeers broke.

Senator Root prefaced his prepared speech by a few extemporaneous remarks.

"I thank you," he said, "and I beg you to believe that I deeply appreciate this expression of your confidence."

"Haw, haw haw," came a guffaw from the floor. Cries from members of the Pennsylvania delegation brought a group of policemen flying in that direction.

Sergeant-at-Arms Stone called upon the chief of police to restore order in the front rank of the Pennsylvania delegation, but Richard R. Quay, sitting in the front, put his hand to his mouth and called out "Receiver of stolen goods," while officers about him called for order.

Mr. Root had scarcely begun his address before hundreds of spectators on the floor and galleries began to move out of the hall, noisily and hurriedly. Senator Root suspended his speech, and asked Sergeant-at-Arms Stone to ask those who wished to leave, to go out at once.

Mr. Root continued his speech to a quiet and attentive audience. Here and there he elicited a ripple of applause, particularly when he touched upon the trust prosecution of the Taft administration.

Senator Root's tariff comment evoked a ripple of cheers. Predicting a Republican success in the fall election, he was given a round of applause.

"We need not despair of American institutions," he said, and the delegates and the meagre crowd in the galleries cheered the sentiment roundly.

In asserting the party's claim to a popular vote of confidence, he said:

"We claim it because we have shown ourselves a party of honest, efficient and economical administration, in which public moneys are faithfully applied, appointments are made on grounds of merit, efficient service is rigorously exacted, graft is reduced to a minimum, derelictions from official duty are sternly punished and a high standard of official morality is maintained.

"We challenge the judgment of the American people on the policies of McKinley and Roosevelt and Taft."

Referring to Taft's promise on July 28, 1908, to carry out the reforms inaugurated by Roosevelt, he quoted the former as saying:

"'The chief function of the next administration is to complete and perfect the machinery by which these standards may be maintained, by which the law-breakers may be promptly restrained and punished, but which will operate with sufficient accuracy and despatch to interfere with legitimate business as little as possible.'

"There spoke the voice of two Republican administrations and the promise of that declaration has been faithfully observed with painstaking and assiduous care."

Governor Hadley, who had again taken a place on the stage, renewed his motion to substitute a Roosevelt list of delegates for the temporary roll made by the national committee. An agreement had been reached that after this motion was made the convention should adjourn with the Hadley substitute list the unfinished business to be taken up immediately on convening.

TORONTO GETS BIG INDUSTRIES

Toronto, June 19.—A large iron works corporation, with a capitalization of $2,000,000 is to be established at Port Colborne, Ont., and three manufacturing concerns are to be located in central Ontario; if satisfactory arrangements can be made, in Toronto.

Wm. P. Fitzsimmons, commissioner of industries for the Grand Trunk Railway System, who is accompanying the British manufacturers' Canadian tour, made this statement yesterday afternoon.

The three other industries, which will locate either in Toronto or in this section of the province, consist of two embroidery manufacturing plants, and a concern for the handling of coarse seed. It is the desire of these firms to obtain already constructed modern factory buildings, as they wish to avoid the delay of having to wait the erection of buildings.

Mr. Fitzsimmons said that although it is causing him trouble trying to locate firms desiring buildings, it is a fact that this section of Ontario can at the present time boast of not having a modern factory building lying vacant.

Says We Know How to Sing.

London, June 19.—Considerable interest is being shown in the Bishop of Nova Scotia's endeavors to raise the Halifax Cathedral fund. The Bishop of London at a meeting on Monday said he had seen how delightfully loyal Canada is. The manner in which "God Save the King" is sung in Canada is magnificent, he said.

MR. LANCASTER SATISFIED WITH THE COURT'S JUDGMENT

P. B. Mignault Says Quebec Has Power to Pass a Law Making Religion a Test in Marriage—Mr. Burnham Explains.

E. A. Lancaster, M.P., framer of the marriage bill, said in St. Catharines yesterday that if the judgment of the Supreme Court is sustained by the Privy Council, the purpose of his bill will be carried out.

P. B. Mignault, K.C., who appeared for the Province of Quebec at the marriage case hearing before the Supreme Court, said at Montreal:

"Should the Province of Quebec pass a law to-morrow requiring that Roman Catholics could only be legally married within the province before a Roman Catholic priest, the Dominion Parliament would be powerless to interfere."

MR. MIGNAULT'S POINT.

"It will be observed," said the local Federal member to the Review to-day, "that Mr. Lancaster is satisfied with the judgment, since it provides that religion shall not be a bar to marriage.

"It will also be observed that the counsel for Quebec says that the result of the business will be that, if Quebec chooses to pass a law making religion a test, it can do it.

"But," said Mr. Burnham, "the point of this point is that it would have to be done by the representatives of the people, the Quebec legislature, and not by a church. This is the germ of the whole matter."

LLOYD GEORGE ATTACKED BY MOB OF IRATE SUFFRAGETTES

Special to the Review.

London, June 19—A savage attack was made on Lloyd George to-day by a small band of suffragettes outside Claxton Hall, in the Westminster district. Apart from knocking off the chancellors silk hat, they did no damage. Detectives held the suffragettes while the chancellor jumped into a taxi and drove off.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC RECITALS

THAW TRIES AGAIN FOR HIS FREEDOM

White Plains, June 19.—Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw will take the witness stand to testify for the state and against her husband, who is now fighting in the Supreme Court for his release from the Hospital for Criminal Insane at Matteawan, in the belief of Thaw's attorneys. The whereabouts of Mrs. Thaw have not been disclosed, and W. T. Jerome, chief counsel for the state, would neither corroborate nor deny yesterday the report that she is waiting nearby to appear as a witness when the state opens its case.

Yesterday's hearing opened with Dr. Roy L. Leak, assistant superintendent at Matteawan, on the stand. Dr. Leak said, as he did on Monday, that while Thaw is suffering from "constitutional inferiority," he did not think the slayer of Stanford White would be a menace to the community if liberated.

TRAVERS SAYS NESBITT WAS ADVISED OF EVERY STEP

Preliminary Hearing of the Charges Against Ex-President of Farmers' Bank Is Begun In Toronto, and After Manager Gives Evidence the Trial Is Adjourned Until To-day—Colonel Favors Wide Enquiry.

Toronto, June 19.—The preliminary hearing in the police court of the charges against Dr. W. Beattie Nesbitt of subscribing to false returns to the Dominion Government when he was president of the Farmers' Bank of Canada opened yesterday before Magistrate Denison.

Two hours were occupied in an examination of W. R. Travers by the crown counsel, Mr. George T. Blackstock, K.C., and the hearing was adjourned till to-day, the bail bonds being renewed.

Nothing really new was brought out in the testimony given by Travers, most of the time being taken up by a rehearsal of the incidents connected with the organisation of the bank, the issuance of the Treasury certificate, and the repayment of the loan of $80,000 to the Trusts & Guarantee Co. by the bank.

Mr. Blackstock's examination of Travers, who was the only witness called yesterday, was repeatedly interrupted by objections raised by Mr. H. H. Dewart K.C., who is counsel for Dr. Nesbitt. The objections were to the effect that the questions put by Mr. Blackstock were not such as would elicit from witness testimony relevant to the charges laid against Dr. Nesbitt. On the whole, Mr. Dewart's objections were not recognized by Col. Denison, who was disposed to allow the crown examiner to go as far as he wished in questioning Travers.

Travers told of having offered the presidency of the Farmers' Bank to Col. Munro and to Mr. John D. Ivey, and both these men had declined it. He was "up against" things, he said, when Dr. Nesbitt was sent to him by W. J. Lindsay. The doctor agreed to take the $3,000, the necessary qualification for a director, and accept the presidency. He said Dr. Nesbitt had been told "everything he should know as president," and the affairs of the bank were generally explained to him.

Travers said the doctor was cognizant of the fact that the bank had borrowed $80,000 from the Trusts & Guarantee Co. to make up the deficiency in the Government deposit.

Witness said the doctor was present when he (the witness) told the bank accountant, Mr. J. C. Fitzgibbon, to allocate the $80,000 borrowed money to shareholders as witness saw fit, witness following the advice given by Mr. Hunter.

Dr. Nesbitt was present, he said, at the meeting when Mr. Fitzgibbon showed that he had carried out witness' instructions. Travers admitted, when questioned by Col. Denison, that this was deceiving the Government.

Travers then told of the second big difficulty which arose on December 18, when Mr. John Knight of the Canadian Bankers' Association came to Toronto and wanted information as to what had been done with the $245,000 which had been returned to the bank by the Finance Department. Travers said that Dr. Nesbitt "took him in hand and gave him a pretty good raking over."

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT DISPOSES OF 98,364 ACRES

A Buffalo Lumber Merchant Purchases Townships of Haggart and Kendry In Northern Ontario at a Dollar an Acre and Undertakes to Clear the Land, Erect Big Sawmills and Take In Settlers.

Toronto, June 19.—Willis K. Jackson, a wealthy lumber merchant of Buffalo, has purchased two townships in Northern Ontario from the Ontario Government for $98,364, at one dollar an acre. Acting upon a plan to secure private capital and private enterprise in the work of colonizing the unsettled portion of the province, the Government has entered into an agreement with Mr. Jackson whereby the Townships of Haggart and Kendry are sold on the understanding that the land will be immediately cleared, sawmills costing over $70,000 erected and settlers brought into the district. Undoubtedly this is the most important step thus far in connection with the Government's colonization scheme.

It is also provided in the agreement that Hon. W. H. Hearst, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, will be able to sell farms at the Government's own figure which are to be prepared by the Jackson concern when the land is cleared.

The purchaser must commence within 90 days from the date of the agreement and complete with reasonable despatch a permanent sawmill, planing mill, sash and door factory, all of which will cost something more than $70,000. "This will accomplish a two-fold object," said Hon. Mr. Hearts. "It will furnish the settlers with all the finished building material they need to erect their own buildings and will furnish a market to settlers in nearby locations for their timber."

The money received remains the absolute property of the Government, but the title of the lands in question continue to be vested in the crown, and, as heretofore, is conveyed to each settler on a farm of 150 acres on receipt of the settlement duties.

According to the agreement, the purchasers guarantee to settle at least 2,400 acres within two years from the date of the agreement, at the rate of sixteen settlers a year.

Speaking about the section of the agreement respecting improved farms, Hon. Mr. Hearst said that they might attract well-to-do settlers who would bring considerable money to the country and thus aid more than others in its development.

The purchasers must construct and maintain all bridges, roads and other improvements that may be necessary in the interests of settlers. Another clause states that suitable buildings must be erected to be used as public schools. These schools will receive Government and municipal aid.

The two townships are situated about 40 miles west of Cochrane, and are tapped by the National Transcontinental Railway. Their total area is about 106,000 acres. The crown reserves all water power, and also a townsite on the banks of the Mattagami River, consisting of 404 acres. Without consent of the Government, the purchasers will not be able to lay out any townsites.

Railway Board Criticized.

Toronto, June 19.—The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board was liberally censured at the dinner given to the Ontario Municipal Association by the city at McConkey's last night. No reference was made to the recent decision regarding the Metropolitan Railway Co.'s tracks. The censure was of a general nature, and to the effect that the board lacked a thorough grasp of municipal conditions.

Acting as chairman in the absence of Mayor Geary, Controller Hocken said that the board was capable of improvement. The members of it did not appreciate the great problems which confronted a large city. As City Solicitor Mickle of Belleville put it, the Ontario Railway Board simply did not grasp the situation and it was discouraging to appear before them.

They had not shown a warm and enthusiastic interest in civic affairs, he said, and had shown a lack of municipal ideals

BERESFORD OBJECTS TO ANY REDUCTION IN NAVAL FORCE

London, June 19.—Lord Charles Beresford, in a letter to the press yesterday morning, strongly criticizes the policy of reducing the British naval strength in the Mediterranean, and argues that the adoption of the program which he submitted three years ago, estimated to cost $40,000,000, would have prevented the present crisis. Lord Charles says:

"The Government having apparently determined virtually to abandon the naval defence of the Mediterranean, what the nation must decide, and decide quickly, is whether or not it will permit the weakening to the breaking point of what is the main link in the defence of the Empire."

He contends that the general strategical disposition has now at its objective, neither France nor Russia, but another foreign power, and that power alone. He holds that the proposal that England's responsibilities in the Mediterranean should be developed upon France is a gross and palpable admission of weakness, adding:

"There are two courses open to the country. One is the maintainance of the naval supremacy of Great Britain. The alternative is to resign our naval supremacy, and give up the keys of the strategic centre of the Empire and rely upon the system of alliances, which has always proved disastrous, and which will prove equally fatal in the future."

"The navy," he goes on to say, "is undermanned, twenty thousand short of the number of men required to place it on a effective footing."

The Daily Express announces on the authority of a correspondent, whose sources of information, it asserts, are undoubted, that the Government will alter its policy regarding the Mediterranean, having been convinced by Lord Kitchener's stand against the weaking of either the land or the sea forces.

Quick Settlement of Marriage Case.

Ottawa, June 19.—The last word in the marriage controversy, arising out of the ne temere decree, and taking definite form in the Lancaster marriage bill, which was held to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court Monday, will perhaps be pronounced by the Supreme Jury of the Empire sooner than was generally expected. The Dominion Government realising its great importance, is anxious to have the question settled, as soon as possible, and with this view, Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, who sails for England on June 26, will endeavor to have the case argued before the Privy Council, in the latter part of July, the Minister himself to take charge of, and argue the case.

Wildcats of Great Britain.

The wildcat, the oldest member of the British fauna and a resident ever since the days of the mammoth, is rapidly becoming extinct. Dr. Hamilton's Pills Cured

"I think it should be the duty of the schools to teach children how to keep well," writes Miss Nannie E. Naydon, a well-known and highly esteemed resident of Bristol. "Ignorance of the laws of health and the use of improper remedies destroyed my vigor, and led me to the verge of invalidism. I was as a girl ruddy and strong. Nothing seemed to affect me until I was about thirty. Then gas began to form in the stomach. I suffered with bloating and a general failure in strength set in. If I went upstairs my breath hurt. My system was very irregular, and until I grew pretty bad I didn't pay much heed to my condition. Then I got blue, worried all the time, wakened in the night, and couldn't get to sleep again. None of the medicine I took helped me. One day I was reading of a very interesting case like mine cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I took the same treatment. It was just right—didn't physic me to death, but took hold of the weak, sick parts of my system, and set things right. It seems as if Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made me young again, and all my color, spirits, vigor, and health of former days have returned to stay."

Every girl and woman should use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly. They help a woman in many ways. Beware of the dealer who asks you to take an inferior pill on which his profit is larger than on Dr. Hamilton's. Sold in yellow boxes, 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone, Co., Kingston, Ont.

FREE RAW MATERIAL

It has always been recognized as one of the fundamental principles of a sound protective policy that raw material when not produced at home shall be admitted free of duty and this principle has been recognized in every revision of the tariff since protection was first put into effect in Canada in 1879. Anything that tends to foster home industries and increase the employment of Canadian labor has been encouraged and expanded from time to time as industrial conditions seem to demand.

It was only to be expected that the opposition press would rail against the recent reductions in duty on, and in some cases its entire removal from certain articles of raw material not produced or which could not be produced in Canada, and that the Globe should be most virulent of them all in the attack from the Borden Government.

The Globe holds that the reduction of duty on raw material should be accompanied by a corresponding reduction of duty on the finished product. The argument carried further means that when the raw material is admitted free the duty should also be removed from the finished product. Thus does the Globe plan the overthrow of a policy for which the people of Canada have stood for the past thirty-three years, and upon which they spoke, in terms which even the Globe could reasonably be supposed to understand, no later than last September.

SOMETHING NEW IN BANNERS

They used to wave a tattered and bloodstained undergarment as a banner in the Republican conventions. That was shortly after the war and was intended as a reminder that the North had whipped the South into submission, and as a call to the patriots to unite in a political pact against the conquered people. Then four years ago the Texas delegation sprang a new idea when they appeared in the hall bearing aloft a pair of trousers of such gigantic construction that they would probably have been several sizes too big for the redoubtable Goliath. This emblem was the Texans expression of fealty to President Taft, then a candidate for the first time, and whose misfortune it is to be weighted down with something over three hundred pounds of adipose tissue.

At Chicago yesterday Oklahoma delegates avowed their allegiance to Roosevelt by carrying into the hall, high upon a pole, a battered cowboy hat, of ancient vintage. Unless the Republican party's career is brought to a sumary conclusion in the present struggle, after the manner of the Kilkenny cats, it will require every article in a complete suit of clothes to furnish the delegates with appropriate banners at their national conventions.

GENERAL LAW NEEDED

Although the ne temere decree was practically confined to the Province of Quebec its effect was far reaching and under its operation a doubt was cast upon the validity of mixed marriage in every quarter of the Dominion. Although under the decision of the Supreme Court the decree lies dead the feeling of unrest and uncertainty is not likely to entirely disappear in the absence of a general law declaring valid all such marriages whether already solemnized or that may be contracted in the future.

This was probably the situation which Justice Idington had in mind when in his written decision he fitted a qualified dissent from the proposed enactment of the Lancaster Bill. The Justice, an Ontario man, formerly of Stratford says:

"It is an impossible bill as it stands. If I must answer categorically then I say as follows: The retrospective part would be good as part of a scheme for concurrent legislation by Parliament and by the Legislatures confirming past marriages, which probably neither can effectively do. The prospective part so far as it is possible to make effective prohibition of a religious test may be good, but it is doubtful, and it is probable the purpose can be reached by a better bill."

To relieve all anxiety, to set at rest forever all doubt on the important question of the validity of every marriage legally contracted according to the provisions of local legislation, a general marriage law seems to be demanded. We have the assurance of others besides the opinion of Justice Idington that such a law in proper form and under prescribed conditions is not impossible of enactment. The question is likely to come before the Privy Council next month and if it is found that Parliament has the power to pass such a law, without the necessity of first amending the British North American Act, the Dominion Government will pass a general marriage law at the next session of the Dominion House and the vexed marriage question will be quieted forever.

Even as the matter now stands, since the decision of the Supreme Court has been handed down, the validity of no mixed marriage can be called in question either by an ecclesiastical body or a private individual without rendering the critic liable to an action for slander.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The visiting British capitalists say Canada has plenty of brains, but no capital. Canada, they will find, is always ready for a dicker.

The Canadians who are attending the Chicago convention must have felt at home yesterday when the band played "My Country," seeing that the tune is the same as our own National Anthem.

If it is really the late W. T. Stead who is writing those spiritualistic messages back to earth, then the great journalist has sadly fallen away as to his literary gifts.

A Toronto paper says that Dr. Beattie Nesbitt drove the shareholders of the Farmers' Bank like a lot of sheep. Quite probable, but then while the sheep escaped the shepherd fell into the toils.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, June 18.—Belief that eastern longs were unloading to escape threatened large deliveries next month had a depressing effect to-day on wheat. The market closed at a net decline of ⅛c to ⅜c. Corn finished the same as last night to ⅝c to 1c lower, and oats off ⅛c a ⅜c. Provisions wound up more expensive by 7½c to 12½c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat unchanged to ⅜d higher than yesterday, and on corn ¼d to ⅜d higher. Wheat at Antwerp closed ⅜c higher, at Berlin ½c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 18.—There was no improvement in the volume of business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable, the demand being very limited and bids generally out of line. The local market for oats was weak, and prices declined ½c, with sales of round lots of extra No. 1 feed at 49c, and the best bid obtainable for No. 2 Canadian western was 48 c c.i.f. The flour trade continues quiet, but firm. Millfeed is steady. Demand for butter quiet and prices easy. Cheese steady, with a fair volume of business doing over cables. Hams and bacon have advanced ½c to 1c, and pure lard has declined ½c per pound.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

"Seventy-two miles," said the chauffeur, who knew his roads out of London.

"And what time does the boat leave?"

A light irradiated his face, and he swore volubly.

"We can do it!" he shouted. "By the Lord, we can do it! Are you game?"

Game? The light that leaped to her eyes was sufficient answer. He tore open the door of the cab, roaring to the driver:

Within two minuntes the Mercury was attracting the attention of the police as it whirled through the traffic towards Westminster Bridge. Dale's face was set like a block of granite. He had risked a good deal in leaving his master at the point of death at Calais; he was now risking more, far more, in rushing back to Calais again without having discharged the duty which had dragged him from that master's bedside. But he thought he had secured the best physician London could bring to the sufferer's side, and the belief sustained him in an action that was almost heroic. He was a simple-minded fellow, with a marked taste for speed in both animals and machinery, but had hit on one well-defined trait in human nature when he decided that if a man is dying for the sake of a woman the presence of that woman may cure when all else will fail.

CHAPTER XVI.

The End of One Tour: the Beginning of another

Cynthia found him lying in a darkened room. The nurse had just raised some of the blinds; a dismal day was drawing to its close, and more light was needed ere she could distinguish marked bottles, and doses, and the rest of the appurtenances of dangerous illness.

An English nurse would have forbidden the presence of a stranger; this French one acted with more discretion if less of strict science.

"Madam is his sister, perhaps?" she whispered.

"No."

"A relative, then?"

"No; a woman who loves him."

That heartbroken admission told the whole tale to the quick-witted Frenchwoman. There had been a duel; one man was seriously injured; the other, she had heard, was also receiving medical attention in another hotel—the temoins, wistful to avoid the innterrogation of the law, had so arranged—and there was the woman who had caused the quarrel.

"Well, such was the will of Providence! These things had been since man and woman were expelled from Paradise—for the nurse, though a devout Catholic, suspected that Genesis had suppressed certain details of the first fratricide—and would continue, she supposed, until the Millennium.

The girl tiptoed to the side of the bed. Medenham's eyes were closed, but he was muttering something. She bent and kissed his forehead, and a strange smile broke through the tense lines of pain. Even in his semi-conscious state he felt the touch of those exquisite lips.

"My lady Alice!" he said.

She choked back a sob. He was dreaming of "Comus"—standing with her in the ruined banqueting hall of Ludlow Castle.

"Yes, your Lady Alice," she breathed.

A slight shiver shook him.

"Don't tell Cynthia," he said brokenly. "She must never know. . . Ah, if I hadn't slipped, I would have quieted his viperish tongue. . . . But Cynthia must not know!"

"Oh, my dear, my dear, Cynthia does know! It is you who know not. Kind Heaven, let him live! Grant that I may tell him all that I know!"

She could not help it; the words welled forth of their own accord; but the nurse touched her arm gently.

"It is a little fever," she whispered with ready sympathy. "Soon it will pass. He will sleep, and, when he awakes, it is perhaps permissable that you should speak to him."

* * * * * * * * *

Well, it was permissable. The age of miracles had not passed for those two. Even the experienced doctor marveled at the strength of a man who at four o'clock in the morning could have a sword driven through the tissues in perilous proximity to the right lung, and yet, at nine o'clock on that same night, was able to announce unalterable resolution to get up and dress for breakfast next day. That, of course, was a pleasing fiction intended for Cynthia's benefit. It served its purpose admirably. The kindly nurse displayed an unexpected firmness in leading her to her own room, there to eat and sleep.

For Cynthia had an ordeal to face. Many things had been said in the car during that mad rush to Folkestone, and on board the steamer which ferried Dale and herself to Boulonge she had wrung from the taciturn chauffeur a full, free, and particular account of Medenham, his family, and his doings throughout as much of his life as Dale either knew or guessed. By the time they reached Boulonge she had made up her mind with a characteristic decision. One long telegram to her father, another to Lord Fairholme, caused heart-burning and dismay not alone in certain apartments of the Savoy Hotel, but in the aristocratic aloofness of Cavendish Spuare and Curzon Street. As a result, two elderly men a younger one, in the person of the Marquis of Scarland, and two tearful women—Lady St. Maur and Mrs. Leland—met at Charing Cross about one o'clock in the morning to travel by special train and steamer. Another woman telegraphed from Shropshire saying that baby was better, and that she would follow by the first steamer on Sunday. Mrs. Devar did not await developments. She fled, dinnerless, to some burrow in Bayswater.

These alarums and excursions were accompanied by the ringing of telephones and the flight of carriages back and forth through muddy London, and Cynthia was called on to deal with a whole sheaf of telegrams which demanded replies either to Dover or to Scarland Towers in Shropshire.

With a man like Vanrenen at one end, however, and a woman like his daughter at the other, it might be fairly assumed that even the most complex skein of circumstances might be resolved from its tangle. As a matter of curious coincidence, the vessel which carried Marigny to England passed in mid-Channel its sister ship conveying the grief stricken party of relatives to France. It happened, too, that the clouds from the Atlantic elected to hover over Britain rather than France, and when Cynthia stood on the quay to meet the incoming steamer, a burst of sunshine from the east gave promise of a fine if somewhat blustery day.

Five pairs of eyes sought her face anxiously while the vessel was warping to the quay opposite the Gare Maritime. They looked there for tidings, and they were not disappointed.

"That's all right," said Vanrenen with an unwonted huskiness in his voice. "Cynthia wouldn't smile if she hadn't good news."

"Thank God for that!" muttered the Earl, bending his head to examine a landing ticket, the clear type of which he was utterly unable to read.

"I never thought for a minute that any Frenchman could kill George," cried Scarland cheerfully.

But the two women said nothing, could see nothing, and the white-faced but smiling Cynthia standing near the shoreward end of the gangway had vanished in a sudden mist.

Doctors Advised An Operation. How She Escaped Told By Herself.

Buckner, Mo.—"For more than a year I suffered agonies from female troubles and the doctors at last decided there was no help for me unless I went to the hospital for an operation. I was awfully against that operation, and as a last resort wrote to you for special advice and I told you just what I suffered with bearing down pains, backache, shooting pains in my left side, and at times I could not touch my foot to the floor without screaming. I was short of breath, had smothered spells, felt dull and draggy all the time. I could not do any work, and oh how I dreaded to have an operation.

"I received a letter full of kind advice, which I followed, and if I had only written her a year ago I would have been saved so much suffering, for today I am a well woman. Woman's World

Mrs. Frederic Scheff's Appeal to Mothers.

MRS. FREDERIC SCHOFF.

Mrs. Frederic Schoff, president of the National Congress of Mothers, recently sent out the following appeal to parents and teachers' associations; such an appeal cannot fail to be of interest to every mother in the land who has the welfare of her children at heart:

"Gentle little mother, working faithfully in your own home to make your own children's lives true and pure, strong and vigorous, gathering them each night by your own fireside, listening to the evening prayers and tucking them snugly in their beds, do you know of the great world outside, of which your children are a part, in which, as soon as school days come, they must live? Yes, you know only too well of its temptations, and for your dear children's sakes you wish you could make it better. You are only one mother, with perhaps little outside influence. You think your own thoughts, but they do not go far toward solving the problems that face the children when beyond home influence. Get six mothers to organize a mothers' circle, and your influence is increased. Get twelve, and it is again doubled. Get the fathers on an advisory council and keep them informed of what you are studying and trying to do, and the influence is again more than doubled. Get your mothers' circles as an auxiliary of the school, and its opportunity and power for good are multiplied many times.

"Have every mother in the county a member of the mothers' circle in her community and hold an annual county conference of mothers to consider the welfare of the child in home, school and community, and the things that menace the children will have to go.

"Bring all the mothers of a state into annual conference for the welfare of the child, and your own children's opportunities and privileges will be far beyond what they are when mothers sit, each one in her own home, thinking and wishing things might be improved, but without the strength which comes from organization, unable to accomplish much.

"Mothers organized are a power which no man wishes to resist. They can ask what they will for the children, and legislators and educators will listen with respect.

"Gentle little mother, in your busy life in the home do not forget that your children are citizens of the nation, that for them you want the nation to do all that will enlarge the possibilities of life and health for all children and that by joining or forming your little local circle of perhaps a dozen mothers you can be a part of a county, state and national organization of mothers whose sole object is to give to every child the chance to develop physically, mentally and morally as he should.

"What other benefit will you, gentle mother, derive from joining the National Congress of Mothers? You will be kept in touch with the best thought of the best and most experienced men and women on bringing up children. You will have study courses recommended to you, books for yourself and your children. You will feel the pleasure of knowing that by your membership you are strengthening and encouraging those who are working successfully to improve the conditions of childhood throughout the nation.

"You may never find it possible to attend a national congress, but if you do it will stimulate you to a higher conception of your great privilege and opportunity in being a mother. If you cannot attend you may read the wonderful words of those who have studied children and know how to bring out their best, physically and morally.

"Are you not glad that there are women and men, too, who have organized to guard and promote in every possible way the welfare of the children? If so, show your appreciation by joining the congress."

Fashion For Flowers.

The woman who neglects opportunities for decorating her costume with artificial flowers is indeed careless. Never were made blossoms more lifelike, whether of velvet, satin or gauze.

All smart evening gowns carry a group of mixed blooms or three orchids with ferns. The single American Beauty rose is a favorite; also the red poinsettias. Small flowers are not in fashion.

A Long Sentence.

The Twelfth Royal Lancers, now stationed at Potchefstroom, are, says The Johannesburg Evening Chronicle, looking forward to the end this year of a hundred years' punishment inflicted on them in 1812. In that year, when the war was in progress in Spain, the Lancers broke into a monastery and misbehaved themselves. When the Duke of Wellington heard of this he paraded the regiment and sentenced it to a hundred years' penalty. This penalty is still carried out in Potchefstroom to-day. It takes the form of hymn-playing. Every night at 10 o'clock for a hundred years, so ran the duke's order, the band must parade and play five hymns as a punishment. These are the Spanish National Anthem, the Russian National Anthem, the Vesper Hymn, the Prince of Wales' Hymn, and the English National Anthem. Formerly each man in the regiment was required to stand to attention beside his bed when the penal hymns began, but this has now been stopped. Wellington was himself once a captain in the regiment.

King Liked the Horse.

The horse which the King rode at various reviews and other functions in India gave His Majesty such satisfaction that it was purchased and brought to England. The animal, which is a splendid specimen, is now in the Royal Mews at Buckingham Palace. To mark the royal visit, the horse has been named Delhi.

THE JUDGMENT ON THE COLLIER VS BROWN ACTION

This action was tried before a jury at Peterborough on 11th, 12th, and 13th June. The questions submitted to the jury with their answers are hereto annexed. To these findings of fact I must apply the law and give judgment accordingly. The jury find that Brown was and acted as Collier's agent in the negotiations in question, that Collier paid him $150.00 commission that Sherry also paid Brown $250.00 commission for the same transaction and that Collier did not know of such payment by Sherry till February 1912, more than a year after the transaction was closed.

These being the facts as found and on which I must base my judgment what is the legal result? Plaintiff Collier claims re-payment of the $150 paid by him as not being earned by Brown and also claims the $250.00 paid by Sherry, a secret and dishonest commission received by Brown in fraud of his employer and principal Collier. It was practically admitted in argument that plaintiff must succeed as to the $250.00; in any event the law is very clear that he must so succeed.

There is nothing intrinsically wrong in an agent accepting commission from both sides, but only on one condition. that all parties know of it. There must be the fullest disclosure to justify such an act.

The relation of principal and agent is one of confidence requiring the utmost good faith. The principal has the right to assume his agent works for him and for him alone. "No man can serve two masters," and serve both honestly and well. The principal may rightly assume the money paid by the other party to the agent would and should have been paid him in an increased price for his property. I am informed that it is not unusual especially in exchange of property for the agent or broker to act for both parties and receive a commission from both but even so it is still illegal and dishonest, unless the principal is fully informed of it. Then of course the commission ceases to be secret and the question does not arise I prefer to believe and do believe that he, (Brown) did this thoughtlessly, relying on what is apparently all too common, and which if grown into a custom, is one that cannot too soon be abandoned. I do not think that the expressions cheat and fraud, liar and purjurer, etc., used in this action used by both parties were justified or helpful to those using them. I prefer to regard Mr. Brown as guiltless of moral turpitude in this matter, but even so this cannot affect the legal results of his act as found by the jury.

"Unfortunately there appears to prevail in commercial circles, in which perfectly honorable men desire to play an honest part, an extraordinary laxity in the view taken of the earning of secret profits by agents. The sooner it is recognized that such secret profits ought to be disapproved of by men in an honorable profession, the better it will be for commerce in all its branches."

"I think that a person acting in a position of trust and confidence cannot too well understand that the above rules will be rightly enforced."

I think the plaintiff is unquestionably entitled to recover the $250.00 paid by Sherry to Brown and such was, I understand, admitted on the findings as made.

But assuming all that to be true, Mr. Kerr, counsel for defence, contended forcibly that Brown having earned the 150.00 paid him by Collier was entitled to retain that as his commission. He relied chiefly on Culverwell v. Birney, 11 O. R. 265, which is, if binding, an authority for that proposition. That was an action tried by the late lamented Armour C. J. O., who held the agent so acting not entitled to recover his commission.

The Divisional Court reversed this judgment and it is this decision Mr. Kerr relies on, chiefly the judgment of Cameron C.J., at p. 269.

"This was on other points reversed in the Court of Appeal 14 A. R. 266. This fact might not help us much but for the remarks of Osler, J. A. dealing in appeal with the point in issue at p. 261-2 who expressly approves of the judgment of the trial Judge and differs from the decision of the Divisional Court even on that point, which as stated was reversed on other grounds.

But let us follow this case, Culverwell v. Birney further. It was approved and followed in the Manitoba Courts in Division v. Manitoba & N. W. Land Co. 14 Man. L. R. 233, The King's Bench there followed the reasoning of the Divisional Court in Ontario. This was taken to the Supreme Court of Canada and unanimously reversed. Man. &c. v. Davidson, 34 S.C.R. 255.

In this case the agent had not received money from the opposite party but had been promised it. The Court held that the mere promise, and much more the receipt, of payment from the other side disentitled the agent from receiving his commission

The test is—did the undisclosed bargain put the agent in such a position that he had the temptation not to perform his duty to his employer. If so he gives no faithful service or consideration and forfeits all claim to payment. This is a decision of the highest Court in Canada on the exact point before me and I must follow it.

The English Courts, too, furnish many and strong authorities on the point in question. See Barton Deep Sea Fishing Co. vs. Ansell, 39 ch. D. 339.

In it Lord Justice Bowen says:—"If it is profit arising out of the transaction it belongs to the master, and the agent or servant has no right to take it or keep it or bargain for it, or to receive it without bargain unless his employer or master knows it."—1903, 3 K.B. 636.

Another more recent case is Andrew v. Ramsay, which covers exactly both the points in question in the case at bar, i.e., the agent receiving the secret profits must not only account for that profit to his principal, but is not entitled to any commission from his principal.

In his judgment Lord Alverstone says: "Unless the agent can say to his principal: 'I have been acting as your agent and have done my duty by you,' he is not entitled to any commission."

"It is only an instance of an agent who has acted improperly being unable to recover his commission from his principal. It is clear the purchaser was willing to pay $20 more than the price the plaintiff received, and it may well be he would have given more than that. The interests of the agents here was averse to that of the principal.

"A principal is entitled to have an honest agent, and it is only the honest agent who is entitled to any commission.

"That is, I think, supported both by authority and principle; but if, as is suggested, there is no authority directly bearing on this question, I think that the sooner such an authority is made the better.

"Mr. Kerr argues, and I think, correctly, that all the Canadian authorities are cases in which the agent sues for commission, and that there is no authority for taking from an agent a commission already paid him. I do not agree with the principle involved in this contention, nor would I feel inclined to give it effect in the absence of express authority. But the precise point is covered in Andrew v. Ramsay, which is a complete answer to that argument also.

As to the general principles involved I refer also to Hippisley v. Knee Bros, 1905, 1 k.b. 1, also to Nitedals v. Brewster, 1906, 2 ch. 671. These authorities are all binding and conclusive. The jury have found the facts; applying the law to these facts as found I must direct judgment to be entered for the plaintiff for $400.00 ($250.00 x $150.00) and costs of action to be taxed.

Thirty days stay.

"E. C. S. HUYCKE,"
Judge.

WHAT CANADIAN EDITORS SAY OF THE MARRIAGE CASE

Consensus of Editorial Opinion is that the Decision is Satisfactory as Clearing up all Doubts on the Subject of the Validity of Mixed Marriages—Some Hold That no Further Legislation is Absolutely Required.

No important court decision ever handed down has probably been hailed with so much general satisfaction as that rendered Monday in the marriage reference case. The leading papers of the country practically agree that a tense situation has been relieved. Some editors even go so far as to express the opinion that no further legislation on the part of the Dominion Parliament is required to quiet the unrest that has existed for so many years over the marriage question. Others advocate a general marriage law that all Provincial differences between church and state may be permanently settled.

Secretary Silcox, of the Evangelical Alliance, speaking for that body, intimates that the Protestant clergymen are disposed to agree to the marriage of two Protestants by a Roman Catholic priest.

Extracts from editorials on the Supreme Court decision are here given:

NO AMENDMENT NEEDED.

Toronto Globe.

The Government of Canada is a Federal Government that will ere long have its hands full attending to the great national affairs of many millions of people scattered over a wide expanse of territory. It should leave affairs such as the issue of marriage licenses and the authorization of persons to perform the marriage ceremony to the Provinces, which, under the Confederation pact, have control of all questions of "property and civil rights," unless it is clearly shown that the Provinces are doing injustice by the adoption of laws that favor one religious body at the expense of all others. If the law of Quebec is what the Supreme Court says it is, there is no need for any amendment of the British North America Act.

STILL SCENTS DANGER.

Toronto World.

By inference the court has decided that the ne temere decree is not a part of the civil law of Quebec, but it is not plain that the power to incorporate its provisions in the civil code is denied to the Quebec Legislature. The court, however, was not asked to rule on this point.

LANCASTER BILL NOT NOW NECESSARY.

Toronto Star.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada is, first, that the Lancaster marriage bill is unconstitutional, and second, that it is to some extent unnecessary, because the law is now in part as Mr. Lancaster wished it should be. The law of the Province of Quebec does not invalidate marriage because it is not contracted before a Roman Catholic priest. A Protestant minister may lawfully marry either a Protestant and Catholic, or two Catholics. The answer is limited to the Province of Quebec because the question is so limited. It may be contended that what is true of the Province of Quebec is true everywhere; because only in the Province of Quebec has any doubt been cast by legal decisions upon mixed marriages.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT MAY BE REQUIRED.

Toronto News.

In other words the ne temere decree is non-operative in Quebec and therefore non-operative anywhere in Canada. Marriages of Roman Catholics and mixed marriages are good when performed by Protestant clergymen. In view of these features of the decision the court's finding that a Federal marriage law is beyond the power of Parliament is comparatively unimportant. The case will now go to the Privy Council, and should the Supreme Court judgment be upset in England, popular sentiment in this country would insist upon a uniform marriage law for the whole Dominion—even if we had to secure an amendment to the constitution enabling Parliament to pass such a measure.

OF LESSER CONSEQUENCE.

Ottawa Citizen.

The reference also invited opinions as to the Quebec law on marriage. The deliverance upon this issue, while it is effectually in the negative, is of lesser consequence, in as much as a Quebec judgment to the same effect is now in course of appeal.

AUTHORITY IS NOT NEEDED.

Mail and Empire.

Parliament has no authority to enact the Lancaster Marriage Bill, and, if it had the authority it would have no need to use it. That is the sum and substance of the answers given by the Supreme Court to the questions referred to it by the Government.

SATISFACTORY TO ALLIANCE.

Rev. E. D. Silcox, secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, of Toronto, voices the sentiments of the churches represented in that body when he says:—The judgment handed down by the Supreme Court re the ne temere decree is in the main satisfactory as far as it goes. It is conceded that a Protestant clergyman has the right to officiate at what is known as a mixed marriage, thus confirming the judgment of Judge Charbonneau in the Herbert case. It is also satisfactory to learn that in the judgment of the majority of judges a Protestant clergyman can solemnize the marriage of two Roman Catholics. This is what we all along have contended for, and we go further, and state that, in the event of the marriage of a Protestant couple by a Roman Catholic priest, such a marriage should be regarded as valid.

INQUEST IS CONCLUDED

Jury Find Drowning of Jas. Peters Was an Accident

The inquest to discover how James Peters, late assistant fishery overseer, came to his death, was concluded last evening, by the following verdict, brought in by the jury after a very short deliberation:—

"We, the jury empanelled to inquire into the means whereby James Peters, late assistant fishery overseer, came to his death, do find:

That said James Peters came to his death at Baxter's Creek on May first—cause of death—accidental drowning, cause of accident—upsetting of canoe.

One point cleared up beyond question by the report of the analysis performed on the stomach by Prof. Ellis, of Toronto, was that there was no traces of poison discovered in the stomach.

The report as read by Coroner Dr. Greer, stated that the examination brought to light no traces of poison, or any other reason which would throw light on the cause of death.

"That is all the evidence, gentlemen," he said, "and your verdict must be given in accordance with the evidence."

The jury agreed upon their verdict in less than five minutes.

The inquest in all called for four sittings. The widow and family of the victim were present.

Thornbeck was not required to say anything, but remained an unconcerned and stolid follower of the proceedings.

PETES CAME FROM BEHIND AGAIN AND BEAT BERLIN

Hamilton Kolts Play To-day and Tomorrow—St. Thomas Team for Four Days Day Series.

The White Caps made it three out of four on the road, at Berlin yesterday, beating the Deneau crew for the second time by one run, the score reading 6—5.

The Petes had to work all the time to annex the victory, and, as in the previous day's game, came from behind to land the honors. That sixth innings, when the Bees took four runs and shot ahead, wasn't relished by the faithfuls who watched the bulletins but nevertheless, there was the feeling that the Petes would breeze to the front. There were four errors charged against Manager Rowan's boys, and they were outhit, so the victory is all the more satisfactory.

To-day the locals start a long series of home games. Hamilton Kolts, who chased the Senators from first place, are here to-day and to-morrow, with St. Thomas following for Friday and Saturday, Monday and Tuesday.

London and Brantford finish out the month.

OTTAWA LEFT FIELDER FINED $10 FOR ASSAULTING DAVIS

Toronto, June 19.—President Fitzgerald, of the Canadian League, has fined Left Fielder Burke, of the Ottawa baseball team, $10 for using bad language and assaulting Umpire Davis in the dressing room.

The trouble occurred at Hamilton in yesterday's game after Burke had been called out at the plate, on a close decision.

The Hamilton Kolts hitting against Fred Herbert defeated the Senators, dislodging them from first place, London having won at home against Brantford. Hamilton won the game in the second when four counters were made. London now leads the League.

ARROWS WON GOOD BALL GAME

The Patterson street grounds was the scene of an exciting baseball game on Tuesday evening, when the Arrows pierced the hearts of the Black Muck boys to the tune of a 6—4 score. The Arrows presented a well-balanced team and put up good baseball.

The teams were:

Arrows—McGrath, c; Sharpe, p; Campbell, 1b; Jackson, 2b; Sharpe, 3b; Williamson, ss; Simmons, cf; Sheehy, rf; B. Hayes, lf.

Black Muck Boys—Woodcock, c; Sandycock, p; Woodcock, 1b; Liddell, 2b; Boskell, 3b; Wheeler, ss; Doughty, cf; Reed, rf; Calute, lf.

LOCAL RINK OF BOWLERS WON AT PORT HOPE

A rink of bowlers from the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club, made up of Mr. R. M. Waddell, Mr. J. H. Renwick, Dr. Caldwell and Dr. Marshall, motored to Port Hope yesterday and played two games with the Port Hope bowlers, losing the first by 11—14, but winning the second by 17—7, thus taking the round by 7 shots. The trip was greatly enjoyed and it is expected that the Port Hope Bowlers will play return games.

BROWNING'S CENTENARY.

Services In Westminster Abbey In Memory of Great English Poet.

The centenary of Robert Browning, one of the greatest of English poets, was observed on May 7 by commemoration exercises held by the many Browning societies throughout the world, and by memorial services in Westminster Abbey, where, in the "Poets' Corner," his body is entombed beside that of Tennyson.

The life of Browning was one of poetry and romance from beginning to end. Surrounded in his childhood days by learning and culture, in an atmosphere of the best in literature, art and music, it was but natural that the poet's career should have been destined to the realms of higher thought. Many of his works were difficult readily to understand, and, indeed, it is claimed that Tennyson once declared of Browning's "Sordello" that he could only understand the first and the last line "and these were both lies!"

Born in Camberwell, near London, Robert Browning was the son of a clerk in the Bank of England, who was a man of learning and an ardent lover of the classics, a writer of clever verse, and a connoisseur of rare prints and engravings, of which he was also a collector. The poet's mother was a gentlewoman of great delicacy and loveliness, of fervent religious feeling and with great love for music. She had known but little instruction in the art, but she was a natural musician, and every day in the late afternoon she was at her piano for her hour of "darkness and solitude and music." To the young Browning the playing of his mother was a source of great joy and it contributed to the other artistic influences of which poetic impressions are woven.

His marriage to Elizabeth Barrett, the poetess, was the result of a long and romantic courtship, against her father's opposition, and their married life was singularly beautiful and happy, ending only with the passing of the great English poet and dramatist, December 12, 1889.

Browning himself bore great respect for the learned bodies of his followers, and whenever, during the latter years of his life, he was asked to the meaning of a certain passage in one of his writings, he invariably replied that he did not know, "but just ask the Browning Society," he would add, with a twinkle in his eye, "they can tell you all about it."

Since Shakespeare, few poets have given to the world a message of such supreme importance to inspire and quicken spiritually. Browning's philosophy of life is that man is a spiritual being, his spiritual body clothed with a temporary physical body, formed to correspond with the physical world during his temporary sojourn for disciplinary and experimental experience; that he withdraws from this body to enter on the next plane of experience in this evolutionary progression, but that this change of condition constitutes no break in consciousness.

BEAUTIFUL EYES

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost is the eye brows are thin and scanty, and the lashes are thing and scanty. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. A two weeks' treatment will bring beauty to your eyes that you have never before possessed. By mail, prepaid, in opal boxes on receipt of price, fifty cents. B. V. McLAUGHLIN-BUICK MOTOR CARS

Automobile purchasers may be divided into three classes:

Those to whom low price is a greater consideration than service ability.

Those to whom price is no obstacle in gratifying a taste for the exclusive and the luxurious.

Then there is the great middle class—those who are prepared to make only a moderate expenditure but at the same time demand a car with power, style, stamina, and beauty.

It is the latter who will purchase the two thousand odd cars the McLaughlin Carriage Co. is building this year.

The style and beauty can be judged from the many McLaughlin cars to be seen on the streets and in the McLaughlin showrooms.

The power plant and the stamina of the McLaughlin car as a whole is guaranteed by the stability and integrity of the house of McLaughlin. To appreciate what this means it must be known that the McLaughlin Carriage Co. embodies in every car forty-three years of experience.

The service of a McLaughlin car is assured by the immense factory at Oshawa and the branch houses and agencies in all the leading cities and towns in Canada.

If moderate price, power and beauty are considerations, your choice is logically the McLaughlin-Buick.

FRASERVILLE

Special Correspondence.

Fraserville, June 18.—We are pleased to see Mr. Joseph Waterman home again. We wish him every success.

The Fraserville Adult Bible class are progressing favorably. They have chosen as their name, "Fraserville A. B.C." and their motto is, "To be and to do." Anyone wishing to become a member may do so within a month's time, after which the roll will be framed. They also propose electing a visiting committee.

The many farmers of Cavan and Monaghan will be pleased to learn that Mr. Atwell, who formerly ran the little brick mill at Millbrook, has rented Needler's old mill. Mr. Atwell is prepared to chop every day. He also intends putting in a crusher in the near future. The farmers are asked to patronize the old mill and build it up again.

It seemed to be quite warm Sunday night at church. It would be a good idea to furnish fans for the congregation.

A very pleasant evening was spent at Mr. Waterman's Monday evening when Miss Janet was presented with a handsome clock by the adult Bible class, of which she is president. We are very sorry to say she is leaving for the West at an early date to take up her duty as—well, we won't say what just now.

We are pleased to note Mr. E. Wood was somewhat better Saturday than he had been for the forepart of the week.

READY!

The little fly will soon appear.
So shoulder arms, my comrades dear.
Repel his boarders and marines.
Show what "no quarter" really means.
With club and heel, with hand and slat,
Kill off the graybeard and the brat,
Bang old Bluebottle, might and main,
And never stop till all are slain.

Oh, give each fly a deadly crack!
Land on his nose, his skull or back.
The toiler from his labor spare
To slay the fly that takes the air.
The hateful buzz on mornings hot
Stop with a well directed swat.
Though in your home some flies have fed,
Stay not your hand till all are dead.

Life Insurance

Marriage is a good thing. It is a part of the duty every young man owes to his race and to the community. And one of the first duties after marriage, is life insurance. The young man of riches may scoff at this, but riches sometimes "take wings", while a life insurance policy in a sound company is something that is not affected by mischance or ill fortune. The young man who depends upon his own efforts for a living, more than any other young man, should follow marriage with life insurance, and thus provide surely for a wife, or for a wife and babies, against the inevitable. Such a young man may demur at this, on the theory that he "can't afford it." But youth is not inclined to consider all possibilities in such a case. Life insurance is one of the things that should be afforded at the expense of something less important. If a young man smokes, he surely can curtail his tobacco supply by one cigar a day, or he can save an equivalent by cutting off something else he does not need. The cost of a single medium price cigar a day will pay the premium on a life-insurance policy, say, for $1,000. And thus, by a slight concession as to a single habit, some necessary provisions may be made for the future.

You will find the most up-to-date policy of to-day issued by the SUN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

BENEFITS FROM IMPERIAL HOME RE-UNION ASSOCIATION

Some of the Business Men who Have Identified Themselves with the Movement

The organizers of the Imperial Home Re-Union Association are still busily engaged in putting the finishing touches to the local organization and are already in receipt of a number of applications from British workmen who are anxious to bring their wives and families to this country.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who has been the head of the local movement, states that he has been in receipt of a number of applications for assistance on the part of men engaged in the industrial establishments of Peterborough, but that the local organization is still in too embryonic a stage to permit of active work in this regard.

Every assistance has been given to the movement by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, many of the members of which have forwarded to the newly formed organization the recommendations that workmen receive the necessary aid to bring their families to this country.

Mr. Gordon also stated that while Imperialistic and philanthropic in motive, the methods employed are based upon strictly business lines. The aim of the Association is to help the workman to help himself. The scheme is entirely free from what is commonly known as "charity."

Fifty business men have united in signing a bond under which each of them becomes liable for a sum not exceeding $100.00. This bond—aggregating $5,000.00—is handed to a bank as security for such loans as the Association may require to make from time to time. The Union Bank having consented to grant the necessary advances to the Peterborough Association at a regular rate.

The benefits of the system are summarized as follows:

1. Workmen's families separated indefinitely are united without delay.

2. Workmen are prevented from going astray as is often the case when separated from their wives and children.

3. Workmen are saved the double expense of paying board for themselves in Canada and of maintaining a family in the Mother Country.

4. The older children are given an opportunity to assist their parents by earning a good wage in Canada, instead of a small one (or none at all) in Great Britain.

5. Employers in Canada are supplied with the kind of help most needed, that of young boys and girls.

6. The children of British workmen are brought into Canada at an age when they are more likely to assimilate and, by attending our schools, grow up as good British Canadian citizens.

7. A considerable sum of money now being sent out of Canada by workmen to their families in Great Britain will be kept at home and spent for the benefit of the community as a whole.

Among those who have identified themselves with the movement in Peterborough are the following:

Messrs. J J Turner Jr., G N Gordon, G A Gillespie, F D Kerr, E A Peck, Walter Stocker, W H Bradburn, O H Pennefather, J John, Rev. Geo. Brown, Samuel Jay, W J Oke, N D Buchanan, J J Howden, Porter S White, T H Hooper, W J McColl.

A NEW BRANCH

From an interview with Mr. C.H. Pennefather, local manager of the Union Bank, the Review learns that a branch of the Union Bank will be opened on Monday, June 21, premises opposite the Knox church Sunday school on Reid street, being used.

These premises will however be temporary quarters only, as property at this point has been acquired, and an up-to-date bank building will be erected in the near future.

The manager of this branch will be Mr. D. C. Marcrostie, who comes from the Union Bank in Toronto.

BUILDING OPERATIONS

The total amount of building permits issued in Peterborough for the month of May, was $92,550. Among the twelve Canadian Eastern cities Peterborough ranks seventh.

In May 1911, the amount of permits issued for the city was $67,118, showing an increase for May 1912 of $25,432, or a percentage of 37.9 p.c.

Sydney, N.S., and Halifax, N.S., are the only eastern cities which show a decrease, both dropping behind very largely. In Sydney, N. S., there is more demand for houses to rent, hence, the falling off in building.

Among the western cities, Winnipeg, for 1912, heads the list, with a total of $3,050,720. Next comes Calgary with $2,215,392 and then Vancouver with $1,944,728 Edmonton with $1,772,575 and Saskatoon with $1,257,850.

Larger than any individual increase is Calgary's decrease which is $1,401,420. In May, 1911, Calgary issued permits totalling $3,616,812, but the month of May this year, shows a falling off of the above amount. Calgary however, stands fourth in actual amount. The very large figure last year included two large buildings, a hotel and a departmental store. Other decreases are shown by Regina there the permits this year have shown no large buildings as they did last year, and in New Westminster where permits for a $150,000 building made last year's figures high.

NEW ARRIVALS DID NOT HAVE LONG TO WAIT FOR WORK

Two Scotch girls, Maggie and Jessie Forbes from Forfarshire, Scotland, and Peter Ross, from Selkirk, landed from the "Saturnia" yesterday, and came to Peterboro this morning. They secured positions within about 10 minutes of their arrival at the immigration office.

Five more families are expected on the 4.19 p.m., C. P. R. to-day.

Father, Mother, Sister, Brother, All Should Use Parisian Sage

Prevents Baldness--Banishes Dandruff—Stops Falling Hair and Itching Scalp

PARISIAN SAGE is a family hair tonic and dressing that will do much good in every home.

The man who uses PARISIAN SAGE if only occasionally will never grow bald. Baldness is caused by dandruff germs which dig down into the the roots of the hair, devour its nourishment and cause the root to die and the hair to fall and thin out.

PARISIAN SAGE is a scientific hair remedy that not only kills the dandruff germs, but gives the hair roots just the same nourishment that nature gives it.

PARISIAN SAGE first kills the germs; then nourishes the weakened hair roots and causes a growth of healthy hair.

This same nourishment (PARISIAN SAGE) causes the hair to grow vigorous, which means that the hair becomes full of life and lustre, and grows radiant and beautiful.

Thousands are wasting time, losing hair and growing bald because they are using superficial tonics. While they may clean the scalp and make it feel refreshed, they do not get to the root of the hair where the real destroyer of hair, the pernicious dandruff germs, thrives and multiplies.

Try PARISIAN SAGE for all hair trouble; it means death to the germs; life to the hair. It is pleasant to use and so harmless that it can be used by every member of the family from the oldest to the little tot.

DRY GROUNDS FOR T.A.S. PICNIC

Members of the committee in charge of the pic-nic at T.A.S. Park, on Dominion Day, made a trip to the park last night and found that practically all of the water had disappeared from the grounds. There is every assurance that the grounds will be perfectly dry and in the best of condition before the picnic. A well from which good fresh water can be taken will be in operation, for this year's picnic.

We always rejoice in the good fortune of our friends if it doesn't exceed our own.

FOUR GRADUATES RECEIVE DIPLOMAS AND MEDALS

The graduating exercises at the Collegiate Institute last evening, for the nurses of the Nicholls Hospital, were carried out with splendid success. The attendance was large.

Those nurses who graduated were Miss Martha Mann, Miss Gertrude Reid, Miss Eileen Rosamond and Miss Allie Telford.

Mr. R. R. Hall was chairman. Mr. John Crane, in an interesting address gave the history of the Nicholls Hospital, while addresses to the nurses were given by the Rev. H. J. Keith, and Dr. G. Stewart Cameron.

The bandaging prize was presented to Miss Gertrude Reid, by Dr. G. N. Carmichael. The presentation of diplomas and medals to the nurses was made by Dr. Carmichael. Each of the nurses also received a beautiful bouquet. Those contributing to the program were Miss Buck, Miss Chalmers, Miss Florence Scott and Mr. Asa Huycke, and each of the three ladies was presented with a bouquet by Mr. Crane.

WEDDING BELLS

ORR—MOORE

A charming June wedding was solemnized by the Rev. Robert Pogue at 3 o'clock this afternoon in St. Paul's church, when Miss Jillian Moore, only daughter of Mr. D. H. Moore, Brock street, and one of Peterborough's most estimable young ladies, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Frederick Orr, of Binscarth, Man., formerly of Peterborough.

While the guests were arriving at the church, the Swedish wedding march was played by Mr. John Crane. As the bridal party entered the church, the wedding march from Lohengrin, pealed from the organ, played by Mr. Crane. The bride was given away by her father.

Mrs. F. G. MacLaurin, of Ottawa, was matron of honor, and Mr. Reid Munro, of Peterborough, fulfilled the duties of groomsman. The ushers were Mr. Gerald Rackham and Mr. Ernest Oliver, of Toronto. The bride looked charming in a gown of white duchess satin with bodice of point de venise lace, in fichu effect, the lace being softly folded over the satin and finished in peplum in the back. The lace of the bodice extended in a panel to the bottom of the skirt, the satin folding over in envelope effect, the back of the skirt ending in square train. The bride wore a mob cap and veil of tulle, with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. MacLaurin's gown was of pale blue chiffon with woven-in border of pink satin roses with touches of black and blue fringe over pale blue satin. Her gown was a pannier design with coat of Venise lace. Her hat was trimmed with pale blue feathers and small French roses. Mrs MacLaurin carried a bouquet of Killarney roses.

Miss Evelyn Henderson of Montreal, wore a pannier gown of pale blue chiffon over blue satin, trimmed with bugle trimmings and shadow lace. Her hat was of white with pink trimmings.

During the ceremony Miss Chalmers sang "Love's Coronation," and at the close, Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Mr. Crane. A reception to about sixty guests was held afterwards at the bride's home on Brock street. Mr. and Mrs. Orr left on a motor trip to Stoney Lake, where they intend to spend their lune de miel, the bride travelling in the gown worn by her mother on the occasion of her marriage. It was of brown shot taffeta, the style being practically identical with that of the present day mode. On their return to Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. Orr will spend a few days in the city before leaving for their home in Binscarth, Man.

Don't jump to the conclusion that a man of letters is a literary man. He may merely be the defendant in a breach of promise suit.

"That isn't more than half true," observed the argumentative boarder. "Time waited for Joshua once, nearly a whole day."

ANGLERS MEET WITH RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

While returning last evening from a fishing trip to the back lakes, Messrs. W. McIlroy, B. A. Rose, and another railway official, who was visiting here, figured in a runaway accident that fortunately was not followed by serious results.

Part of the harness broke, and the horses frightening, succeeded in getting control of the reins as they dashed away. Mr. McIlroy and his out-of-town friend were thrown out of the carriage, and to-day Mr. McIlroy is confined to his home with an injury to his knee.

Mr. Rose remained with the outfit till an auto hove in sight, and fearing a collision, decided to jump. He did so and escaped uninjured.

The owner of the auto proved to be Mr Coulthard, and he brought the three unlucky anglers to the city.

COL. ROOSEVELT AND HIS FOLLOWERS ONCE MORE LOSE OUT ON VOTE ON CONTESTS

Governor Hadley's Resolution to Replace 92 Taft Delegates With Roosevelt Supporters Defeated by a Vote of 564 to 510—Roosevelt Men Renew Fight Before Committee on Credentials.

Special to the Review.

Chicago, June 20.—President Taft scored another victory in the Convention last night, when Gov. Hadley's resolution, providing for the seating of 92 Roosevelt delegates in place of those seated by the National Committee, was, after an exciting three hours' debate, defeated by a vote of 564 to 510. Four delegates refused to vote. Of the other fourteen delegates who did not vote on the chairmanship contest yesterday, eight supported Roosevelt and the other six went to Taft.

The convention adjourned to give the Committee on Credentials a chance to report.

What the Roosevelt followers would do at the convention to-day was the cause of much speculation and prophecies this morning, but all guesses were confounded when Roosevelt men unexpectedly appeared before the credentials committee when it assembled to take up the contests.

At noon to-day it was announced that Roosevelt had released his delegates to the Republican National Convention. This is taken to indicate that he has given up all hope of the nomination in the convention as at present constituted.

Although Roosevelt has released his delegates from supporting him he will not withdraw from the fight. This statement is made by ex-Governor Regis S. Post, of Porto Rico, a close associate of Roosevelt. Post says the Colonel will stay in the fight to the end. Governor Hadley, whose name is heard about Roosevelt headquarters as one to whom his delegates will give support, spent some time in secret conference with the former president. Col. Roosevelt is said to be now dictating a statement setting forth his decision.

LATER

About half an hour after the statement by Post that Roosevelt had released his delegates, O. K. Davis, connected with Roosevelt headquarters, emerged from the conference room and said: "Col. Roosevelt authorizes me to say that any statement that he has released his delegates is absolutely false."

California's delegation met this morning and prepared a resolution announcing their withdrawal from the convention. The delegates said they would not be bound by the action of a 'lot' of thieves.

The Convention was called to order at twelve Chicago time, and adjourned six minutes later until four o'clock.

The Committee on Credentials is now hearing contests.

Chicago, June 19.—The Roosevelt forces met their second defeat in the Republican national convention yesterday in a session which had for its outstanding feature a remarkable demonstration of nearly an hour's duration in honor of Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri.

All of the Roosevelt delegates joined in this demonstration, while some of the Taft states lent a voice. The ovation to the Missouri executive was quickly interpreted by many of the delegates as the possible forerunner of a boom for Hadley for President. One enthusiastic Pennsylvanian jumped to the stage and called, "Three cheers for Hadley, the next President of the United States."

Governor Hadley led the fight on the convention floor yesterday to oust 92 contested Taft delegates and to seat 92 Roosevelt men in their places. The convention finally refused to entertain the motion by a vote of 564 to 510.

This transferred the fight to the committee on credentials, appointed just before the convention adjourned until this afternoon.

GOV. HADLEY OF MISSOURI.

Soon after this incident a pretty girl in white in the galleries suddenly stood up and waved a lithograph of Col. Roosevelt. She stood waving the picture in one hand and a handkerchief in the other, smiling all the while.

The California "Teddy Bear" standard and several state standards were carried to her side.

Reporters made a rush to find who she was. It was Mrs. W. A. Davis of Chicago.

Old-timers say they remembered nothing like this since Minnie Murray of Iowa, the famous "Woman in white," stampeded the Democratic convention in 1896.

As a climax to the demonstration, Mrs. Davis was brought to the floor by several delegates and an attempt was made to lift her over the press seats to the stage. The sergeant at arms stopped this.

The demonstration had been in progress 40 minutes, and Mrs. Davis had disappeared from the floor when Chairman Root finally directed the officers to restore order, and the debate on the contests went on.

When the governor appeared he was accorded the greatest demonstration of the convention up to this time. Both floor and galleries were on their feet whistling, cheering, yelling, pounding chairs and stamping their feet.

The California delegation endeavored to put up their Roosevelt banners and start around the hall. But Sargeant-at-Arms Stone quickly halted the plan and the banners were taken down.

Then the Missouri standard was waved on high, and in an instant the New Jersey delegates raised their standard and started around the hall. Missouri, Hadley's home state, followed. Then West Virginia joined the procession.

The Roosevelt people yelled themselves hoarse, while many of the so-called doubtful delegations joined in the cheers.

California, Nebraska and Kansas were soon in line, and the hall became a bedlam of noise.

The first great ovation was fairly under way and they went to it.

Governor Hadley retired from his place on the front of the stage and stood beside Senator Root and Mr. Watson at the chairman's table. He smiled broadly.

Oklahoma and Pennsylvania fell into line. Round the big hall came the procession yelling, shouting, trying to sing, cheering Roosevelt and Hadley.

It took three men to carry each of the heavy standards which had been especially weighted to prevent such a demonstration.

A stalwart Kansan, carrying the standard of that state, attempted to thrust it up on the platform, but was pulled back.

Missouri's delegates brought their standard with its big iron base up in front of the speaker's stand, and did a "grizzly bear" dance there until rushed on by other delegations.

The New York delegates climbed on their chairs when the demonstration had been in progress seventeen minutes, but they did so to observe and not to participate.

Over in the Kansas delegation a deep-throated yell punctuated the demonstration. "We want Teddy; we want Teddy," came the yell, and soon it developed into a deep chant that rose above the flood of sound.

Chicago, June 20.—The long-expected crash in the Republican ranks came last night. The Roosevelt forces, acting, they said, under the personal direction of the colonel himself, began to lay their plans for independent action in the national Republican convention. As a forerunner of the more drastic action expected in the convention to-day or tomorrow, the Roosevelt members of the committee on credentials withdrew from that body last night—withdrew in person and in effect withdrew all of the Roosevelt contests which had been scaled down from 92 to 78.

Col. Roosevelt last night was in the midst of a series of exciting conferences and was busy figuring on the loyal delegates whom he could expect to carry with him out of the convention, or rather into a separate convention on the convention floor in event the crisis is reached.

People who talked with the colonel last night declared there was no longer any doubt as to his attitude. Convinced that the credentials committee was against him and would retain the contested Taft delegates in their seats, Col. Roosevelt decided to go no further with his futile fight in the regular convention.

The colonel would not issue a formal statement as to his warlike intentions early in the evening, but was said to have made his position clear to his followers.

Senator Borah of Idaho, it was reported, declared as he left the Roosevelt rooms that he would not bolt.

The Missouri delegation in the convention held a caucus last night for the purpose, it was reported, of formally launching a boom for Governor Hadley for President. The remarkable demonstration given the Missouri executive in the convention yesterday together with the sudden turn in affairs was said to have strengthened their belief that the time was ripe for bringing forward a compromise candidate.

In the meantime there was much talk of Justice Charles E. Hughes of New York as the candidate of the convention. Some of the leaders ventured to suggest a ticket of Hughes and Hadley.

All sorts of wild rumors were current as the crash came.

The fact that the Taft forces strengthened their hold on the convention in the test vote yesterday, getting 564 votes as against 558 the day before, threw the opposition forces into something of a panic.

The Taft people were exultant last night. They denied intimations from the Roosevelt side that they were considering a compromise candidate, and asserted that with a tightening of the lines it was apparent that President Taft would win the nomination on the first ballot with something to spare. Senator Dixon declared last night that one final appeal might be made to the membership of the convention.

"We shall have exhausted then every legal and moral duty devolving upon us. The future will have to take care of itself."

To Investigate Charges.

Washington, June 20.—Representative Martin Littleton has prepared a resolution calling for a Congressional investigation of the charges of bribery at the Republican National Convention, and it is said, will submit it to the House on his return from New York in a day or two.

THIRTY GUESTS HAD CLOSE CALL IN HOTEL FIRE

Special to the Review.

New York, June 20—Thirty guests cut off by flames which destroyed the Hotel Elderhurst, at Hammels, Rockaway Beach, slid down ropes, or jumped from windows to safety. Ten were injured but not seriously, one being a fireman, who was crushed under a portion of the collapsing roof

UP GOES THE PRICE OF SIZED LUMBER

Winnipeg, June 20.—Despite all general denials by the Customs Department at Ottawa and by Hon. Robert Rogers, customs officers here are collecting duty on United States sized lumber, which formerly came in free under the Laurier Government, and which Judge Cassels recently said the duty should be collected. Local lumbermen have raised the price of this class of rough lumber $2 a thousand in consequence.

THREE MISHAPS OCCUR AT FERGUS

Guelph, June 20.—Three accidents occurred in quick succession on the G.T.R. tracks at Fergus. Seventeen cattle, owned by James Caldwell, got on the tracks and eight were killed. Mrs. Muckland, driving across the tracks, had a wheel knocked off her buggy by the oncoming engine, but the occupant and the horse escaped. While the cars were being shunted on a siding a packing-house employe threw planks across to stop them, and two cars were wrecked.

His Profession.

"Now, Robert, what do you intend to do when you become a man?" questioned Aunt Ellen as she looked approvingly upon her small nephew.

"I'm goin' to be a soldier," replied the boy promptly, "'cause then I can fight whenever I want to without being spanked for it."—Youth's Companion.

PRICE OF BEEF GOES OUT OF SIGHT

Special to the Review.

New York, June 20th—The limit in high price paid for fat cattle was reached at the Jersey City stock yards this morning, when sixteen beeves sold at $9.50 per hundred, live weight.

STEEL BOUNTIES HAVE FALLEN OFF

Ottawa, June 20.—With the expiry last year of the bounties on iron and steel, Canada paid comparatively little during the past fiscal year for the special encouragement of industries under the bounty system. The total amount paid in bounties for the year ending with March 31st last was only $538,529, compared with $1,591,663 for the preceding year.

Ringling Employe Dies on Train.

Brantford, June 20.—An employe of Ringling Bros.' circus was found dead in one of the cars on the arrival of the train here early yesterday morning. His identity has not yet been established. Coroner Ashton was called and declared death to have resulted from heart failure.

NO DEFINITE STAND HAS BEEN TAKEN ON ASSESSMENT

Ontario Municipal Association Determines to Let New Executive Hear Views of the Local Bodies Before Adopting Policy on Taxation—Hon. Adam Beck and Dr. McCullough Deliver Addresses.

Toronto, June 20.—There were two interesting addresses at the second and last day of the convention of the Ontario Municipal Association yesterday, when Hon. Adam Beck explained the Hydro-Electric power operations, and Dr. McCullough, chief medical health officer of Ontario, spoke on the new Public Health Act.

When he arose to speak Hon. Adam Beck received an ovation. He told of the ambitions of the Hydro-Electric Commission and how the public-owned enterprise was meeting with phenomenal success. In New York State legislation on the same lines of the Ontario policy was enacted, 'This is a great compliment to us," he said.

Ontario was the first province to adopt the new public health system—that of dividing the province into health districts with an officer over each, said Dr. McCullough in his address. Owing to the indifference of councils the local medical health officers had been negligent, and under the new act, these officials would be more independent and responsible for the public health. He traced the history of the public health activity since its beginning 120 years ago. Toronto appointed its first board of health in 1833.

Mayor Lees of Hamilton was elected president of the association, succeeding F. S. Spence of Toronto. The other officers elected for the ensuing year were: First vice-president, J. T. Righter; second vice-president, W. A. Clark, London; third vice-president, G. T. Thorp, Guelph; fourth vice-president, R. C. Chown, Belleville; fifth vice-president, W. Lane, Goderich, and secretary-treasurer, K. W. McKay.

The association did not take a stand on the matter of taxation of improvements. The executive committee was instructed to bring in a report with respect to this question, but it was decided to leave it in the hands of the incoming executive and the municipalities will be asked to present their views. It was the feeling of the meeting that one municipality could not enforce this principle and another use the present method of assessment.

A resolution was passed urging the Government to consider the question of taking over the debentures of all the municipalities.

The association will again make an effort to secure legislation to regulate and prevent the erection of signs and signboards within the municipalities.

It was decided that the association hold its next annual meeting during the first week of the Canadian National Exhibition.

Queer that a play isn't considered a go unless it stays.

Mr. Roosevelt is not responding to the call of the wild—he is giving it.

One Killed; Two Hurt.

Guelph, Ont., June 20.—Robert Little, aged 45, was killed, and William Goodwin and Sam Rundle injured internally, Goodwin very seriously, as the result of a scaffold falling at the new county jail building here yesterday morning. Men were working about three storeys up when the supports gave way, throwing them to the ground.

Little leaves a widow and four children.

GODERICH TOWNSHIP HAS SEVERAL CASES OF RABIES

Goderich, June 20.—Another serious outbreak of rabies has developed in Goderich Township, where cattle have been infected and died with great agony. Two weeks ago a steer on the farm of Mrs. Joseph came home acting most peculiarly, as if affected with some form of paralysis. A local veterinary was immediately summoned, but did not consider the trouble serious. However, the affliction of two more of the cattle a day or so following lent grave fears that something serious was wrong. Government veterinaries from Toronto and Ottawa were summoned, who, on investigation, pronounced the disease as rabies. Some six cattle on the farm have since suffering agonizing deaths.

Two sons and a daughter of Mrs. Salkeld, who had assisted in treating the cattle, have gone to Toronto for the Pasteur treatment. Farther east in the county Reginald Sturdy, aged eighteen, was attacked by a dog on Tuesday.

BEATTIE NESBITT WILL BE HELD TO A HIGHER COURT

Magistrate Says He Has Enough Evidence to Commit Nesbitt.

Toronto, June 20.—Dr. W. Beattie Nesbitt will go up for trial. Although the formal committal has not been made, Magistrate Denison intimated at the preliminary hearing yesterday that sufficient evidence had been adduced before him to warrant the case being sent on to the Assizes. Mr. W. R. Travers, formerly general manager of the Farmers' Bank, was the only witness called. His examination occupied over two hours, and it was nearly two o'clock before the court adjourned. Mr. George Tate Blackstock, crown prosecutor, has no other witnesses to examine, but Mr. H. H. Dewart, K.C., who is acting for Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, contested every point, and expressed a desire to cross-examine Mr. Fitzgibbon, whose depositions on the four charges under which Dr. Nesbitt is to be tried, are in the nature of expert testimony. For that purpose the case will be continued to-day.

London, June 20.—W. S. Calvert, ex-M.P., and for some time whip of the Liberal party, has had his attention called to an item appearing in Toronto papers to the effect that evidence at the Farmers' Bank enquiry said Travers had paid $3,000 to a man whose name commenced with "C," who was a former prominent member of the Commons, and that some people believed the item referred to Mr. Calvert.

Mr. Calvert has applied to Sir William Meredith for liberty to appear in court to explain that he knew nothing whatsoever of any such transaction, and that if Travers gave the money, it was not to him, and that in justice the name of the person should be asked.

Mr. Calvert utterly repudiates any connection whatsoever in the matter.

TOWNSHIP REEVE IS SENT TO JAIL

Chatham, June 20.—A. W. Greene, reeve of the Township of Zone, was sentenced yesterday by County Judge Dowling to one month in jail. The charge was one of misappropriation of public funds, and it is understood that restitution has been made. A largely signed petition was presented to the court asking that the reeve be shown leniency, and this had considerable influence with the judge.

COUNTY COUNCIL MOVES

The members of the County Council after listening to an address on the subject of reforestration by Prof. Fernow, and at his suggestion, decided to appoint a committee with power to secure from the Provincial authorities a tract of land in the county the title to which now rests with the Government and which the County will use for experimental purposes.

If it is demonstrated that the work can be successfully performed, then operations will be carried out upon a more extensive scale and in time large tracts of Peterborough county lands that are now practically worthless will be replanted with trees and so will increase in value from year to year. No one now living may benefit in a commercial sense from this work but there will be an improvement not only in the appearance of the rural district but in its value as well and posterity will reap the harvest.

In all parts of the country this subject of reforestration is being discussed both by private individuals and by public bodies and experiments already made have proved beyond question that waste lands may be successfully replanted to the same trees of which they have been so ruthlessly stripped in the past. There are thousands of acres of devastated forest lands in Ontario not only useless for agricultural purposes but a public eyesore as well. That Peterborough county is to take an active part in the work of reclamation is a move which will find favor in the eyes of the entire community.

A SAPLESS ISSUE

Premier Scott, of Saskatchewan announces that the great issue in the election of that province is Reciprocity, and on that question he proposes to make his stand.

All through his public career Mr Scott has been satisfied to hang on to the rear of the Laurier band wagon, dragging his province through the dust behind him. He never has aspired to any other place than that of second fiddler in the orchestra So long as his chieftain was in power at Ottawa he was content to allow the affairs of his province to pass under federal control. Now that there has been a change of Government Mr. Scott has been seized with a desire to change that order of things and to that end he objects to Hon. R. Rogers taking a part in the management of the land and other questions in Saskatchewan, duties which clearly belong to him as Minister of the Interior.

Mr. Scott is evidently afraid to venture a race on his record. Hence he seeks to divert public attention from himself to the Reciprocity issue which proved so disastrous to the career of his leader in the national arena. He is to dig up the corpse of the pact, breathe into its nostrils the breath of a new political life and use it as a figure in the provincial campaign, but that figure may prove the bogey man that will frighten the voters from his standard.

It is seldom that a purely national question is thus laid by the heels and dragged into a local campaign, when no purpose can be accomplished, even by a strong endorsation. But F. C. Green, who is running as an independent candidate in the Moose Jaw district, proceeds to prick the bubble that Mr. Scott has blown into the air. Mr. Green is secretary of the Grain Growers' Association, and in the last general election was a supporter of Reciprocity. He is out now with an address to the electors, and he claims that the pact has no place in the present contest. The problem of getting grain to market is not to be solved in this way.

The Conservative press is charging the Scott administration with every sin in the political calendar, either of omission or commission. The Liberals, it is claimed, handed over the coal areas and the timber lands to Ottawa; they refused to make any effort to secure lower freight rates or to abolish the C.P.R. exemptions and that they neglected to build the Hudson Bay Railway, thus losing millions to the grain grower of Saskatchewan.

It is from this record Premier Scott would escape by the transparent trick of using the ghost of a dead issue as the central figure in his campaign.

SHATTERING PRECEDENTS

Everything in the shape of a precedent is being rudely shattered at the Republican convention, now in session in Chicago. Never before in the history of the party, has there been such a contest over the election of a temporary chairman for the national gathering of the faithful, the custom of the past, having been to accept without question the man selected by the national committee and named to the assembled delegates by the committee chairman. The spectacle of two nominees for the position and the dividing of the convention was something hitherto unheard of in the history of the Republican party.

The Roosevelt delegates were not, it would appear, anxious for a trial of strength with the other party or they let pass an opportunity to divide the house when chairman Rosewater ruled one of their resolutions out of order. They could have appealed from the decision of the chair and so secured a division.

It was a gigantic game of bluff on the part of the Colonel's faction from the firing of the first gun. They made a rush to secure something by mere tactics intended to stampede the enemy in a panic. Governor Hadley and those behind him are too well versed in parliamentary law, they have attended too many national conventions, not to know that it was out of order to try to force a resolution through a deliberative body before that body was organized. And when their bluff was called by Chairman Rosewater, they quietly lay down and let the steam roller pass over them.

The Taft forces from the start seemed confident of their strength and without protest allowed all precedent in the election of a temporary chairman, to be shattered. They seemed to welcome a division, and the result showed that their claim to a substantial majority was well founded, and the strength of each candidate in every state was made plain. Once more the Roosevelt men took the count in the face of a decisive defeat, and then the three hour fruitless wrangle, over the contested delegates, was begun.

Every day the Roosevelt men abandon one plan of campaign and announce another. Their latest is that come what will, they will not bolt, but if Taft is nominated they will not abide by the decision of the convention. They will call a convention of their own in due time, made up of delegates from the states where Roosevelt won in the primaries and will have an election of their own, figuring that their leader could secure a majority of one in the Electoral College.

To do all this is within the range of possibility but that majority of one vote, looks small in perspective. Such a course would avail nothing except the wreaking of personal vengeance. The result would be the defeat of both Taft and Roosevelt and the wrecking of the party. In the feverish heat of the present campaign, wild schemes may be hatched but in cooler moments these schemes will probably be abandoned.

If the Roosevelt wing lose out in the convention they will probably take their defeat as philosophically as they did their fate, when they failed to capture the chairmanship.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Michael Fraser's law suit, life and fortune may all end simultaneously.

Three straights for the White Caps certainly begins to look something like business.

It is a mistake to assert that one cause for the present high cost of living is the using of a large percentage of the Southern corn crop in the manufacture of whiskey. The chief ingredients used in that product are shingle nails and the juice of refuse tobacco.

While his cohorts were sweating in agony in the Chicago Convention yesterday, President Taft, in Washington watched the National League baseball team of that city win their seventeenth consecutive victory. With his home team winning like that how can any man long for further worldly honor?

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, June 19.—Rumors of export sales to France turned the wheat market upward to-day, after favoring weather had made the bear side popular during most of the session. Closing prices were firm, ranging from last night's level to ⅛c to ¼c above. Corn scored a net gain of ⅛c to ⅝c, oats finished unchanged to ⅛c up, and provisions at 2½c to 12½c advance.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅛d to ⅛d lower than yesterday on wheat, and ⅛d to ⅜d higher on corn. Budapest wheat closed ⅛c higher, Antwerp unchanged and Berlin ⅜c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 19.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable continues dull, there being little demand; in fact, London and Leith buyers offered to sell old purchases made some time ago for July-August shipment at 1½c per bushel more than the wheat could be bought at to-day, and landed at the above two ports. There continues to be a fair demand from foreign buyers for oats, and sales of several loads were made for June shipment, but the local trade is very quiet and prices easy at the decline. Flour is firm, but the demand is still limited. Millfeed rules quiet and about steady. The demand for butter shows no improvement, and the market is soft. Cheese is fairly active, but prices in the country are tending lower. Demand for selected eggs is good, but seconds are rather easier. Provisions steady.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 19.—At the Canadian Pacific market the live stock receipts for the week ending June 15 were 1500 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 1500 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale were 675 cattle, 800 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 1500 calves.

The demand for cattle was good and an active trade was done; in consequence, the undertone to the market was firm and prices showed no improvement in condition, except for choice butchers' cows, which advanced ½c per pound on account of the increased demand for them. Choice cows sold at $7.25 to $7.50; good, $6.65 to $7, and the commoner ones down as low as $4.50 per 100 pounds. There were no top quality bulls offered, and the best sold at $6.75, with lower grades down to $4.50 per 100 pounds.

An active trade was done in all lines of small meats, of which the supply was larger than it has been of late, and the demand good. Old sheep sold at $5 to $6, and spring lambs at $3 to $5 each, while calves brought from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality. The tone of the market for hogs was firm under a good demand, and sales of selected lots were made at $9 to $9.25, and mixed lots at $8.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

HAVE YOU A BAD SORE?

If so, remember these facts— Zam-Buk is by far the most widely used balm in Canada! Why has it become so popular? Because it heals sores, cures skin diseases, and does what is claimed for it. Why not let it heal your sore?

Remember that Zam-Buk is altogether different to the ordinary ointments Most of these consist of animal fats. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal fat, or any mineral matter. It is absolutely herbal.

Remember that Zam-Buk is at the same time healing, soothing, and antiseptic. Kills poison instantly, and all harmful germs. It is suitable alike for recent injuries and diseases, and for chronic sores, ulcers, etc. Test how different and superior Zam-Buk really is. All druggists and stores at 50c. box. Use also Zam-Buk Soap. Relieves sunburn and prevents freckles. Best for baby's bath 25. tablet.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

Of course, Marigny was right when he foresaw that Vanrenen could not meet either Medenham or any of his relatives for five minutes without his "poor little cobweb of intrigue" being dissipated once and forever.

With the marvelous insight that every woman possesses when dealing with the affairs of the man she loves, Cynthia combined the eloquence of an oratory with the practiced skill of a clever lawyer in revealing each turn and twist of the toils which had enveloped her since that day in Paris when her father happened to suggest in Marigny's hearing that she might utilize his hired car for a tour in England while he concluded the business that was detaining him in the French Capital. Nothing escaped her; she unraveled every knot; Medenham's few broken words, supplemented by the letter to his brother-in-law which he told her to obtain from Dale, threw light on all the dark places.

But the gloom had fled. It was a keenly interested, almost light-hearted, little party that walked through the sunshine to the Hotel de la Plage.

* * * * * * * *

Dale, abashed, sheepish, yet oddly confident that all was for the best in a queer world, met the Earl of Fairholme later in the day; his lordship, who had been pining for someone to pitch into, addressed him sternly.

"This is a nice game you've been playing," he said. "I always thought you were a man of steady habits, a little given to horse-racing perhaps, but otherwise a decent member of the community."

"So I was before I met Viscount Medenham, my lord," was the daring answer. For Dale was no fool, and he had long since seen how certain apparently hostile forces had adapted themselves to new conditions.

"Before you left him you mean, growled the Earl. "What sort of sense was there in letting him fight a duel?—it could have been stopped in fifty different ways."

"Yes, my lord, but I never suspicioned a word of it till he went off in the cab with them—"

The Earl held up a warning finger.

"Hush," he said, "this is France, remember, and you are the foreigner here. Where is my son's car?"

"In the garage at Folkestone, my lord."

"Well, you had better cross by an early boat to-morrow and bring it here. You understand all the preliminaries, I suppose? Find out from the Customs people what deposit is necessary, and come to me for the money."

So it happened that when Medenham was able to take his first drive in the open air, the Mercury awaited him and Cynthia at the door of the hotel. It positively sparkled in the sunlight; never was car more spick and span. The brasswork scintillated, each cylinder was rhythmical, and a microscope would not have revealed one speck of dust on body or upholstery.

* * * * * * * *

On a day in July—for everybody agreed that not even a marriage should be allowed to interfere with the Scottish festival of St. Grouse—that same shining Mercury with the tonneau decorously cased in glass for the hour, drew up at the edge of a red carpet laid down from curb to stately porch of St. George's, Hanover Square, and Dale turned a grinning face to the doorway when Viscount Medenham led his bride down the steps through a shower of rice and good wishes.

Wedding breakfasts and receptions are all "much of a muchness," as the Mad Hatter said to another Alice, and it was not until the Mercury was speeding north by west to Scarland Towers, "lent to the happy pair for the honeymoon" while Betty took the children to recuperate at the seaside, that Cynthia felt she was really married.

"I have a bit of news for you," said her husband, taking a letter from his pocket. "I received a letter by this morning's post. A heap of others remain unopened till you and I have time to go through them; but this one caught my attention, and I read it while I was dressing."

He had an excellent excuse for putting his arm round her waist while he held the open sheet so that both might persue it at the same time. It ran:

My Dear Viscount—Of course I meant to kill you, but fate decided otherwise. Indeed, with my usual candor, which by this time you may have learned to admire, I may add that only the special kind of dog's luck which attaches itself to members of my family, saved me from being killed by you. But that is ancient history now.

I am glad to hear that your wound was not really serious. There was no sense in merely crippling you—my only chance lay in procuring your untimely demise. Having failed, however, I want to tell you, with the utmost sincerity, that I never had the slightest intention of carrying out my abominable threat in regard to the fair lady who is now Viscountess Medenham. Were you other than a heavy-witted and thick-skinned Briton, you would have known that I was goading you into issuing a challenge.

This piece of information is my wedding present, it is all I can give, because, metaphorically speaking, I haven't a sou!

I am, as you see, wemiciled in Brussels, where my car is attached by an unsympathetic hotel proprietor. Still, I am devoid of rancor, and mean to keep a sharp eye for a well-favored and well-dowered wife; such a one, in fact, as you managed to snap up under my very nose.

With a thousand compliments, I am,

Yours very sincerely,
Edouard Marigny.

P.S.—Devar went "steerage" to the United States when he heard of our affair. He thought it was all up with you, and with him.

"The wretch!" murmured Cynthia. "Can he really believe even yet that I would have married him?"

"I don't care tuppence what he believes," said Medenham, giving her a reassuring hug. "Indeed, I have a mind to write and ask him how much he owes in that hotel. Don't you see, my dear, that if it hadn't been for Marigny there was a chance that I might have left you at Bristol."

"Never!" cooed Cynthia.

"Well, now I have got you, I am beginning to imagine all sorts of terrible possibilities which might have parted us. I remember thinking, when my foot slipped . . ."

"Oh, don't!" she murmured. "I can't bear to hear of that. Sometimes, in Calais, I awoke screaming, and then I knew I had seen it in my dreams. . . . There, you have disarranged my hat! . . . But I don't think much of your budget, anyhow; mine is agreat deal more to the point. My father told me this morning that he is sure he will feel very lonely now. He never meant, he said, to put anyone in my dear mother's place, but he will miss me so greatly—that, perhaps, Mrs. Leland—"

"By Jove," cried Medenham, "that will be splendid! I like Mrs. Leland. At one time, do you know, I rather fancied she might become my stepmother, now it seems I shall have to greet her as a mother-in-law. She was bound to come into the family one way or another. When is it to be?"

Cynthia laughed delightedly.

"Father looked so confused when I asked him. Say, wouldn't it be a joke if Simmonds brought them to Scarland Towers one day, and they were announced by some solemn footman as 'Mr. and Mrs. Vanrenen'?"

"Cynthia, you know," he teased her.

"I don't know, but I am a good guesser," she said.

And she was.

The End.

GREATEST THING ON EARTH

Love the Grandest and Strongest Declares Rev. Father Vaughan.

Rev. Father Vaughan, London, England, thus defines Love:

"Love is the greatest, the grandest, the sweetest, and strongest thing in life."

"Man without love is not a man. Woman without love is already dead."

"Love is so important that if you die without it you go to hell. With it, you go to heaven."

"A man may bring his bride to the altar and show her his multi-millions, giving her worldly power, but if she is a true wife, and cannot command the recesses of his heart, it all goes for nothing."

"All love is borrowed from God. There is no such thing as love that has not descended."

"Children know that God is love. I asked a five-year-old, 'How much do you love God?' she opened her arms wide. 'So!' she said."

"He left His throne and died upon the cross—His arms stretched out like the little child's. He says, 'Look at these arms! Does anyone love you more?' Greater love hath no man."

"Everything about us has the hallmark of God till we feel His presence."

"If you ask me, 'Is life worth living?' I'll say 'Yes, for Jesus is worth loving.'"

To the women he says: "Do not dress so decollete."

THE COMING FASHION

Milday's next gown will be simple of attainment, and it will accord well with the household curtailment due to the high cost of living, it was said in Chicago at the exposition of coming fashions on display there by dry goods trade papers.

The bathroom, which supplied her bath robe of blanket cloth coat, now will furnish her dress. And the material in it will be Turkish towels.

Two or three towels, with or without the red stripes and tasseled border, as suits the wearer's individuality, a little dab of Irish lace, an opening here and there for an arm to come through, and the gown is complete.

A simple silk underskirt, toned to show off the towel fringe left at the bottom of the skirt, and costing slightly in excess of the overdress, completes the costume.

FARMING OUT PATIENTS

A. E. Donovan, M.P.P., Brockville told the Legislature that some doctors had done considerable grafting in lumber camps by farming out their practice to other, perhaps more energetic physicians. In some cases, he declared, physicians would be retained to care for the health of perhaps one thousand men in lumber camps who were each compelled to contribute $1 a month for the service, whether needing it or not. Doctors thus engaged had farmed out the jobs to other medical practitioners at, say 7 cents per man on the payroll, or, Mr Donovan had heard, down to 25 cents per head per month.

Test for Drunkenness.

A new test for drunkenness has been adopted by British police magistrates. If the suspect can say "British constitution" without stumbling he is discharged. The first prisoner to try it at London Sessions got three months. The best he could do was "bish cush."

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

The dockers strike at Southampton, Eng., has collapsed.

Mr. L. G. Coleman has been made superintendent of the Ottawa division of the G.T.R.

Four hundred employes of the Consumers' Gas Co. went on strike in Toronto yesterday.

Sir Lomer Gouin has been made Grand Officer of the Order of Leopold II. by the King of Belgium.

Albert V. Marsh, steward on the Victorian, rescued three men from drowning at Montreal yesterday.

Warnings have been sent out to banks in New York States about bogus $4 Canadian bills. It is understood the bills bear the stamp of a bank long since defunct.

Mr. J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern Railway, has sent a check for $500 to beautify Everton Cemetery at Guelph, where his father and mother and brothers and sisters are buried.

The costs in the Michael Fraser case are still growing, following the decision of the Court of Appeal last Tuesday, the present costs will be doubled. Already these approximate about $5,000.

Yesterday afternoon Kathleen Stewart, a three-year-old child, living on Jane street, West Toronto, had her foot badly crushed in an elevator in the T. Eaton Co.'s store. The foot will be saved.

While seated at the supper table Tuesday night at his boarding-house in St. Catharines, Fred. Smith, suddenly choked on food he was swallowing and expired a moment later in the presence of friends.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

ONE WAY TO RID THE STREETS OF THE POLES

A runaway team, attached to a coal wagon, placed the fire alarm system, in the south end of the city out of commission this morning by breaking a pole and bringing down the wires entering the alarm box, in front of Matthews store on George st. The runaway itself was a spectacular event, although no serious damage was committed.

It was expected that the damage would be repaired by five o'clock this afternoon.

SNEAK THIEVES ROB LIBRARY

This is the first venture by the young men of the camp, and they are exerting every effort to make the affair an auspicious and successful event.

BOYS SHOULD TAKE WARNING

Chief of Police Thompson issues a warning to those small boys who have been in the habit of throwing stones at passing automobilists, in the spirit of mischief. Several complaints have been lodged, and he intends to bring the habit to a stop immediately. In some instances those in the autos have been struck by the stones,

Good Form

Men's Visiting Cards.

A man's visiting card is for some inscrutable reason decidedly smaller than a woman's. The shape is long and narrow, the length being nearly or quite twice the width. A man may have the address of his house or his club on his visiting card if he likes, but usually he does not. Perhaps this apparent modesty on his part is in reality due to the fact that his wife, mother or sister often does the formal visiting for the family. Since her card contains the address it is not strictly necessary that his should do so. A young man who is a favorite in society knows that people who want to invite him will take the trouble to look up his residence in the directory.

In the case of a married couple if the husband's card gives the residence the wife's sometimes omits it. It would seem to be more sensible, however, for every one to put his or her address on the visiting card, as this often saves time and trouble and prevents confusion. The lady who looks over the contents of her card receiver when arranging to send out invitations may inadvertently mix up members of different families having the same name. For this reason, as well as for the sake of uniformity, which is desirable in these matters, it is well to have the cards of the different members of one family living under the same roof engraved in the same style of lettering. It need scarcely be said that there should be only one style of lettering on a card, although the address may be in smaller type than the name. It is now the fashion to give at full length the numbers of the street and house unless these are so long as to look cumbrous.

Twenty-seven West Seventeenth street.

We cannot help suspecting that this style was invented for the benefit of the stationer, since it involves more work for the engraver and therefore more expensive for the purchaser than the simple figures. As it also has an appearance of affectation, we venture to predict that it will not last many years.

A man's visiting card should always bear the prefix "Mr." unless he has some other title. A physician describes himself as "Dr." or "Doctor," a clergyman as "Reverend." If he is a doctor of divinity he may add D. D. after his name. A judge uses that term on his card. For the members of the supreme court at Washington the correct title is thus omitting the Christian name. Officers of the United States army and navy state their rank as:

Rear Admiral
A— B— C—
Commandant
Naval Station United States Navy
Newport.

A lieutenant describes himself as "Mr.," although he may give his rank beneath his name. If he is in the army the regiment may be given also. Militia and other complimentary titles are not used. There should be no "Mr." on a business card. A schoolboy uses no prefix to his name. Husband and wife often have a joint card to send with wedding presents or to use for purposes of congratulation or condolence. Such a card is not often used for calling, except during the first year of marriage.

Helpful Hints For Women.

The woman who is innately dainty dislikes to remove her gloves when traveling by rail, for grimy and unsightly indeed does the hand become in even a well protected drawing room coach. Some women carry old, loose gloves, which are drawn on at the beginning of the journey and removed only in the dining car. For the same reason the hat should never be removed while traveling by rail unless a chiffon veil is at hand to tie over the hair. It is so hard to keep the hair properly shampooed while traveling that the greatest care should be taken of it, and the dust and soot of an all day railroad journey will practically ruin its condition, robbing it of its luster and rendering it clogged, heavy and whispy. A chiffon hood, made like an automobile hood and lined with thin silk will keep the hair clean on the train and at the same time be light, cool and comfortable. When the end of the journey is reached a handful of powdered orris may be shaken over the hair and brushed out. This will help to make the tresses clean and fluffy.

The importance of a note of acknowledgment not only of an invitation but of courtesy received cannot be overestimated, and the few graceful words of thanks for the pleasant evening please the hostess and gain for a guest the reputation of having been well brought up and also of being appreciative—two most valuable assets.

In these days, when attractive stationery can be bought for so little, every girl should take care to select attractive note paper. The cost of marking the address is also very trifling, and a dainty note, well written and well expressed, always makes a good impression upon the recipient. Small note paper and the oblong cards should always be kept at hand so there can be no excuse for not answering an invitation promptly or in acknowledging acts of courtesy or kindness, and just such trifling acts as these do more to make or mar a girl's popularity than she realizes.

Some people spend all their lives just wondering what will happen next.

CURED HIS COLD.

Queer Remedy That Worked Wonders For Lord Brougham.

The famous lawyer and politician was in 1855 a constant visitor to Holland House, and on one occasion when he arrived he was suffering from a sore throat and loss of voice. He refused to take any medicine, but consented to go to bed. The diary continues:

"Toward two o'clock in the morning I was awakened by a loud rapping at my door, and on opening found Lord B. standing in his nightshirt with an empty pitcher in his hand. In a voice almost unintelligible from hoarseness he announced that he wanted a can of boiling water, some carbonate of soda and a pot of current jelly. I thought he must be delirious, but as he was not to be put off by argument I thought best to pacify him by compliance with his strange request. At that time of night, every one being fast asleep, the desiderata were not easily obtainable. Nevertheless I set out on a foraging expedition. I woke up the old man of the kitchen, the old woman of the still room and returned with my spoils to the oddest of men upstairs, Lord B.

"He was quite ready with his empty washing jug and proceeded to empty the pot of jelly into this receptacle, adding two large tablespoonfuls of soda and filling up the jug with boiling water. The result, a foaming mixture of blood red color and worthy of Macbeth's witches, he carried off in triumph to his room. At 6.30 I awoke, and, with a guilty sense of having neglected my patient, I went and rapped at Lord B.'s door, first gently, then loudly, and receiving no answer, stealthily opened it. On the floor was the jug, empty, as was also the bed. The room was in great disorder and the window wide open. I was really alarmed.

"Returning to my room, I dressed hastily and, running downstairs to the library, found it untenanted. The floor was strewn with torn up papers, and on one of the writing tables lay a pile of letters ready for post, all the work of my energetic patient. From a housemaid who was dusting the apartment I learned that Lord B. had been up since five and was now gone out. I met his lordship at the breakfast table shortly afterward and found him perfectly well, his strange remedy having worked wonders."

Seriously Busy.

The Earl of Elgin when he was viceroy of India was not a good horseman, and he was always rather uneasy and flustered when riding. One day when he was riding near Simla and devoting all his attention to keeping his seat, an aide-de-camp came galloping up with some important news. He told his excellency what he had come about, but the earl rode on without replying. The aide-de-camp rode alongside and, after a few minutes, thinking his message had not been heard, repeated it in a rather louder tone.

The earl turned upon him indignantly. "Great Scott, man!" he exclaimed. "Don't you see I'm busy riding? Don't interrupt me!"

Poorer Shot Than Ever.

Instancing the fact that in the Boer war "it took 5,000 shots to hit a man," the celebrated rifle shot Ommundsen says: "In spite of improvements in the power, precision and rate of fire of modern weapons the percentage of hits was immeasurably greater a hundred years ago than it is to-day."

FRASERVILLE.

Special Correspondence.

Fraserville, June 19.—The members of the Fraserville A. B. C. met at the home of their President, Miss Janet Waterman, Monday evening, June 17th, and presented her with a beautiful solid oak clock. The presentation was made by Mr. Charlie Hogg while the following address was read by Miss Irene Walters:

To the President of the Fraserville Adult Bible Class:—

Dear Janet,—We, the officers and members of the Fraserville A.B.C., having learned of your intended departure from our midst, decided to assemble at your home this evening to express to you our appreciation of your services as class president.

It has not been during the three months of the organization of the class that we have learned of those noble Christian qualities which characterize your life, but being associated with you from childhood have long learned to love and esteem you.

We are pleased to say that the confidence we had in you as Presidnet was not mis-placed; you were always enthusiastic in looking after the welfare of the class and deeply interested in Bible study and promoting lesson discussion. We hope that your example may have a lasting influence.

As a souvenir of your too brief stay with us, we ask you to accept this clock.

As you look upon its face may you be able to look back through the mind's eye upon the faces of those who are your friends and classmates and as its hands indicate to you the hours, may they be hours fraught with health and happiness and may you remember the pleasant hours spent together with associates at Fraserville.

We would like to retain you but we know that would be too selfish. We console ourselves with the fact that what we lose will make others richer.

You leave a vacancy hard to fill but we would heartily congratulate him, whom you have chosen as your partner through life, for being so fortunate in securing one with so many good qualities and Christian graces which go to make a home happy and cheerful and we earnestly pray that your lives together may be long and happy spent in preparation for that better Home above which is prepared for all those who live worthily to the end.

Signed on behalf of the class —

Fred Clarke, Lulu M. Hogg, Bertha Armstrong, Irene Walters, Violet McElroy, Charlie Hogg.

Miss Waterman made a very feeling reply and in a few words thanked the class for their kindness shown her, after which a very pleasant evening was spent.

The pupils of S.S. No. 9, Cavan, presented Miss Weatherilt with a beautiful jewel case and pair of cuff links set with pearls, on Tuesday, June 18th. The presentation was made by Mr. Harold Whitfield, while Miss Lizzie Hogg read the following address:

Dear Miss Weatherilt,—It is with extreme regret that we learn of your intended departure. During your term as teacher of our school you have been most faithful and diligent in the performance of all your work. Your kindness at all times and your zeal for all good and noble work has won for you the highest esteem in this community. We assure you that the memory of the many pleasant days during which you have been associated with us will linger long in our minds. We trust that the future will not remove you very far from us, and that we may frequently have the pleasure of welcoming you back to our homes.

As a very slight token of our esteem we ask you to accept this small gift and hope that in after years it may remind you of your numerous friends here.

We trust that your life may ever be one of happiness and sunshine, and we assure you that our kindest wishes will accompany you at all times.

Signed on behalf of S.S. No. 9, Cavan

Lizzie Hogg.
Harold Whitfield.

Miss Weatherilt, in a few words made a very heartfelt reply in thanking the pupils for the kindness shown to her.

COUNTY COUNCIL APPOINT COMMITTEE TO DEAL WITH MATTERS OF REFORESTRATION

The County Council at their afternoon session yesterday were privileged to listen to an interesting address, vitally affecting the question of reforestration and the conservation of the forests adjacent to Peterborough delivered by Prof. Fernow, the well known Government expert on such matters.

Prof. Fernow deplored the illegal and unnecessary spoilation annually of the forests and woods, and stated that this practice if persisted in would eventually effect the ruination of the lumbering industry around Peterborough.

People were beginning to wake up to the realization of this and to understand that it was of the greatest importance to conserve these forests as far as possible.

Peterborough county, thought Prof. Fernow, was admirably equipped with rivers and lakes to supply water power for the carrying on of lumbering. It was therefore essential that the lumbering facilities should be guarded, that this power might be utilized.

Prof. Fernow also urged a more efficient system of protection for the woods from the devastations of fire.

Regarding local conditions, he suggested that the County Council secure some land for experimental work from the Dominion Government.

He furthermore suggested that the Peterborough County Council appoint a committee to take up the question, with a view to being ready to go ahead with definite plans when some necessary information had been submitted by the Government

The Council took up the matter at this morning's session, and appointed a reforestration committee of the following members:

R. Shaw, chairman, Harvey.
C. Cohen, Galway and Cavendish.
A Wilde, Belmont and Methuen
W. Tucker, Burleigh and Anstruther
D. Campbell, Chandos.
J. H. Garbutt, Smith.

This afternoon the Council are discussing roads and bridges matters. On Friday they will go out on a tour of inspection of roads and bridges, and conclude their business on Saturday.

THREE PRESENTATIONS MADE TO THE REV. J. G. BROWN AT ST. JAMES

Although the members of St. James' Methodist church have always shown appreciation of their pastor by active co-operation in all departments of church work, presentations have been made to him during the past few days.

On Friday of last week Rev. Mr. Brown received a handsome travelling bag and an illuminated address from the junior Epworth League, and when the Teacher Training Class held the final examination of Saturday, a set of leather bound works of English poets was presented. The Brotherhood, too, gave Rev. Mr. Brown an enlarged photo of the members.

Rev. J. G. Brown leaves this evening to visit his parents in Lakefield. He does not leave for his new charge in Enderby, B.C., till July 1.

TONE UP THE BODY.

It Will Help to Fortify Your System Against Serious Illness.

There is a saying, much wiser and cheaper than it seems at first glance, to the effect that "you won't get sick if you keep well." It is a half jesting way of setting forth a profound truth.

The risks and exposures of life are so many and so insidious that they cannot be escaped. The only hope of passing through them unharmed is to keep the body so strong and sound that it can defend itself against the diseases which are constantly lying in wait for the unguarded and the weak.

It is a mere commonplace to say that one man will take exactly the same course and face precisely the same risks that another man finds fatal and go entirely unscathed. Sometimes it is a difference born in the two organisms, but often it is the result of different living and different conditions in respect to strength and health.

If the body is maintained at a high state of efficiency and if care is taken to overcome and correct the little disorders and signs of trouble as soon as they appear there is not much danger of a serious illness. The small precautions and the constant toning up of the body by exercise, fresh air, sensible eating and drinking and abstention from all excesses and follies ward off prolonged and often desperate struggles against disease.

It is the principle of the old adage, "A stitch in time saves nine." The same rule applies to the care of health. —Cleveland Leader.

The House of Lords.

The house of lords was composed chiefly of clerics until the time of Edward III. Thus in 1295 the peers were ninety spiritual and forty-nine lay members, including twenty archbishops and bishops, sixty-seven abbots and priors and three masters of orders. Many clerical dignitaries summoned did not attend at Westminster, refusing to recognize the authority of parliament over their own convocations of Canterbury and York. It was partly from this cause that the lords spiritual decreased in number until early in the reign of Edward III. the upper house consisted of eighty-six lay and only forty-five clerical peers, while during Elizabeth's parliament there were forty-three and twenty-six respectively.—London Standard.

SNAPPY FIELDING AND HEADY BATTING GAVE PETES A WELL-EARNED VICTORY OVER HAMILTON

Caps Made it Three in a Row—Manager Rowan Hit in Nasher for the First Run—Fisher Made the Three Tallies for Visitors by Two Hits Over the Fence—St. Thomas Here To-morrow—Frank Dolan Signs With Ottawa Club.

It was a case of the better team winning at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon, when the Petes by snappy fielding and heady batting, defeated the Hamilton Kolts by 6—3. It was the kind of game fans like to see and all hands came away satisfied with the new situation of the local Club.

Subtracting those two home runs by Fisher and the wild throw of the Hamilton Rose, which went for five runs, the score would have been 4—0 for the Caps, and without wishing to take any credit from Fisher for his two homers, it can be said that a change should be made at that left field fence.

The White Caps were seen in a style of play entirely different from past performances. Every man had a share in the victory and it would appear that Manager Rowan has the entire confidence of his team.

The attendance of between 400 and 500 was very encouraging and the indications are that with a run of fine weather, the Caps will play to crowds that will go over the thousand mark, before the week is ended. The Hamilton team was billed to play another game this afternoon. St. Thomas opens a four game series to-morrow.

The following is the game in detail:

Cameron leading off for Hamilton, placed one along the way to third and Beard who fielded the ball slipped, allowing the runner to make first. Corns sent up a foul fly to Trout, Keenan grounded to Beard and Barthold took care of a fly from Lane retiring the side.

Little Nemo Nasher was hit, and with Rowan batting, stole second. Rowan placed a hit in short left, taking two bags and scoring Nasher. Beard hit for the first sack, while Barthold waited into a double play, Killilea to Lane. It was a good play by the Hams. second sacker.

FISHER HITS OVER THE FENCE.

Killilea dropped the ball on the third base line for a hit, and Fisher the visitors' backstop gave his team two runs by clouting over the fence. Murphy followed with a double to right, Rowan making a speedy and accurate peg to Tully, but the throw was too late. Maguire dropped one in front of Trout who got him at first. Rose banged a hard one at Tully which was partly stopped, and there were two on. Cameron flew out to Nasher. Corns was walked filling the bags. Keenan skied to White and the storm was over.

Byrne sent out a long fly to Corns, Tully fanned and Trout skied to Keenan.

Lane grounded out Beard to Barthold. Killilea and Fisher singled. Murphy's best was a plate dropper, Trout making a pretty peg to Nasher for the second out. Maguire was easy, Beard to first.

PETES TIE UP THE GAME.

This was an interesting innings, the White Caps playing the game as it should be. Swartz was hit by Rose who followed up the presentation by fumbling Nasher's grounder. With two on, Rowan worked a neat sacrifice and Beard got in another, scoring Swartz. White tried hard but Corns took his long fly.

Rose was hit by Beard and was forced at second on Cameron's smash at the pitcher. Corns flew out to Swartz and then the comedy began. With Jo Jo Keenan batting, Cameron took second, when Trout hit his pitcher, who was not expecting the play planned by Trout. Again with Beard, not expecting the ball, Trout threw, and Cameron made third, although the throw to Nasher appeared to have the runner. Johnson, however, couldn't hear and while the Petes suffered Keenan got his, the Hams. third baseman being called out on strikes.

Barthold fanned, Byrnes was passed and sacrificed by Tully. Trout ended by striking out.

Lane gave Beard his second strike-out and Killilea's hard fly was taken by White. Fisher sent up a skyscraper, which Byrnes lost in the sun, the ball almost hitting him as it came down. It went as the third consecutive hit for Fisher. Murphy fanned.

Swartz hit the first ball through second base and was sacrificed to second by Nasher. He had a long lead off the bag when Rowan hit to centre and did not have any chance to get back in time to prevent the double play which followed.

TULLY CUTS OFF TWO RUNS.

JIMMIE BEARD

Who pitched the Petes to victory against the Hamilton Kolts.

Maguire and Rose were thrown out at first by Beard. Rowan just managed to get Cameron's drive off the grass, holding the runner at first. Cameron stole second, while Corns was walked. Each baseman stole again and a hit meant one or both runs. Keenan meant well and drove a screamer through the pitching box. It was too hot for Beard, but Tully who was playing far off the bag went over and fielded the ball with his ungloved hand and got it to Barthold in time to kill the runner by inches. This was a gilt-edged play.

Beard fanned, White flew to right and Barthold sent up a fly to Keenan at third. Trout grabbed Lane's foul fly, and White accepted his third chance of the game, getting Killilea's clout. Fisher picked the one he liked and the ball went over the fence, for the second time. Murphy sent out a hard drive, and Swartz was there.

PETES SCORE FOUR WITH TWO SINGLES.

Byrnes hit at Keenan for a base and when the pitcher fell in fielding Tully's grounder, both men were safe. Trout flew out to Killilea and the bags were filled, when Swartz was passed. With Byrnes on third, the squeeze was attempted with Nasher at bat. Twice the Petes third baseman tried to wait the ball out fouled. Nemo however, had another way and sent out a fly to Corns, Byrnes scoring. This was good baseball. With two strikes called on Rowan, he hit to the pitcher, whereupon Mr. Rose hurled the ball, not to the first baseman, but all the way to the "no charge" portion of the grand stand. Tully and Swartz scored, and Rowan took second. Beard singled but was left stranded, when Keenan grabbed a hot drive from White.

The third strike on Maguire got away from Trout, but he copped the runner at first. Rose walked, Cameron flew out to White and Rose was forced at second, Byrnes to Tully.

Barthold skied to Corns, Byrnes walked and took second on a wild pitch. Tully fanned and Trout sent one up to short.

Nasher made his first assist of the game, sending a good throw to first from Keenan's grounder. Lane was out, and Beard gave Killilea a free passage. A wild pitch advanced the runners and things began to look black, as Fisher with a perfect batting average for the day came next to bat. Had he connected with the first one he swung at, it would have been goodnight Jimmie, but it was right here that he fell down. His next attempt, was a high infield fly which Tully handled, to the delight of the crowd.

With two out and two on, Beard passed Murphy and the fans stopped breathing. Maguire leaned against one to his liking, and everybody ran to the benches. It made the fifth put out for Johnny White in left field.

NEW FANGLED REFORM.

Prison Warden Says Too Many Freebooters Pass as Reformers.

Cleveland, O., June 20.—The ending of the Congress of Charities and Correction was by no means as harmonious as was the beginning. The subjects of contention were the methods of taxation and the personnel of the new officers. The election resulted in Frank Tucker, a member of the National Federation of Remedial Loan Associations of New York being elected to the presidency. J. J. Kelso, Toronto, is one of the assistant secretaries. Opponents, led by Benjamin C. March of New York, put forward efforts to elect Robert W. Hebbard of Albany, secretary of the New York Board of Charity.

Otis Fuller, warden of the Michigan State Reformatory, told his audience that he did not believe in new fangled reforms. He said among other things: "There is a costly army of political freebooters marching under banners bearing various reform labels. Let us cease adding recruits to this army before the word 'reform' becomes a byword. Give the taxpayers a chance before the bankruptcy courts get them."

One of the speakers deprecated the many divergent opinions of the section on courts and prisons, declaring it resembled a socialistic caucus more nearly than a sociological conference.

Real Estate Men Meeting.

Louisville, Ky., June 20.—Real estate men from all sections of Canada and the United States are here attending the opening session of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges.

A lively contest is promised when the time comes to choose the 1913 convention city. Winnipeg, Man. which wants the convention and also wants the name change to "International" Association, is advertising in the local papers to augment the proselytizing work of a large delegation of "boosters," Jacksonville, Fla., and Cincinnati, O., are also bidding.

The convention will be in session three days.

An Historic London Street.

Leadenhall street was so called from the lead roofed mansion of Sir Hugh Nevill, which the city acquired for a court of justice. Few London streets possess more interesting literary and historical associations. Here Peter Motteux, the translator of "Don Quixote," kept "an East India shop," and Gibbon's great-grandfather "did not aspire above the station of a linen draper in Leadenhall street." East India House, where Charles Lamb and the two Mills were clerks, stood on the south side of the street, and 156 and 157 occupy the site where the little midshipman in "Dombey and Son" used to hang.—Westminster Gazette.

Seventeenth Century Grocers.

Shopkeepers in the seventeenth century were subject to other restrictions than those respecting prices. It was enacted that "any person using the trade or mystery of the grocer should not either by themselves or any third party directly or indirectly, keep more than one shop at the same time." Grocers were also forbidden to sell any commodities except "raysons, currants, sugar, spice, sope, candle, molasses, gunpowder, shot, match, tar pitch, rozen, tobacco and pipes, cotton wool, cotton yarn, starch, blueing, rise, linseed oil, white and red lead, olives, prunes, figs, Spanish white alabaster, alum, almonds, brimstone, lampblack and candle rushes." --London Globe.

MONAGHAN COUNCIL TO REPAIR BOUNDARY ROADS

City Will Pay Half the Cost of Maintenance — Bell Telephone Company Needs Seventeen Poles for One Customer—Smith Street Curve.

The proper repair of the boundary roads, under control of the city and township of North Monaghan, will in future receive attention at the hands of the Township Council, this being decided by the Board of Works at a meeting held last night.

Each will pay an equal share of the cost of such work, all of which will be done on the recommendation of two committees. Reeve Howden and members of his council were at the meeting, and considerable cross-fing firing as to who was the guilty party in the present condition of certain parts of the boundary roads, was brought to an end by Ald. Johnston's motion.

17 POLES FOR ONE SERVICE

The request of the Bell Telephone Company for permission to place four poles on Albert street, three on Lafayette Avenue, and ten on Chamberlain street was left with the chairman and Engineer with power to act. These poles are necessary to give telephone service to one customer on Chamberlain street. Of course other customers are expected; but the point is that the law compels the company to do this work.

Ald Johnston opposed. The City Engineer reported the absence of any other route, by which the connection could be made.

"What will they do when they run out of poles," queried Ald. Johnston.

"Wireless" added Ald. Gillespie.

Reports were read from the Street Inspector, and Street Commissioner, as to the Downie street creek. Mr. M. Spencely has a claim for damages registered against the city. The matter was passed on to the Legal Committee.

H. M. Moore, 677 Aylmer street, asked that the wooden steps in front of his residence and built by himself, be replaced by the city, by cement steps and a railing. The Engineer will report.

SMITH STREET CURVE

Mr. Hay reported that it would cost the city $235 to repair the roadway and crossings, in the event of the Street Railway company changing the curve at the corner of Smith and George streets.

Ald. Buller said there was no appropriation for this work, but Ald. Johnston believed that the amount would be forthcoming.

The matter was given over to the chairman and engineer, with instructions to have the curve moevd out the width of the present track if possible.

J. T. Braund asked for a crossing from his store to connect with the pavement on the west side of George street. This work will be considered with the changes at the curve.

The Board decided to repair the fence of Mr. James Bogue and to construct a crossing at the corner of Park and Purnell streets.

Mr. Willis Chipman sent an account of $1350 in connection with his work at the Pumping Station. Some extras for Mr. Armstrong, his representative, amounted to $115.35.

This question of finance will be gone over thoroughly, when Mr Chipman comes to the city.

The roadbed on Park street along the line of the street railway extension will be filled in. The track is laid at a considerable grade.

SOME PECULIAR SPECIMENS OF CUBAN NATURAL HISTORY

Miss Thelma Paxman, of 793 George street, has made another valuable addition to her specimens of natural history which will be exhibited in the scientific department of the Collegiate Institute in which Miss Paxman is a pupil. An uncle in Clinton has just sent her two gigantic members of the bug family which a friend of his forwarded to him from Cuba. The bugs came in a box by registered mail and during the 2,000 mile journey lived on a piece of sugar cane which was placed in the box with them.

They are rare specimens of the lower animal kingdom well worth seeing. The smaller of the two, the Cucyias, has in the top of its head behind its eyes two green lamps that in the darkness gleam like the headlights on a motor car. Under its wings its body gives out a phosphorescent light. Flying through the Cuban jungles in myriads on a dark night they give the forests the appearance of being on fire.

The other bug is known as the Strategus Titanus, a scientific appellation which expresses its habits and qualities. It is the terror of coconut farmers, preying as it does upon the trees which produce that fruit.

The specimens would be placed on exhibition in a window down town but they cannot be seen to advantage in the glare of electric light. Their peculiarities are made apparent only in the dark.

MR. C. A. MOORE PRESIDENT OF WEST PETERBORO' FARMER'S INSTITUTE

After serving most efficiently as president of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute for the past year, Mr. J. H. Garbutt retired with honors at the annual meeting of the Institute held yesterday at Mr. G. William Mann's residence, to give place to Mr. C. A. Moore, one of the younger generation of agriculturists, of Smith township. Mr. Moore's election was a popular one and followed the recommendation advanced by Mr. Garbutt, that younger blood be introduced in the management of the institute. In accepting the office Mr. Moore thanked the members heartily for the high honor they had seen fit to confer upon him and promised with the assistance of the members to exert his best efforts for the benefit of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute.

The office of vice-president vacated by Mr. Moore went to Mr. A. McGregor, also of Smith, while Wm. Collins though anxious to retire, was not permitted to do so, and was once more elected secretary-treasurer. There were no other nominations for his office and he was returned with cheers.

The same Board of Directors were re-appointed with the names of Mr. Garbutt and Mr. Graham added.

CENTREVILLE NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Centreville, June 19.—Mr. Ormy Stewart and his sister were the guests of Wm. Deyell on Sunday.

Mr A. Williams was the guest of Mr. T. Huggins on Sunday.

Mr G. Savney and Miss L. Hutchison were the guests of of William Deyell Sunday evening.

Mr. James Whittington was the guest of Wm. Waterman on Sunday.

The excursion Monday came off splendidly. It was a fine day with a good crowd. Everybody seemed to have a good time.

When going to the boat Monday Mr. Wilbert Woods had a runaway. Some part of the harness broke and the horses began to run. In endeavoring to stop them by turning them into the fence the buggy upset, throwing the occupants out. They were pretty badly bruised, but we hope that nothing serious will follow. The horses were caught at Mr. Watt Finnie's.

War Canoe Trip

The Y.M.C.A. war canoe will leave Rye's Boat House at 7.30 this evening when a trip down the river will be made. A full turn out of paddlers is requested.

WEDDING BELLS

DRYLAND—FOSTER

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Mann, 217 Wescott street, last evening at seven o'clock, Mr. George E. Dryland and Miss Sadie Foster, both of Peterboro were united in marriage by the Rev. J. G. Brown.

Following the ceremony, a wedding repast was served to the large number of guests. The bride received numerous handsome gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Dryland will reside in Peterboro

PENROSE—WHEELER

At Saskatoon, June 6, Miss Irene Wheeler and Mr. Roy Penrose, both formerly of this city, were united in marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Penrose will reside at 315 Fifth Avenue, Saskatoon.

SKITCH—LEE

Mr. Walter Frederick Skitch, local agent for the Canadian Express Company and Miss Ettie Ethel Lee, were united in marriage by the Rev. G. W. Henderson, at Charlotte street Methodist church, yesterday afternoon, at five o'clock

After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Skitch will reside at 231 Dublin st.

14th ACCEPTS INVITATION

Kingston, June 20.—At the invitation of Lieut.-Col. Clegg, Commanding Officer of the 57th Regiment of Peterborough, the 14th Regiment from the city will spend Dominion Day in Peterborough also the 41st Regiment of Brockville.

The 14th decided to accept the invitation last night at a special meeting of the officers. It is expected that the city boys will turn out 300 strong.

There is almost as much difference between tweedledum and tweeeledee as there is between a shop girl and a saleslady.

THREE MONTHS ON THE HILL

George Jackson will spend three months, commencing to-day, in the county jail. This is not a personal item, but the penalty imposed upon the youth this morning who pleaded guilty of the theft of a watch and was remanded until tod-ay. He has a wife who will do domestic work during her husband's incarceration.

When sentenced the prisoner had nothing to say, although he felt his position keenly.

Inquiries revealed that in former places of residence, Jackson had lost positions through excessive drinking. It was this fact he said brought him into his present unwelcome and unfortunate plight. He has no police record, however.

WILL PAY $10.

The woman who put the rent collector to flight, last week, has been unable to find another house into which to move. She appeared in police court this morning. She is willing to pay $10 out of $20 due for rent, the landlord consenting to that arrangement. The latter however, wants to take possession right away. She started out on the hunt for lodgings to-day.

Sentence was suspended on the charge against her of assaulting the collector.

CASE IS ENLARGED.

The case of assault and high-way robbery preferred against Clinton Rightmeyer was again remanded. The complainant was in Lakefield. Another party to the affair, named Albert Wright, was present in court with a badly colored eye.

Mr. R. M. Ruddy is appearing for Rightmeyer, and G. N. Gordon for Wright. Bail was refused to Wright.

FOOTBALL

The members and players of the Park Street Football team are asked to turn out to practise to-night at 7 o'clock, on the Park Street grounds (weather permitting) after which the team to play the league game with Knox, next Saturday, will be picked.

Life Insurance

Marriage is a good thing. It is a part of the duty every young man owes to his race and to the community. And one of the first duties after marriage, is life insurance. The young man of riches may scoff at this, but riches sometimes "take wings" while a life insurance policy in a sound company is something that is not affected by mischance or ill fortune. The young man who depends upon his own efforts for a living, more than any other young man, should follow marriage with life insurance, and thus provide surely for a wife, or for a wife and babies, against the inevitable. Such a young man may demur at this, on the theory that he "can't afford it." But youth is not inclined to consider all possibilities in such a case. Life insurance is one of the things that should be afforded at the expense of something less important. If a young man smokes, he surely can curtail his tobacco supply by one cigar a day, or he can save an equivalent by cutting off something else he does not need. The cost of a single medium price cigar a day will pay the premium on a life-insurance policy, say, for $1,000. And thus, by a slight concession as to a single habit, some necessary provisions may be made for the future.

You will find the most up-to-date policy of to-day issued by the SUN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

LAKEFIELD NEWS

Special Correspondence

Lakefield, June 19.— Miss Ettie Garvey spent Wednesday in Guelph visiting friends.

Miss C. Clementi, of Peterborough, is the guest of Miss Dorothy Hilliard.

Miss Mollie Young, of Peterborough, is visiting her sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Gibson.

Miss G. Brooks, of Young's Point spent Saturday in the village visiting friends.

Miss M. Coon spent Sunday in the village visiting her parents.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized in Peterborough on Wednesday, June 5th, when Miss Bertha May White, daughter of Mr. Robert White, of this place, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. David J. White, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. R. Webb. The happy couple will reside in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Graham and Miss Blanche Graham went up to Stony Lake on Monday, to their summer cottage "Viamede."

Mr. Adam Brown, of Hamilton, presented a beautiful silk Union Jack to the Lakefield Preparatory School Cadet Corps on Friday of last week. The Cadets, fifty strong, under the command of Cadet Captain Hamilton, were drawn up in quarter column in front of the school building and in the presence of a large number of spectators from Peterborough and elsewhere. The present was formally presented by Messrs. Adam Smith and Wm. Hendrie on behalf of their grandfather, Mr. Brown. The proceedings closed with three cheers for Mr. Brown.

The marriage of Miss Ida Ann Baillie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Baillie, of Gravenhurst, to Mr Joseph Leathorn Edwards, of Lakefield, eldest son of Rev. Thomas Edwards, of Gravenhurst, was solemnized at the bride's home at high noon on Saturday, June 8th. The ceremony was conducted by the groom's father, Rev. Thomas Edwards, in the presence of a small number of guests. The wedding march was played by Miss Pearl Perkins.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was arrayed in ivory Duchesse satin with panel train and bodice of ivory silk lace. Her veil was embroidered tulle arrayed in Juliet cap effect, held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower of bridal roses and lilies of the valley, tied with chiffon streamers embroidered with pearls in lover's knots, and wore the groom's gift a sunburst of pearls.

The bride was assisted by Miss Edith Passmore, who wore a pink satin charmeuse with overdress of stencilled chiffon with black lace hat, with pink boutons de rose, and carried a bouquet of bridesmaid's roses and pink sweet peas and wore the groom's gift, a handsome pearl bar pin.

The house was beautifully decorated with palms, roses and pink carnations. After a reception they left for Stratford, Berlin and other western cities. The bride wore a smart tailored suit of grey and a Panama hat.

On their return they will reside in the village.

Messrs. W. J. Garvey and W. Merril, of Peterborough, spent Sunday with friends in Smith.

Miss Flora Payne, of Warsaw, spent a few days in the village visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Henderson and Miss Henderson, of Toronto, spent Sunday in the village visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Sherin.

Miss Bessie Crowe, of Warsaw, spent a few days in the village this week, visiting her many friends.

The Misses McCorkindale have returned home after spending a few weeks in Toronto visiting friends.

At the conference held last week in Cobourg, the Rev. C. H. Coon was appointed chairman for the district in place of Rev. G. W. Henderson, while Mr. J.N. Clarry, of St. James' Peterboro, was appointed financial secretary.

Mrs A. Kidd has returned home from Toronto, bringing home with her her daughter, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Harold Kidd, for the past month.

BASEBALL GAMES

A baseball game will be played on the exhibition grounds between the Oddfellows team and an "All Star" team which will be well worth seeing. The game will begin at 6.45 o'clock.

The second game of baseball in the Town League was played on Friday evening last, between the High School and Clerks' teams, resulting in a tie, both teams scoring five runs. The Clerks had the game well in hand until the last of their innings, when they allowed the High School to score four runs and in the last innings they scored one more run, making it a tie between the two teams. Following is the result—

NORWOOD NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Norwood, June 19.—Last week death entered the home of our esteemed townsman, Mr. John McLaughlin and removed a precious life in the person of the youngest son, Charles Francis, aged 2 years and 9 months. The little fellow took ill about three weeks ago with meningitis and from the first the parents realized the seriousness of the case and under the guidance of the physician employed every means available to ward off the dread results of the insidious disease. But without avail. For the last few days all hope was lost and those in attendance realized it was only a matter of time and on Friday morning at 9 o'clock the slender thread which held him, snapped; and the pure young soul passed into the presence of Him who said "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. A large number of friends and sympathizers attended. Rev. P. J. Kelly officiated at a short service at St. Paul's church after which the remains were conveyed to the Parish cemetery in Asphodel.

Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin have the sympathy of the entire community in this hour of their sad bereavement.

We are also called upon to record the death of another of our most highly respected townsmen, Mr. John Burkell which took place after a short illness. About a week ago Mr. Burkell was fishing at the trout creek about two miles west of the village and while there was seized with an attack of apoplexy, from which he never recovered. Some time after the attack he was found by Mr. Adam Humphries, of Asphodel, in a helpless condition, but still conscious, and was hurried to his home here, where medical aid was procured and everything possible done for him. He gradually sank until on Sunday evening at about 8 o'clock he passed peacefully away.

Mr. Burkell, who with his wife came to Norwood from Roseneath some years ago, has during his residence in Norwood made many friends. He also exerted his influence to the upbuilding of the village, having erected several fine residences. Mr. Thomas Burkell, of Norwood, is a son of the deceased.

On Monday evening the young people of the town assembled together and took possession of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Puffer, where they surprised the happy young couple with a miscellaneous shower. The evening was very pleasantly spent in music and dancing.

Miss Barba, of Warkworth, is the guest of Mrs. Bruce Puffer.

Mrs. W. Andrews, of Havelock, spent Sunday in town.

Miss M. Laing visited Havelock on Sunday.

Miss Annie Bert has returned from visiting friends in Toronto.

Misses E. McCullough and S. Searight, visited Havelock on Sunday.

Miss Belle Howson is visiting at her home in Keene.

A very successful lawn social was held under the auspices of the Methodist Mission Band, on the church lawn on Friday evening last.

Miss Edythe Campbell visited Peterboro last week.

Mr. W. Holcombe of Havelock was in town on Tuesday.

Miss Gladys Johnston spent Monday in Havelock, the guest of her sister, Mrs. W. Andrews.

Mr. C. Riley, of Havelock, was in town on Sunday.

LANG NEWS ITEMS

Special Correspondence.

Lang, June 18.—Messrs. W. Warrington and A. Kempt made a flying visit to the village on Sunday evening.

The people of Lang, who have long been wishing for pure drinking water, are deeply indebted to Mr. Will Edwards for bringing into their midst an up-to-date well drill. Mr. Edwards has successfully completed a number of wells, and hopes to be able to drive many more this season. Mr. Edwards is open for engagements, but anyone who wishes his services should secure them soon as he has a number of appointments booked.

The saw mill at Hope's Bridge is closed for the season. The proprietors report the most successful season in the history of the business under the superintendence of Mr. Quinn, of British Columbia.

A number of our young people attended the circus in Belleville on Saturday. They report a very enjoyable time.

The fishing season is now open, and we expect to hear thrilling stories of sport from Messrs. Walter Hancox and R. A. Esson.

Mrs James Armstrong is visiting her son in Havelock.

Mrs. James Edwards and family have returned home from a visit at the home of Mr. W. Henderson, on the seventh line.

Miss Lizzie Nelson, of Toronto, is visiting friends in and around Lang.

Mr. Andrew Esson's house is greatly improved by a fresh coat of paint.

The death occurred on Sunday last, after only a few days' illness, of Mary Louise, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dinsdale. Deceased was seven years old, and leaves to mourn her loss her parents and one brother.

The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, from the family residence, to Fife's cemetery. The last sad rites were performed by Rev. D. D. MacDonald, of Keene. The casket, laden with flowers, was borne by six little girl friends. Among relatives from a distance were Mrs. Mather, of Wroxeter; Mr. and Mrs. J. Dinsdale, of Peterborough. "He giveth his beloved sleep."

LAKEHURST

Special Correspondence.

Lakehurst, June 19—Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith spent last week visiting friends in Otonabee.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Dever and baby of Lakefield are visiting with Mr. Alex. Thompson.

Mr. J. Jones of Buckhorn, entertained the young people of Lakehurst last Tuesday evening.

Mr. A. G. Shearer, our enterprising merchant, has recently purchased an automobile. It may be used for either passengers or freight.

Miss E. Pierson spent the week end at her home in Smith.

Mr. D. Weir has improved his premises by erecting a wire fence.

The Cheese Factory grounds have also been improved in the same manner.

Miss Aggie Wilson entertained a few of her friends on Saturday evening.

OSHKIGMONG NEWS

Special Correspondence.

Oshkigmong, June 19.—Mr. Thos. Blaker, of Alderville, was here for a short visit last week.

Miss Minnie Kuse, of Penetanguishene, is here paying a visit to her sister, Mrs. John Tobico.

The members of the Epworth League and others spent a very enjoyable time last Tuesday with their pastor who is about leaving the pastoral work here. In the morning the Rev. W. C. Parson was taken out on a fishing expedition, but as he is not an expert in that line of business, and his guide being unacquainted with the fishing grounds, went to the shore at noon without any fish. However, there was a fine luncheon awaiting him, but there were no fish stories to tell. Later in the afternoon the fishing party wended towards the village, and on arriving found another sumptuous table awaiting, which was bountifully served by the ladies. The main feature of the evening was the adopting of Rev. Mr. Parson into the Mississauga tribe of the great Algonquin nation and in giving him an Indian name, "Negahnosh," which means "The leading ship of a war fleet." The chief gave the toast to which Mr. Parson made an appropriate response. The members of the Epworth League also presented him with a souvenir in token of remembrance. Mr. Parson has been a faithful and earnest worker as pastor here.

Mr. Benjamin, of Rochester, N. Y., spent Sunday in the village.

Miss Lily Parson, of Darlington, Ont., was here on Tuesday with her brother.

Kezhigabetung occupied the pulpit last Sunday night in the absence of Mr. J. H. Prosser.

PREMIER FLEMMING WINS EVERY NEW BRUNSWICK RIDING EXCEPT FOUR

Liberals Succeed in Only Two Contests and Two Independents Were Elected—A Loss of 10 for the Opposition Since Last Election—Leader Copp Defeated in Westmoreland

St. John, N.B., June 21.—The provincial elections yesterday resulted in practically a clean sweep for the Government, only two Opposition members, Dugal and Pelletier, in Madawaska, being elected. In Northumberland, where three Independent Conservatives ran on the Government ticket, two of them were elected. In St. John City, York and Sunbury Counties, the Opposition candidates lost their deposits. A. B. Copp, the Opposition leader, was badly defeated in Westmoreland. Premier J. K. Flemming headed the poll in Carleton.

The result of yesterday's voting gives the Government 40 seats, Independents 2, and Opposition 2.

Gloucester polling (four seats) takes place on Monday.

There were 46 seats in the New Brunswick Legislature at dissolution, besides two vacant ones, newly created. The parties stood: Government, 34; Opposition, 12.

PREMIER FLEMMING.

Complete details have not been received and majorities are about as near as can be figured out yet: majorities are top-government man over top-opposition.

The results were:

Northumberland — Allain, Government, 2,875; Hon. John Morrisey, Government, 2,354; Stewart, Ind. Conservative, 2,068; Swimb, Ind. Conservative, 2,017.

Queen's County—Woods and Slipp, Government, elected, 425 majority.

St. John City—Wilson, Tilley, Lockhart and Grannan, Government, 2,000

St. John County—Baxter and Carson, Government, 500.

Charlotte—Grimmer, Clarke, Taylor, Guptill, Government, 900.

Kent—Laundry, Bourque, Sheridan, Government, 500.

Kings—Murray, Jones, Dickson, Government, 700.

Carleton—Flemming, Munro, White, Government, 600.

Westmoreland — Black, Humphrey, Melanson, Mahoney, Government, 500.

Moncton City—Price, Government, 300.

York—McLeod, Pender, Young, Moorehouse, Government, 2,000.

Sunbury—Glasier and Pedley, Government, 300.

Albert—Prescott and Dickson, Government, elected.

Victoria—White and Carter, Government, 100.

Madawaska—Pelletier and Dugal, Opposition, 600.

Restigouche—Howart and Culligan, Government, 400.

Mutiny at Mukden.

Pekin, June 21.—The Chinese troops station in Mukden mutinied Wednesday evening. Many natives were victims of their ferocity and hundreds of houses were destroyed by roving bands of mutineers while the jewelers stores were first looted and then burned.

Foreigners and their property were scrupulously respected by the troops. The women and children found refuge at the British consulate.

The city is quiet to-day but all the stores are closed and strong Chinese guards are posted at the city gates.

NEW ONTARIO BOOSTERS IN POSSESSION OF TORONTO

Toronto, June 21.—Toronto was invaded yesterday by an army of Northern Ontario boosters.

Immediately after their train drew into the station the delegates went to their headquarters, where the preliminary meeting was held. Every man wore a huge badge on his lapel, advertising the north. "Come and prosper with us; Algoma offers good farms and best markets," said one white badge, while another bore the inscription, "Sudbury, the hub of the north." All were optimistic of the result of their invasion, believing that Toronto and old Ontario would come to realize by it the true worth of the new and undeveloped section up north.

It is expected that about 600 will arrive to-day for the day's boosting campaign. There will be no brass band or fireworks; the invaders are serious in their publicity pursuit, and they look for results by a serious and business-like campaign. Those who landed last night were principally from the western portion of New Ontario. A large delegation from Sudbury and the east will arrive to-day for the procession to the Parliament Buildings.

At noon the Board of Trade and City of Toronto tenders a luncheon in the Mutual Street Arena after which one hour's speaking will be indulged in. At eight o'clock a large public mass meeting takes place in the arena and will be addressed by delegates from all parts of the virgin north and local prominent people.

"What we want principally is publicity; publicity built the west and our land is just as advantageous to the settler," said a speaker, and this was practically the keynote of last night's meeting. But an obstacle presented itself when the North Bay and Sudbury delegates locked horns with the rest of the northerners on the question of land grants being given to colonization railways to open up the country to the north and south. The North Bay and Sudbury delegates opposed, while the rest, which made up a large majority, favored such a scheme. The majority ruled, and chances are that the Government will be asked by the boosters to-day for the adoption of the land grant scheme.

Boy Killed In Elevator.

Ottawa, June 21.—William Grant Young, a 14-year-old boy, was almost instantly killed yesterday morning while learning to operate the elevator in St. Luke's Hospital. He was literally hanged, the head being caught and the body hanging outward. Death was due to strangulation.

Conscience Money to Government.

Ottawa, June 21.—Hon. Dr. Reid, Minister of Customs, received yesterday in an unsealed envelope $5.25 conscience money forwarded through the Bishop of Chicoutimi. It had been given up by a repentant smuggler.

DR. NESBITT OUT ON $30,000 BAIL

Toronto, June 21.—Dr. W. Beattie Nesbitt, the former president of the Farmers' Bank, was formally committed for trial when he appeared before Magistrate Denison in the police court yesterday afternoon. The charges on which he is committed for trial are four of signing false returns to the Government while he was president of the bank. H. H. Dewart, K.C., who is representing Dr. Nesbitt, protested that no evidence of the doctor having done anything knowingly wrong had been brought out, to which the magistrate restorted that he was not trying the case. The bail of $30,000, on which Dr. Walter McKeown and the defendant are sureties in equal amounts, was renewed.

FINANCIER WORKING HARD FOR TEDDY.

MR. PERKINS PRACTISING ORATORY.

George W. Perkins is working earnestly in behalf of Colonel Roosevelt and is all wrought up over the situation in Chicago. From one of the mildest spoken men who ever ordered a reporter off his front stoop he has changed to a seething volcano of burning words. He has been in eruption most of the time since his arrival. He has faced battery after battery of cameras without flinching and can always be found where the reporters are thickest, numerically speaking, of course.

Mr. Perkins is a loyal Roosevelt supporter, and is confident that the Colonel will come through with flying colors.

THREE BOYS WERE DROWNED IN WELLAND CANAL MISHAP

Government Steamer La Canadienne Breaks Through the Gates of Lock 22 and Swirl of Water Rushing Out of Lock Catches Children Playing on the Bank — Two Escape and Others Perish.

Thorold, Ont., June 21—Three small boys were drowned and damage amounting to several thousand dollars was caused last evening when the Canadian Government survey steamer La Canadienne broke through four gates of lock 22 and sank to the bottom of the Welland Canal. In addition to the drowning of the boys and the severe damage to the canal and the steamer, all the belongings of the crew were destroyed.

The steamer was on her way from Quebec to Lake Superior, and reached lock 22 in safety. After the gates had been partially closed, an order was given to go ahead. The tying line had not been secured fast on the rubbing post, and before the engineer could give an order to reverse the steamer had been pushed into the upper gate. The rush of water caused her to collide with the foot-gates, which snapped and floated on about 200 yards.

Water poured into the lock and forced the steamer back on to the locks, tearing a great hole in her side. The pumps proved of no avail, and within half an hour she had sunk. A number of the members of the crew escaped barely with their lives and lost all their belongings. A large quantity of maps and official records, charts, etc., were saved. A huge section of the bank along the west pier was torn and the road as far as 18 was damaged.

Five small boys were playing on the bank of the canal, and when the water rushed out of the lock they were caught in the swirl. George Bretherick managed to save his life by running away. Hugh Maguire, Government surveyor, saved the life of David Bouck. The three other lads, Willie Tacke, aged five; Willie Wallace, aged five and Leonard Bretwick, four years old, were drawn into the water and drowned. The children were the sons of English people, who had been living in this vicinity only a short time. They were in the habit of playing on the banks of the canal. Had they hurried across to the waste wier bridge, a short distance to the west, they would have escaped, but the flood of water from the upper level caught them and swept them over the embankment.

Evelyn Dresses Well.

White Plain, N.Y., June 21.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wife of Harry Thaw, took the stand again yesterday morning to testify against her husband.

She was smartly dressed in a white serge suit, and wore a black straw hat with a yellow plume.

Mrs. Thaw testified that her husband made a proposal at the Grand Hotel in New York, in 1904, that they both commit suicide. He had the details all planned, she said. They were to engage rooms at the Waldorf and drink poison. He had even fixed the hour. She refused.

She testified further that Thaw had complained to her that the food given him while he was in the Tombs was poisoned. He also complained that he could not eat the potatoes they gave him at Matteawan because "there were large lumps of salt petre in them."

Evelyn Thaw's testimony was interrupted when it was learned that Mrs. Susan Merrill, who rented apartments in New York to Thaw, was in the building. She had been sought for days by the state.

NEW AEROPLANE IN MONTREAL

Montreal, June 21.—The first trial made this year of the first aeroplane built in Montreal by Montreal aviators has been successfully consummated on Mr. Cousineau's farm on the Bois Fran road by Mr. Percy Reid, a local amateur.

The machine is constructed on the lines of a Bleriot.

Shooting at Navigation Lights.

Ottawa, June 21.—A new kind of alleged "sport" for which offenders will pay dearly if detected, has developed on the Rideau lakes, Georgian Bay and other waters frequented by pleasure craft. It consists in "shooting" beach or range lights put up by the Marine Department. If offenders are caught, the penalty will be severe.

ROOSEVELT WILL STAY TILL THE END

Chicago, June 21.—Last night Col. Roosevelt issued a lengthy and significant statement, in which he says: "We cannot afford to pardon a thief on condition that he surrenders half the stolen goods. If the honestly elected majority of the convention chooses to proceed with the business and nominate me as the candidate of the real Republican party, I shall accept. If some among them fear to take such a stand, and the remainder choose to inaugurate a movement to nominate me for the Presidency as a Progressive, on a Progressive platform, and if, in such event, the general feeling among Progressives favors my being nominated, I shall accept. In either case I shall make my appeal to every honest citizen in the nation, and I shal fight the campaign through, win or lose, even if I do not get a single electoral vote. I do not wish a single man to support me from any personal feeling formed. I have nothing to offer any man. Any man who supports me will do so without hope of gain, and at the risk of personal loss and discomfort; but if, having this in view, those fervent in this great fight for the rule of the people, and for social and industrial justice, which has now also become a clear-cut fight for honesty against dishonesty and theft, desire me to lead the fight, I will do so."—Theodore Roosevelt.

Teddy Not Ardent Suffragists.

New York, June 21.—Theodore Roosevelt has declined to join the New York Men's League for women's suffrage. Immediately after the recent announcement by Col. Roosevelt that he was for women suffrage, the secretary of the league called at the former President's office, and left a membership blank for him to sign. The secretary has now received his answer. It says that "Col. Roosevelt at the present time does not wish to avail himself of your kind offer."

NEW OFFICERS FOR GRAND TRUNK

Special to the Review.

Montreal, June 21. — President Chamberlain, of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, has issued a circular stating that the practice of designating several vice-presidents of this company by numbers will be discontinued. The following appointments took effect June 17th:—Wm. Wainwright, Vice-President; M. M. Reynolds, Vice-Pres., in charge of financial and accounting departments; M. Donaldson, Vice-Pres., and general manager of lines west of Fort William, in charge of construction, transportation and maintenance departments; J. E. Dalrymple, Vice-Pres., in charge of traffic.

BURNED TO DEATH IN AUTO WRECK

Hempstead, N.Y., June 21.—Albert Baumgartner, of Hempstead, was burned to death and six others injured in a collision yesterday between a high-power touring car and a runabout near the grandstand of the Long Island motor parkway.

The two machines were demolished, Baumgartner being pinned beneath the touring car. A moment later flames covered the wreck. The victim cried for help but his companions were unable to aid him and he was incinerated before their eyes.

CHINIQUY'S DAUGHTER GETS $3,000 DAMAGES FOR LIBEL

Judge Greenshields Says That no Church, However Great and Powerful, Can Over Ride the Civil Law Which Really Dominates It

Special to the Review.

Montreal, June 21—Justice Greenshields handed down judgment awarding Mrs. Rebecca Morin, daughter of the famous ex-priest and writer, Father Chiniquy, $3,000 dollars damages in her action for $10,000 for libel against Joseph Begin, editor of La Croix, a religious publication. In an article on Chiniquy, Begin made the assertion that as he had taken vows of perpetual chastity, he could never legally marry and that the woman he purported to marry was therefore only his concubine. Mrs. Morin contended that such statement branded her as illegitimate.

Judge Greenshields stated he had a certificate that Charles Chiniquy and Miss Allard had been married, and defendant had not produce proof that the marriage had been upset by any competent authority. The certificate of the birth of the daughter following the recognition of her as his daughter by Chiniquy, was evidence of the right of Mrs. Morin to bring action. The judge declared that no church, be it ever so powerful and great, had the right to override the law of the land, which really dominated them. He had come to this conclusion before the Supreme Court had given judgment in the marriage law reference.

MASS WAS CELEBRATED IN AN ORANGE HALL IN QUEBEC

Montreal, June 21.—A happy exchange of courtesies between Orangemen and Roman Catholics has been unearthed at Waterville, Que. The Catholic Church was burned down, and the Orangemen then offered the use of their hall to the local priest for services. The offer was gladly accepted, and mass was celebrated there for a considerable time.

The incident was related by William Galbraith, past provincial grand master of the Orange order, who was jollied by friends after he had been seen walking down the street in cordial conversation with Rev. Father Choquette, the priest at Waterville.

FIGHT IS ON IN EARNEST IN THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

Committee on Credentials Submit Partial Report—New Platform Deals With General Issues Only—A Clergyman Prayed for Peace and Social Justice and was Applauded by Both Factions—Motion to Seat Roosevelt Delegates Defeated 28 to 16

Special to the Review.

Chicago, June 21—The Republican Convention seems to have settled down to a waiting game. Fifteen minutes before the time scheduled for opening this morning, only a few delegates were on hand, but a rumor that a partial report of the credential committee would be presented caused the seats to be rapidly filled. Roosevelt delegates made preparation to strenuously oppose any such action.

It was not until 12.26 Chicago time, that Chairman Root called the convention to order, and stated that the first business before the convention would be the consideration of the report of the credential committee, recommending seating of Taft delegates in ninth Alabama district.

When the Resolution committee adjourned to attend convention, the platform had been practically completed. It is concise and not worthy of note in that it deals with no particular measures, but with issues in general.

When the convention met at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the committee of credentials was not ready to report, and an adjournment was taken until 11 o'clock this morning.

The credential committee was in session all night. A motion to seat the Roosevelt list of delegates was defeated by a vote of 28 to 16.

The two Taft delegates from California were reseated.

Chicago, June 21.—Five minutes was the entire duration of the two sessions of the Republican national convention yesterday, with a recess of four hours between.

The first session, convened at noon, last four minutes; the second, one minute.

The feature of the noon session was the prayer of the Very Rev. Walter T. Summer, dean of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul of Chicago, and the applause which followed it. This prayer differed from that offered at the opening session on Tuesday, when Father Callaghan adhered strictly to the usual form of Roman Catholic ritual; likewise from the invocation Wednesday by Rabbi Stolz, which was colorless and general in its terms.

Dean Sumner dealt quite directly with the sensational factional conflict present in the minds of every person in the enormous auditorium, in whose behalf he spoke, and prayed that there should be granted to the members of the convention "self-restraint, cool judgment and all wisdom, that their deliberations may insure to the nation civic righteousness, industrial peace and social justice." The entire gathering, both on the floor and platform and in the galleries, stood during Dean Sumner's invocation, and as he closed broke into quite general hand-clapping.

The afternoon session was remarkable not so much for the fact that it lasted a bit less than one minute, as for the extraordinary conditions which ensued on its adjournment.

Almost with the fall of Chairman Root's gavel there broke out a pandemonium of cheering, which lasted about as long as that of the day before. It had scarcely a definite cause, though its immediate occasion was the effort of a man in the west gallery to swing the great gathering into unison with the cry "We want Teddy." It started all right, but almost La Follette, Hadley and Cummins enthusiasts began an opposition turmoil, with the result that within less than a minute there was simply one meaningless chaos of noise. Presently a group of men in the south gallery, back of the platform, brought four or five megaphones into play with "We want Taft."

A smashing rainstorm was in progress outside, so the people simply stood where they were and shouted, each to his taste.

Under cover of the racket, and at first unnoticed by the crowd, there began to gather on the platform a body of policemen; first one, then another, then three, till in a few minutes there were ranged along the curved edge and at the back of the platform some twenty blue-clad police. And they were under the personal command of Assistant Chief Schuettler.

Then it began to be noticed that Chairman Root, Secretary Gleason, Sergeant-at-Arms Stone and his assosistant, Col. Thayer, had never left the platform at all. And the crowd began to understand the reason for this conspicuous show of force.

One of the reasons for the immense crowd which had gathered yesterday was the general impression that Col. Roosevelt would come to the convention and make a speech; also there was considerable reason to assume from the morning newspapers that yesterday would bring to pass the much-discussed battle between the factions, perhaps a bolt of the Roosevelt adherents; possibly an attempt to hold a rival convention simultaneously on the floor of the same hall. There had been a tremendous addition to, almost a doubling of the police force on duty at the hall, and in the morning Chief of Police McWeeny had taken personal command at the Colliseum. To the person uninformed as to the swiftly changing developments of the day, the promise of excitement was exceptionally alluring.

The crowd which waited for the storm to cease was good-humored, but it was a situation full of possibilities, and the convention officials were taking no chances. As it was, Chief Schuettler was about to turn the people out into the storm. So far a good deal more than an hour a police guard surrounded the platform and the convention officers kept their places on the stage, while the great crowd yelled itself tired.

At last the rain began to slacken and the police got busy at once; gently but grimly edging the people out. By that time they were ready to go.

In the Colliseum Annex the credential committee was hearing the first of the contests. It was word from the committee that the work could not be finished in time for any session yesterday which brought about the quick adjournment. Whether business will proceed to-day when the convention is called to order at 11 o'clock, will depend chiefly upon whether the all-night session of the credential committee completes the work of preparing the roll of the convention.

DEMOCRATS ARE GETTING READY FOR THEIR CAMPAIGN

Special to the Review.

Baltimore, June 21.—That the Democratic National Committee will ratify the selection of Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, as temporary chairman of the Democratic National Convention was the statement made to-day by the National Committeemen who led the successful fight on the arrangement committee yesterday to name the former Democratic Presidential candidate from New York.

William J. Bryan will be here Sunday to lead the fight against Parker.

Tarifff reform, the election of United States Senators by the people, an income tax and regulation of trusts are four things that J. Bruce Kromer, National Committeeman, from Montana is urging should be included in the Democratic platform.

Baltimore, June 21.—Former Judge Alton B. Parker of New York was selected yesterday as the temporary chairman of the Democratic national convention by the arrangement committee. The choice of Judge Parker was made against the protest of William J. Bryan, whose friends submitted the names of four other candidates for the honor. Eight of the sixteen votes of the committee went to the New York jurist, while Representative Henry of Texas received three votes, Senator-elect Ollie James of Kentucky three votes, Senator Kern of Indiana one vote, and Senator O'Gorman of New York one vote.

As the campaign managers of those seeking the Presidential nomination were playing for position with respect to the nomination, the vote in opposition to Judge Parker was in consequence split up.

With Judge Parker the committee chose Urey Woods of Kentucky as temporary secretary and John I. Martin of Missouri as temporary sergeant-at-arms. The selection of the arrangement committee is in no sense final, and must be passed upon next Monday at a full meeting.

Report had it last night that a telegram had been despatch to Chicago to William J. Bryan asking that he come at once to Baltimore. Several national committeemen said after yesterday's meeting that they expected that a fight by Mr. Bryan and his friends would be made on the floor of the convention against Judge Parker's selection

The Daily Review

FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1912.

THE MAN FROM MISSOURI

Governor Hadley, of Missouri, is a clever speaker and level-headed statesman, but he is more famous as the chief executive in a state that was so long in the Democratic column that it was generally conceded that its political destiny was settled for all time. Col. R. G. Ingersoll, the famous agnostic, once said, when asked if he would ever adopt the Christian faith, that he would join a church when Missouri became Republican, a contingency that the colonel considered outside the range of possibility. Missouri broke away from the Democratic ranks but unfortunately Ingersoll was dead before that time and so could not be held to his promise.

Governor Hadley was accorded a complimentary demonstration by the Roosevelt supporters in the Convention and was immediately thrust into the limelight as a prospective dark horse. but he is practically barred from all chance of the nomination by the geographical position of his state. The Republican party may be intoxicated with excitement to-day, but it is not insane enough to choose for leader a man who lives so far south.

Furthermore a dark horse to answer the required conditions must not be associated with any faction.

THE ENTRANCE EXAMINATION

When the entrance examinations were held two years ago, a vigorous protest was recorded against the arithmetic papers as being too difficult. There were just grounds for the complaint, because some of the problems were certainly posers, demanding as they did in their solution a technical knowledge only to be acquired by actual business experience. Even among business men, some of the commercial points involved are still matters of dispute.

At the present examination, now in progress in the Collegiate Institute, if the arithmetic paper, published in another column, proves disastrous to the ambitions of the juvenile aspirants for scholastic promotion, the method of teaching mathematics in our public schools is radically at fault. The questions are fair, practical in nature and are devoid of that element known as a catch. There is only one over which the unwary are likely to come to grief, and that is the ice house problem. That alone is liable to trip up those who may be beset with an indifference to matters of detail.

One commendable feature in the paper is that for the last three questions no credit is to be given for any but a correct answer, because, from the very nature of the problems, absolute accuracy is essential.

The older generation of High School graduates, who years ago went through the ordeal of writing at an entrance examination, cannot fail to be interested in the present arithmetic papers as compared to the ones with which they themselves wrestled so long ago. The problems as published to-day, are certainly no more difficult than were the mathematical deadfalls that were contrived by the late Dr. J. A. McLellan to the educational undoing of many an unfortunate youth.

In the composition paper, a wide range on the choice of themes is given, but it is easy to imagine that at least ninety per cent. of the boys would select "a Base Ball Match" for a topic and that the language will be enriched by the invention of some picturesque English phrases.

JUNE BRIDES

The unseasonable weather has had no serious effects upon the number of June weddings. Day by day the list grows. Everybody, even the judges at the recent baby show, is pleased to read with unfailing regularity in the daily press reports of these happy events that "the bride looked pretty" in her wedding attire. Frequent use may have rendered this expression a stock phrase, but it is true and so aptly describes the situation that it should never be discarded.

Every woman looks lovely as she stands at the alter arrayed in all the bright trappings which the occasion demands. That blush of modesty at finding herself the central figure in a notable function, that rosey hue that comes from bright hopes of a happy future, beautifully blended, lends to any countenance a charm that is always good to see.

We all trust these hopes will never in the future be shattered, that the idol will not prove to be mere gilded clay and that the tenderest sentiment in the feminine nature will never be built on a foundation of shifting and treacherous sand.

THE COURIER'S REMEDY

The discussion of the recent 50 per cent reduction of the duty on cement as it progresses becomes more mentally exasperating day by day until the perplexed public may well be pardoned the question as to where they are to get off. One paper asserts the reduction was made to bribe the Saskatchewan electors; another that it was aimed solely at the cement merger; one journal rises to declare that it was a blow designed to crush out the small independent companies, thereby lending direct aid to the trust. And following all this comes the announcement that there will be no decrease in the cost to the consumer because the railway companies have raised their rates to the amount of the reduction in the duty. And in all this conglomeration of argument and dogmatic assertion, the statement of Finance Minister White, that the cut was made for a brief stated period in order to relieve a tense situation in the building business, seems to be completely ignored.

It remains for the Canadian Courier to take a hand in the discussion but that publication, instead of introducing further complications makes, unlike the majority of its contemporaries, a practical suggestion. In a special article it points out that in a similar condition last year, the Government removed the duty from coal at all points west of the Canadian Soo, thus helping the West without disturbing the East. If, the Courier says, a similar plan had been followed in the cement case the small factories in Eastern Canada would not have suffered, while the West would have still been afforded the relief which is the object of the reduction.

However plausible this argument may be, it is always well to remember that discriminating legislation, if not actually unconstitutional, is at least dangerous.

NOTE AND COMMENT

One section of the Roosevelt faction is busy announcing new programs while another section is kept just as busy making denials.

Are all our historical idols to be broken up? Was that cannon at Quebec really never at Bunker Hill after all? Perish the thought.

"The Reciprocity issue does not need a resurrection; it was never killed," remarks the London Advertiser. Some people believe, in a truly literal sense, that it is not death to die.

If the pictures of Col. Roosevelt, as published in some of the papers are true to life it is no wonder the timid portion of the American people holds him in dread.

As the militant suffragettes seem to concentrate all their attacking force upon the silk hats of members of the government, cabinet minister should, in the interests of personal safety, adopt some other style of head gear.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 20.—There was a better enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat, but as the prices bid were still out of line, no new business was reported. Some sales of oats were made over the cable, and the tone of the market is firmer with holders asking 50½c c.i.f. for extra No. 1 feed to arrive. There was some demand from Ontario millers for No. 2 northern wheat, and sales of about 100,000 bushels were made at $1.08½ c.i.f. bay ports. Spring wheat flour continues quiet, but there was an improved demand for winter wheat grades, and the tone of the market is strong with prices 10c to 15c per barrel higher. Millfeed quiet and steady. Cheese is weaker and prices have declined ⅛c per pound owing to the lower prices ruling in the country, the falling off in the demand from English buyers and the weak foreign situation. Butter is steady. Eggs fairly active.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, June 20.—Receipts of live stock at the City Yards were 60 carloads, comprising 572 cattle, 600 sheep, 2573 hogs, 162 calves and 11 horses.

Butchers.

Choice cattle were in demand at prices extending from $6.75 to $8.10.

Milkers and Springers.

Prices did not change, holding steady at the old figures, with a good offering. The figures quoted run in a wide sweep of from $40 to $70.

Beef Cows.

The fair to medium grades fell from a quarter to a half-cent a pound with the offerings good. The better grades run from $5.50 to $6.25. Canners, which have been coming in strong in number of late, were quoted at $2.

Sheep

The number offered was just one less than Wednesday, and the prices held around the usual mark. Heavy ewes were quoted at $4 straight. Light ewes were strong at from $5 to $5.50. Bucks were not much in demand with prices set at $3 to $4.

Lambs.

Spring lambs quoted at from $9 to $10 were in demand. In a few instances sales at $11 were reported, but these were merely instances where the buyer sorted out a choice lot.

Calves.

The offerings were considerably lighter than usual, only 162 coming into the market, and the range in prices was from $6 to $8.75. Bobs were quoted at $4 straight, the tension in the veal market forcing a slight advantage during the week.

Hogs.

The offerings were exceedingly heavy—2573—and the prices remained at $8.25 f.o.b. with $8.60 paid for the fed and watered.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

Hogs—Receipts 2000 head; slow and 10c to 15c higher; heavy, $7.85 to $8; mixed, $7.75 to $7.85; yorkers, $7.25 to $7.80; pigs, $6.15 to $7.25; roughs, $6.75 to $6.85; stags, $5 to $6; dairies, $7.50 to $7.70.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts 1600 head; active. Lambs and yearlings steady; others 15c to 25c higher. Lambs, $5 to $9.25; yearlings, $7.75 to $8; wethers, $5.25 to $5.50; ewes, $4.25 to $4.75; sheep, mixed, $1.50 to $5.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Cattle—Receipts 4000. Market strong for beeves, others weak. Beeves, $6.10 to $9.50; Texas steers, $6.40 to $8; western steers, $6.80 to $8; stockers and feeders, $4.20 to $6.80; cows and heifers, $3.20 to $8; calves, $5.50 to $8.

Hogs—Receipts 15,000. Market active, 10c to 15c higher. Light, $7.20 to $7.75½; mixed, $7.25 to $7.70; heavy, $7.25 to $7.70; rough, $7.20 to $7.40; pigs, $5.25 to $7; bulk of sales, $7.50 to $7.65.

Sheep—Receipts 1000. Market steady to strong. Native, $3.35 to $5.60; western, $3.50 to $5.60; yearlings, $4.75 to $7; lambs, native, $4.65 to $7.85; western, $4.60 to $8; spring lambs, $5.25 to $9.50.

Cheese Markets.

KINGSTON, June 20.—At the Frontenac Cheese Board here to-day, 577 boxes of white and 240 colored were sold at 12⅛c.

WOODSTOCK, June 20—Offerings 1500 boxes, at 12⅛c; highest offer on board 12¼c; no sales, selling on the street at 12 9-16c.

VANKLEEK HILL, Ont., June 20.—There were 1684 boxes of cheese boarded and sold on the Vankleek Hill Cheese Board to-day. All sold at 12 3-16c.

BROCKVILLE, June 20.—At to-day's cheese board meeting the offerings were 3080 colored and 1630 white. The sales were 100 white at 12⅛c, and 50 colored at 12 5-16c, and 380 white and 750 colored at 12⅜c.

Bars to Happiness.

"Now that you've made your pile I suppose you're happy?"

"No. Mother won't lemma see any show I wanter, daughter won't lemme wear anything I wanter, and the doctor won't lemme eat anything I wanter."—Washington Herald.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

THE PAPER ON ARITHMETIC

Problems Submitted Yesterday to Candidates for Entrance to High Schools

The following is the paper on arithmetic, submitted to the pupils at the current examination for entrance to High School and Collegiate Institute.

1. A merchant marks his goods at 25 per cent. above cost, but allows his customers 6 per cent. discount. What per cent profit does he make?

2. In a rural school section a tax of $4,000 is to be raised. The assessed valuation of the property in the section is $850,000. What will be the tax on the dollar, and what will A's tax be, his property being assessed at $1800?

3. What is the cost, at $60 an acre of a piece of land in the form of a right-angle triangle, whose two shorter sides are 16.46 chains and 9.75 chains respectively?

(Ten square chains make an acre.)

4. An ice house 82 feet long, 52 feet wide, and 28 feet high, (all inside measurements) is to be filled with ice blocks, each being 2 feet thick, 2 feet wide, and 3 feet long. If 2 feet of space is left between the ice and the ceiling, floor, and sides for saw-dust, how many blocks will be required to fill the ice house?

5. An agent succeeded in collecting for a contractor 80 per cent. of a doubtful account of $1,500. What sum would he pay to the contractor after deducting his commission of 7 1-2 per cent?

6. What sum must be deposited in a savings bank which pays interest half-yearly at the rate of 3 1-2 per cent. per annum, to produce $8.75 interest at the end of the first half-year?

7. No marks to be given unless the result is correct.

Find, without changing decimals to vulgar fractions, the result of 253.1625x32.64div.168.775.

8. No marks to be given unless the result is correct.

John Ryan bought from Wm. Beaton the following bill of goods—205 1-4 bu wheat at 92 cents a bu., 18 1-2 bu. oats at 44 cents a bu., 10 1-3 bu. barley at 72 cents a bu., 320 1-4 bu. potatoes at 68 cents a bu., 2250 ft. lumber at $24 a thousand feet, 1875 lb. pork at $8.80 per 100 lb. Find the whole amount of the bill.

9. No marks to be given unless the result is correct.

Find the interest on $438 from March 2nd., to June 18th at 6 1-2 per cent. per annum.

The candidates at the entrance examination wrote on the grammar paper this morning, the questions being as follows—

(a) If the world neglects and starves men of genius, will not the world be the greater sufferer?

(b) Perhaps so; but the English nation, which has always had a regard and even love for Oliver Goldsmith, that is quite peculiar in the history of literature, and which has been eager to sympathize with him in the many miseries of his career, will be slow to believe that it is responsible for any starvation that Goldsmith may have endured.

(i) Analylse fully sentence (a)

(ii) Write in full the subordinate clauses of sentence (b) and state the kind and relation of each.

(iii) Parse the words—"the" (line 1) "sufferer" (line 2); "so" (line 3); "but" (line 3) "even" (line 4); "for" (lin 4), "that" (line 4); "t'be" (line 6); "slow" (line 7); "that" (line 8).

(iv) Pick out two adjective and two adverbial phrases in lines 5 and 6.

2. In the following sentences each word in capitals partakes of the nature of more than one part of speech. Tell with reasons what parts of speech each capitalized word represents—

(a) The house WHERE we lived is now being rebuilt.

(b) Yesterday Tom met Dr. Jones, WHO is no wliving in Buffalo.

(c) That was the day WHEN I first saw him.

(d) The knife he used was not of the same make AS I used.

(e) The children say that these are THEIR skates.

3. (a) Write the first person singular of the following tenses of the verb PRAISE— (1) The present perfect passive, (2) the present progressive active, (3) the present emphatic active, (4) the past perfect active (5, the past progressive passive, (6) the past perfect passive, (7) the future perfect active, (8) the simple future passive

(b) Write of the same verb— (1) the perfect participle passive, (2) the infinitive progressive active.

4. Give the principal parts (the first person singular of the present and of the past tense, an dthe past participle) of the following verbs — do, lie, see, speak, lay, let, hear, think bring, fling.

5. (a) Compare—much, dry, ill, far wet.

(b) Give the plural of—glass, thief dwarf, spoonful, goose, solo, deer, potato, son-in-law, strife.

(c) Give the possessive case of — lady, cats, men, who, son-in-law.

6. State whether or not the capitalized words in the following sentences are correctly used, giving reasons for your statements—

(a) You WERE quite rightr about that, John.

(b) We WOULD be unpished if we did so.

(c) Each was waiting for HIS name to b ecalled out.

(d) He was speaking of you and Me.

(e) The woods where I was walking WAS beautiful in the soft autumn sunshine.

A PUZZLE IN METALS.

Brass Has an Odor Yet Copper and Zinc Separately Have Not.

Brass, as every one knows, has an awful odor, yet the two things of which brass consists, zinc and copper, give no odor whatever in their separate states. This is a problem that has given a great deal of work to scientists. It is one as yet not entirely solved.

To arrive at the general law it has been found that almost all alloys, or mixtures of two metals, will give an odor, while the metals themselves do not. Brass is not the single example, though probably the most odoriferous.

The explanation is as follows: All substances, including metals, are always giving off small particles of their substance to the air—that is, evaporating. Some solids give these off so rapidly as soon to disappear. Gum camphor is a conspicuous example. To smell any substance a particle of that substance has to tickle a nerve ending in the nose. If a small particle of copper, we shall say, does this by itself, no effect is noticed, but if a particle of zinc and a particle of copper strike at the same time the effect is such as to cause a perceptible impulse to the nerve. The chance for these two to strike at the same time is given only when they are intimately mixed in an alloy.—New York Tribune.

FAMOUS EPIDEMICS.

In Europe In 1348 the Black Death Claimed 25,000,000 Victims.

In the twelfth century not less than fifteen epidemics of disease and many famines carried off the people of England. The thirteenth century saw twenty plagues and nineteen famines, while the fourteenth had a black record of disease. In 1348 the "black plague" or "black death," which was brought into the country from the east, caused the death of 100,000 persons in London alone, while in Europe altogether 25,000,000 people fell victims to its ravages.

In 1485 the "sweating sickness" appeared in England, causing great destruction of human life. It reappeared at various intervals for a century thereafter. The last terrible visitation of the plague in England was in 1664-66, by which 100,000 lives were lost in London alone.

This epidemic was followed by the great fire of 1666, which destroyed 16,000 houses, including all the most densely populated portions of the city. The rebuilding of London with some regard to sanitary laws appears to have put the first check on the epidemic diseases that had previously devastated the population. — London Standard.

Whistles and His Door Opens.

There is in London a man who surely must combine the two characteristics of laziness and invention to a remarkable degree. It is his custom to have his breakfast in bed, and, burdened with the trouble of getting out of bed for the purpose of unlocking his bedroom door, he has invented a door which opens to his whistle. He has accomplished this somewhat remarkable feat by means of a simple electromagnet which draws the bolt when a current passes through it, a platinum point and a piano wire attuned to a certain note. When this note or one of its octaves is sounded the wire vibrates in response, and this vibration brings it in contact with the platinum point. The circuit is thus completed, and a sensitive relay is brought into operation.—Chicago Tribune.

Russian Place Names.

The Russian has not applied his names without reason. In 1858, when he founded the capital of the Amoor province, he named it Blagoveschensk. This means "good news"—to all save the proofreaders in newspaper offices. Three years later he founded the capital of Primorskaya and gave it a name that plainly showed what it was intended to be—Vladivostok, "ruler of the east." Near the end of his great transcontinental railway he made a brand new city and called it Dalny, "farthest," a very appropriate name for a place 5,800 miles from the starting point of the road.

The Memory.

Unquestionably the memory of the race is deteriorating. Plato knew perfectly well what he was about when he declared that the invention of letters was the deathblow of memory. In the old time men depended upon their memories for all the affairs of life. The songs of the bards, the laws, all business transactions, everything that took place was lost unless men remembered it. And they remembered it. They had to remember it. The difference between the memories that carried the total content of human knowledge and the memories of today is tremendous. There is no particular reason for remembering things today. They are all on record, and the memory of the race is accordingly dying out.—New York American.

Fed From the Sword.

The true shamrock is one of the tiniest of the clover family and has small yellow bloom—that "sprig of shamrock, wearing of the green."

When an Irish mother brings forth a male child she puts his first food on the sword of her husband and lightly introduces the first auspicium of nourishment into his little mouth with the point of the sword.—Solinus, 1,700 Years Ago.

No wonder the Irish are natural born soldiers.—New York Press.

The 26th Regiment marching from London to Goderich, has had a warm welcome in the villages and towns along the route.

A Light Ale With A Brisk Flavor

In cafés, in hotels, in clubs, in homes, people are talking about Kuntz's Fine Sparkling Ale. This latest achievement of the House of Kuntz is certainly creating a sensation.

Very Invigorating

Kuntz's Fine Sparkling Ale is a light ale with a brisk flavor. Those who have tried it like it immensely. They say that it puts a keen edge on the appetite and invigorates the whole system as no ordinary ale has ever been able to do.

That's because it is brewed from the finest ingredients, including the sparkling, clear-as-crystal water from the famous Kuntz Springs. The analysis of this remarkable spring water shows that it is equal, if not superior, to the water used in brewing famous English Ales. It requires an exceptional water for a high-class ale. Ordinary water only makes ordinary ale. That's why so many ales disappoint you.

But if you want a glass brimful of enjoyment fill it from a bottle of Kuntz's Fine Sparkling Ale. Try a bottle at your favorite café or hotel for lunch, or order a case sent home so that you can have a glass or two for dinner.

A Great Reputation

Kuntz's Original Lager enjoys a great reputation all over the Dominion. It has been brewed for sixty years by three generations of the House of Kuntz at Waterloo, Ontario. Millions of bottles of this celebrated beverage are filled annually at the brewery for the enjoyment of the Canadian public.

Order a Case or Two of Kuntz's Original Lager, and one or two of Kuntz's Fine Sparkling Ale delivered to your home. Liquor dealers most everywhere in Canada sell Kuntz's Products. All the leading hotels, cafés, and clubs serve them. Kuntz's Beverages are popular wherever good beer is enjoyed.

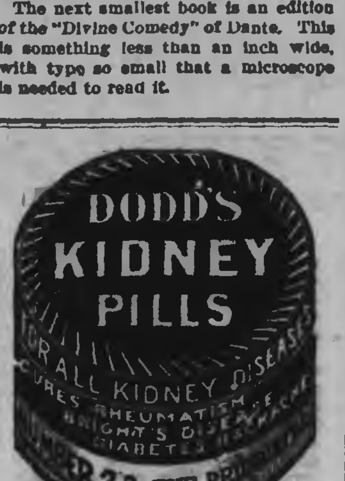
Smallest Books.

The smallest book in the world was made in Italy. It is not much larger than a man's thumb nail. It is four-tenths of an inch in length, a quarter of an inch in width and contains 208 pages, each with nine lines and from 95 to 100 letters. The text consists of a letter written by the inventor of the pendulum clock to Mme. Christine of Lorraine in 1615.

The next smallest book is an edition of the "Divine Comedy" of Dante. This is something less than an inch wide, with type so small that a microscope is needed to read it.



A Lost Language.

A monument to a lost language is to be found in the village of St. Paul, near Penzance, in Cornwall, and it is believed to be the only monument in existence which marks the death of a vanished tongue. It commemorates the death of the last woman who spoke in the Cornish language and was erected by a Frenchman. It is a granite obelisk about seven feet high and is built into the churchyard wall, the front facing the highway, where it is plainly discernible by all who pass that way. The upper part is in the form of a Maltese cross. The inscription reads as follows: "Here lieth interred Dorothy Pentreath, who died in 1777, said to have been the last person who conversed in the ancient Cornish, the peculiar language of this county from the earliest records till it expired in the eighteenth century in this parish of St. Paul."

Sock and Buskin.

The expression "sock and buskin," which literally means comedy and tragedy, found its origin in the "soccus," the Latin name of the low shoe worn by the ancient comic actors, and the buskin, a contraction of the French word "brossequin," remotely derived from the Greek "bursa," a hide or high soled shoe worn by the ancient tragedians to increase their height. The soccus reached to the ankle only, whereas the buskin extended to the knee.

If babies knew half as much as women think they do they would probably hold a conversation to decide how mothers ought to be made to behave.

SECURES HIS DEGREE OF D.D.

An Honor for Rev. J. R. Robinson of Hamilton

The following in reference to a former local boy, and a brother of Mr. T. H. Robinson, Weller street, will be of interest to his Peterborough friends and acquaintances. The Hamilton Times has this to say in refereence to him:—

Some years ago Rev. J. H. Robinson, pastor of Simcoe street Methodist church, this city, took a course in the American Bible University in Ohio. At its convocation a week ago, the University conferred the degree of D. D. upon him and the honor will be a source of pleasure to his numerous friends here and throughout the Niagara Conference.

Rev. Dr. Robinson is in his second pastorate in this city, having been minister of Emerald street some years ago. He has occupied the highest positions in the gift of the church, including the presidency of the Niagara Conference. He is a faithful and successful minister, and is held in the highest esteem by his fellow clergymen.

PLANS FOR THE PROPOSED NEW DRILL HALL AT NORWOOD

The plans for the new drill hall at Norwood have now arrived and are open for inspection

The site chosen for the building is on the park lot, facing on Alma st. south of the High and Public schools.

The plans give promise of a handsome and spacious building, the measurements being about 80x42 feet. The front part will be divided off into quarters for the officers, men and armouries, and will be two storeys high and built of cement blocks. The hall is to the rear and measures inside 40x60 feet.

There are also large double windows along the sides as well as in the front and rear. Contractors are given five months in which to construct the building. Tenders are to be in by July 3rd.

Citizens and the people throughout the district, will appreciate the energy displayed by their local member, Mr. J.A. Sexsmith, in securing the necessary appropriation for this very creditable proposed structure. With such complete and convenient quarters where the members of the local company of militia, the cadets and the boy scouts may assemble for drill and practice, Norwood should become a live military centre in the not far distant future.

CANADIAN MEDICAL MEN WILL MEET AT EDMONTON

The annual convention of the Canadian Medical Association is to be held at Edmonton this year, from August 10th to August 14th. Dr H. C. Mackid, of Calgary is president.

On the occasion of this gathering it is proposed to inaugurate a new system of registration for the Dominion. The necessary legislation to bring about the proposed change has been passed by the Dominion Parliament and by all the provincial legislatures.

Under the proposed system, all certificates already issued to existing practitioners by the various provincial medical boards will be accepted by a Dominion medical board which will then take over the examination of all medical men seeking to practise, and certificates issued by this board will enable the holders to practise in any part of the Dominion of Canada.

An excursion to the famous Yellowhead Pass has been arranged as a pleasant termination to the convention. A special train is to be placed by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, at the disposal of those who wish to take a trip.

The arrangements with the Railway Companies are that members attending the Convention, (and this will include their wives,) will get single fare for the return journey, providing there is an attendance of 100 from all over Canada. That number will be easily obtained, so that no more favourable opportunity for an outing can be offered the profession; one combining business, a holiday and a pleasure trip. The single fare rate is being made by the direct route to Winnipeg and Edmonton; or the delegates can travel by the Lake Route, landing at Fort William thence by rail, at a slightly additional figure, to cover the cost of the meals and berth furnished on the steamers; or the

The meeting this year bids far to be a most interesting one on the scientific side. Dr. A. Giles, a prominent surgeon of London, England, is to deliver the address in surgery and Dr. A. D. Blackader of Montreal, the address in Medicine. A large number of interesting papers have already been promised. There will also be a public lecture by Dr. Adami of Montreal. Mr. M.J. Sturm, Hospital Architect, Chicago, will deliver an illustrated public lecture during the convention on "The economies of hospital planning and management."

All qualified medical practitioners in good standing are eligible for membership in the Association and it is hoped that a great many who are not at present members will take advantage of this meeting to make the trip to Edmonton, which will be most pleasurable.

WRIGHT SENT UP FOR TRIAL BY MAGISTRATE DUMBLE

Information Against Clinton Rightmeyer is Withdrawn.

The preliminary hearing of the assault and robbery charge against Albert Wright and Clinton Rightmeyer was held this morning in the City Council chamber.

The Crown dropped the charged against Rightmeyer and he was discharged by the Magistrate, so proceedings were taken against Wright alone, and the name of Rightmeyer was struck out. Rightmeyer was called as witness for the Crown.

Wright was committed for trial before the County judge, but was allowed his freedom on bail of $1,000. Mr. G. N. Gordon defended Wright, Mr. R. Ruddy, K.C., was also present.

Yorke claims that he was relieved of the sum of $2.55, after being knocked down by Wright. Rightmeyer, he said, was standing on the sidewalk, and was a witness of the affair. The assault he claimed, was committed on the bridge, in front of Montgomery's on Simcoe street, about ten o'clock at night.

In his evidence, he said that Wright and he had a drink at a Simcoe st. hotel, and he bought a flask. Outside, they both took a swallow, and witness then left in direction of Aylmer street. Witness claimed that Wright pursued him, after calling him a vile name, and knocked him down with a blow behind the ear, following it up by relieving him of his pocket-book and $2.55.

Rightmeyer's evidence was that he saw Wright pursue Yorke, after Yorke had refused him another drink out of the bottle, and he saw Wright jump upon Yorke and both fell to the ground. They separated, Wright going West and Yorke in the direction of George street, both running.

Rightmeyer on his way home said he was accosted by three men, one of whom knocked his hat off. P. C. Meharry and Yorke then came along the former placing witness under arrest.

LEBRUN & CO. BID FOR STOCK OF CLOTHING IN MONTREAL

A representative of a large Montreal clothing establishment, that is in financial difficulties, was in Peterborough to-day and offered to sell his entire stock to H. LeBrun & Co., but that firm considered that his figure was too high. They, however, made him an offer, which will in all probability be accepted. The Montreal man took the train for home at noon to confer with his principals, and the Peterborough firm will receive a final answer in a few days. If this deal goes through, and the chances are that it will, then Peterborough will have one of the greatest cut-price sales of ready-made men and boys' clothing that has ever been launched in this city. The stock for which the offer has been made is a large one, and is up-to-date in every particular.

The fact that such a sale will be conducted by H. LeBrun & Co. is a guarantee that everything will be on the level, and that every statement made as to price and quality can be absolutely depended upon. The firm's reputation is established in business circles, and the public have full confidence in all their transactions. When the sale carried on some time ago to wind up the estate of the late senior partner, H. LeBrun, everybody was satisfied and the firm's reputation for fair dealing was established.

Later announcements will be made and the sale, if the negotiations are brought to a successful issue, will be a bummer.

PETES FEATURE SECOND GAME WITH THE HAMS BY TRIPLE PLAY IN EIGHTH INNINGS

Jack White Started Play by Great One Hand Catch in Left Garden—Kolts Capped the Game in Seventh, With the Assistance of Passes—Game Tomorrow Called for Three O'clock.

There were no tears shed after yesterday's affair at the ball lot.

Knotty Lee's Kolts took the game with a 7—4 score, owing to the wild delivery of the three pitchers used by the Petes, but the fielding of the team easily made up for the shortcomings in the twirling department.

The feature plays went to the Caps. Manager Rowan was first to the front with a beautiful throw to the plate that gave Trout plenty of time to get Cameron coming home from third retiring the side.

Babe Tully came next. His chance was a screaming drive through the box by Killilea, with Corns perched at second. Tully fielded the ball with his ungloved hand and shot it to Barthold, stopping a possible score.

THE ONE BEST FIELDING PLAY.

But it remained for Jack White, the stellar left fielder of the Caps, to bring the sensation. White had been playing close to the fence, and in the eighth Maguire and Teed had singled. Cameron came next with a drive over short that had the earmarks of a clean hit. There wasn't a fan on the grounds who thought White would reach the ball, but he did by the fastest kind of work ever seen on a local diamond. The runners never expected that he would reach the ball, and were half way between the next stations when White grabbed the ball with his bare hand. He threw to Tully, who in turn threw to Barthold, retiring the side. The play was worth about twelve ordinary games.

Up to the seventh the game was a pitcher's battle with Walter Teed having the edge on Johnny Derr. The only run had been taken by Hamilton. This was in the fourth when Connie Murphy's sacrifice brought Killilea in.

The Petes put two men on the sacks in their half of the third, but fast fielding stopped this chance to score.

KOLTS TOOK SIX IN THE SEVENTH.

Hamilton took six runs in the seventh and it happened as follows: Connie Murphy, first man up, drew a base on balls and with Maguire likely to go by the same route, Murphy stole second. Murphy took third on a wild pitch. With two balls and a strike called on Maguire, Derr was sent to the bench, McGarry a new twirler taking up the job. He was wild and passed Maguire and then hit Teed, filling the bases. With two balls on Cameron, Osborne was called to relieve McGarry and he passed the batter, forcing in Murphy. Corns also received a free ticket and Maguire walked in. Jo Jo Keenan hit into right field, scoring Teed and Cameron, but Keenan was out on the line between first and second, Barthold to Byrnes to Tully. Lane kept up the good work with a double to centre, while Killilea died on a grounder to Nasher, Killilea being held at second. Fisher drove a single through Byrnes and Killilea scored. Murphy was out Tully to Barthold. Three hits, four passes, hit by pitcher, wild pitch, six runs.

The Hams looked good to collect some more in the eighth, but the triple play from White ended everything.

FOUR RUNS IN THE NINTH.

The Petes got busy in their ninth and scored the quartet of runs, when nine men faced Teed. Barthold was out on a grounder to the pitcher, but Byrnes was safe when Cameron messed up his grounder. Tully singled to right, and a wild pitch advanced the runners. With Trout at bat another wild pitch gave the Caps the first run, Byrnes scoring. Mower was sent in to bat for Osborne, and received a pass. Nasher helped a whole lot by planting a two bagger in right and scoring Tully and Trout. Rowan singled, scoring Mower. Swartz forced Rowan at second, and White was called out on strikes.

It looks like a case of ground rules for to-morrow's attraction at Riverside Park. Everybody's doing it now, the subject being baseball and baseball only.

Bandmaster Giddon and his men have offered their services, and the commanding officer of the regiment having given permission for the band to be present, there will be plenty of music.

The stock of the White Caps has gone up like a sky rocket during the past few days, and its a safe bet that the crowd will go over two thousand to-morrow.

The St. Thomas team, with Manager Dad Stewart at the helm, are here for the four game series, commencing this afternoon. The game to-morrow will be called at 3 o'clock.

Manager Rowan has secured another catcher, Dorrey by name. He is a big man and may report to-day.

There are plenty of bouquets to be distributed, and Trout certainly deserves his, for exceptionally good work behind the bat.

Graney, who played several games for the White Caps, is with the St. Thomas club.

Look out for some excitement when Bowerman's Tecumsehs hit Ottawa for two games next week.

Although Cameron made first three times, he failed to steal. Corns, Killilea and Murphy had one each. Rowan had the only one for the Petes.

Byrnes tore a nail from a finger of his throwing hand in Wednesday's game, and the injury still bothers him.

The Petes' leader attempted a daring play in yesterday's game, when after stealing second, and sacrificed to third by Swartz, he tried to steal home. He went out on a close decision.

Umpire Davis again gave Ottawa the rough side of several decisions and evoked thousands of hisses and hoots from the crowd. He refused to give Draper the benefit of any doubt and was rather generous in this respect with Schaeffer.—Ottawa Citizen.

GUN CLUB

The regular shoot of the Peterborough Gun Club was held last evening, and some good scores were made. The competition was especially keen, as Mr. H. Cook had contributed a silver spoon for the highest score. The scores at 52 birds each were:

A. Adair	19
J. Loucks	19
C. Mills	19
H. Cook	18
C. Wood	17
H. Dinsdale	10
C. Leach	10
C. James	9
E. C. Boswell	7

In shooting-off the ties Mr. C. Mills claimed the prize. The next regular shoot will be Thursday, July 4th.

Care of False Hair.

If neglected the most costly bought hair is soon worthless—worse, disease breeding. The puffs, switch or transformation should be brushed as carefully as the real hair and as often. The best way to do it is to put a towel on the lap or table and, spreading the piece on it, brush with a rubber backed boar bristle brush; well one side, then the other. This removes tangles and does not tear the hair, as does a comb.

ALL SAINTS AND ST. JOHN'S TO PLAY LEAGUE GAME AT OVAL

There is plenty of interest in the Church Football League, despite the fact that the Knox team have won four straights. The Baptists who have been coming along at a lively pace have one game to play against the leaders and are looking for a win. All Saints' and St. John's are billed to play at the Oval to-morrow evening at 6.15 and with the Anglicans winning there is a possibility of a three cornered tie.

Manager Tommy Moffat will line-up his team as follows:

Goal—R. Evans.
Backs—Gamble and Bishop.
Half Backs—Vickers, Summonite, Hawthorne.
Forwards—Curtis, Edwards, Sharman, T Williams and Dixon.
Spares—Bills and Smith.

The League standing is:

	W.	L.	To Play
Knox	4	0	2
Park St.	3	1	2
All Saints	1	2	3
St. Johns	0	4	2

LONDON THIRD SACKER IS FINED

Is Also Suspended From Play For Two Days

Berlin, June 20.—President Fitzgerald of the Canadian League, was an interested spectator at to-day's Berlin-London game, and witnessed the unseemly behavior of the London team. He fined Third Baseman Powell of London $10, and suspended him for two days for striking at Umpire Cancella. The umpire had already fined the player $20.

President Fitzgerald had come to look over the work of Cancella and his presence in the stand was unknown to the London team.

London has protested the game won by Berlin on Wednesday, alleging that Cancella had made a bet on the outcome.

In the Highest Degree Profitable

Some men figure that as the mercury climbs up sales will fall down. And figuring that way, fate is kind and does not disappoint them.

So there has grown up a commercial superstition that Summer is a dull season.

No greater fallacy has ever gone so long unchallenged.

Summer is a dull season for many lines—but there is no fundamental reason why it should be.

For instance, take a typical case—that of the Canadian wallpaper manufacturers.

They wished to secure their placing orders from the retailers before the early Fall—when American lines are offered. Through education by Advertising, they advanced the season to start the middle of June, instead of the end of August, and they now beat their foreign competitors to the market by nearly three months.

Perhaps you face a selling problem that education by Advertising will solve. Perhaps your Summer business needs the tonic of Summer Advertising.

As the mercury climbs up to its highest degree, increase, rather than slacken, your Advertising and selling efforts. You will find it profitable—in the highest degree.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any recognized Canadian advertising agency, or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503 Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write, if interested.

HEAVY FINES FOR ILLEGAL SALE OF LIQUOR

Millbrook, June 21.—For having more liquor on his premises than the law alows in local option districts, Robert Hutchinson, of Cavan, was fined $100 and for dispensing liquor on Sunday, contrary to he law, he was further assessed $300. Costs were included in both cases. This is the heaviest fine that has been imposed for a contravention of the law in respect to the sale of liquor, for some time. The district has been on the local option map for a number of years, and during that time numerous reports of the illicit sale of liquor have been received by the inspectors.

The liquor which was seized on the premises in connection with the above case, was committed to a neighboring creek.

DEGREE OF D.D. FOR BROTHER OF REV. J. R. WEBB

The Toronto Globe says: — Rev. George T. Webb, a graduate of McMaster University, and for several years pastor of Parkdale Baptist church in this city, was honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity a week ago to-day at Denison University, Ohio. An interesting co-incidence was that his two sons, Willis and Stafford, were graduated there the same day. One of the young men graduated with B. A., and the other as B. Sc.

Dr. Webb is at present Editorial Secretary of the American Baptist Publication Society, and is doing a splendid work. Denison is one of the oldest and best Baptist schools in America. A brother of Dr. Webb is a pastor of a charge in Peterborough.

FREE BOARD AT POLICE STATION

Chief Says Woman is Afraid to Live With Prisoner

Alfred Aston, arraigned on a vagrancy charge at Police Court to-day said that he had been ill owing to having had an operation. The last six or seven nights he had slept at the police station, lacking better accommodation.

Chief Thompson stated that the man drove his wife from him by threats, and she is afraid to return and live with her husband.

The man appeared to have seen better days. His case was remanded until June 28th.

A lumber jack answering to the name of Thomas Clarry, was fined $2 after pleading guilty to being drunk last night.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS HAD JOLLY EXCURSION

The Knights of Columbus spent an afternoon in the open yesterday, running an excursion to Jubilee per steamer "Stoney Lake." The society turned out well and spent a jolly time.

At Jubilee something spectacular in the sporting line was pulled off, although it is almost an injustice to recount it. The big event was a three-innings game supposed to have been baseball, between the married men and the single ones. The single men simply smothered their unfortunate brothers, and when the dust had settled the score read 24—5 in favor of the bachelors. The conflict was umpired by J. P. Downes, of Ogdensburg, N.Y., and Mr. Harry Phelan.

Next in importance in the sporting events was a fifty yards' sprinting race, the parties matched being the (Hon.) James J. Lynch, known to his friends as "Jimmy," and License Commissioner Richard Sheehy. Both speed artists ran a neck and neck event, crossing the tape together, so the judges claimed. "Jimmy," however, was under the impression he was first, but could not be sure, having closed his eyes when near the finish.

Outside these two events, the trip was a success in every way. A generous supper was served at Jubilee by Host Gilman. The excursionists reached home early in the evening.

NORMAL SCHOOL TERM FINISHED

The 1911-12 term of the Normal School came to an end yesterday, and the students are the guests of the Faculty in a trip to the lakes.

The valedictory was read at the last meeting of the Literary Society.

LET ALL THE FLAGS FLY

All patriotic citizens are requested to evidence the fact by assisting in decorating their houses and places of business for the big Dominion Day celebration, and not leave this entirely to the committee of arrangements. The merchants in particular are urged to take this matter up.

RUNAWAY WAS SOON CAUGHT

Another runaway occurred this morning at about 8.30 on the corner of Hunter and Bethune streets. The horse attached to T. Anthony's fruit rig bolted. It swerved around and ran across the street but was caught by a milkman. Beyond a pair of twisted shafts and some spoiled fruit the damage was slight.

FINAL SERMONS BY REV. MR. HENDERSON

Rev G. W. Henderson will conclude his pastorate at Charlotte st. church on Sunday, June 23.

C. G. E. GETS BIG ORDER FROM THE TOWN OF CAMPBELLFORD

The Power Question in That Place Has Been Settled by a Satisfactory Arrangement Made With the Dominion Government.

The C.G.E. Company has received an order to install the new power plant in Campbellford.

When Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals was in Campbellford recently, and the removal of the dam was decided upon he had a conference with the leading manufacturers and business men of that place with regard to what the government had to offer in the way of exchange. The result of that conference has just been made public.

Mr. S. J. Moore, manager of the Trent Valley Woollen Manufacturing Company, Campbellford, say that the power question, in so far as his company is concerned, is satisfactorily settled

The Government has agreed to pay full cost of installation necessary for the change and the engineers are there making necessary preliminary arrangements. Almost all the electrical machinery required for the plant has been ordered from the Canadian General Electric Company of Peterboro. It is expected that the installation will be complete by July 15th.

It is understood that all the other concerns interested have been given a settlement on the same basis as the Trent Valley. Full details of the agreement will be published later.

In view of the Seymour Power Company offering to supply power free for the water privileges at Ranney Falls, it is altogether likely they will furnish the power for the industries concerned in the deal.

WEDDING BELLS

McLEAN—FLAVELLE.

At two o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Cambridge street Methodist church, Lindsay, was solemnized the marriage of Edith Lillian, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs J. D. Flavelle and Mr. James Stanley McLean, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Macmillan, D.D. of Halifax, brother-in-law of the bride, assisted by Rev. S. J. Shorey, D.D., pastor of the church.

The bride who was attended by her cousins, Miss Jean Flavelle, of Lindsay, and Miss Clara Flavelle, of Toronto, as bridesmaids, and her sister, Miss Ethel Flavelle as maid of honor, and her niece, Miss Katherine Flavelle as flower girl, entered the church to Lohengrin's wedding march, sung by Mrs. Wallace Barrett of Toronto, Mrs. B. L. McLean and Mrs. Wm Dundas, of Lindsay.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in white liberty satin, trimmed with lace and pearls, the long court train covered with the bridal veil, which was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids, while the bridesmaids and maid of honor were dressed alike in blue liberty satin with veils of blue ninon. The flower girl was sweet in white with pink ribbons and daisies.

Mr. and Mrs. McLean left on the evening train for Quebec, to sail for England on the S. S. Laurentia Saturday.

Buying Bonds on the Instalment Plan

You may become a bondholder under our Periodical Payment Plan in precisely the same manner that you become a savings bank depositor—by putting aside money as you can spare it.

Under this plan you may purchase from us the Bond or Bonds that most strongly appeal to you as an investment suited to your purposes, by making a small initial payment and paying the remainder in monthly instalments to suit your income.

In this manner you become a bondholder at once without having to save the face value of the Bonds you want to purchase—and you receive the interest on the Bonds while paying for them.

We should be glad to submit a list of leading Canadian investment securities which yield from 5% to over 6%, which may be purchased on this Periodical Payment Plan.

Appointed Health Officers.

Toronto, June 20.—Three appointments have been made by Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary to the Provincial Board of Health as the result of three of the former members leaving to take positions as district officers of health. The new appointees are Dr. E. A. Weagant, Ottawa; Dr. Thomas Kaiser, Oshawa, and Dr. Henry Casgrain, Windsor. The former members, whose vacancies they fill, are: Dr. Clinton, Belleville; Dr. Bentley, Sarnia, and Dr. Maloney, Cornwall. These physicians were appointed district medical health officers two weeks ago.

The Provincial Board of Health holds quarterly meetings, and its six members, not including the chairman, Dr. McCullough, head of the Provincial Health Department, receive a salary of $300 a year and all expenses.

Precocious.

Small boys have a way of listening to remarks that older persons make and using them when least expected. A mother was surprised the other day to have her young son reply to her when she was reproving him for some trifling misconduct: "Well, mamma, you must put up with me. You know I'm just at the trying age."

No, He Wasn't.

He—And did you call at Monte Carlo while you were at Nice? She—No. Papa called on him, I believe, but from his disappointed appearance when he returned to the hotel I think Mr. Carlo must have been out.—London Telegraph.

LINKED IN GENIUS.

Great Fathers Who Gave to the World Great Sons.

THE QUESTION OF HEREDITY.

Science Asserts That Genius Is Not Transmissible, Yet Here Are Numerous Brilliant Exceptions, Both Ancient and Modern, to That Dictum.

An allusion by Henry W. Lacy, an acute judge of contemporary notables, to Winston Spencer Churchill as a born parliamentarian in whom the genius of his father, Lord Randolph Churchill, lives again and who may yet prove to overshadow the fame of Lord Randolph, even as William Pitt eclipsed the renown of Lord Chatham, moves Thomas McCaleb, in the New York American, to say:

"We are prompted by these allusions to ask ourselves the well worn query, Is genius transmissible? And, though the most authoritative latter day dictum of science answers in the negative, there are not a few noteworthy exceptions that involuntarily occur to the mind.

"Might we not, first of all, cite from among the ancients such fathers and sons respectively as Philip of Macedon and Alexander the Great, Hamilcar and Hannibal, Marcus Junius Brutus and Lucius Junius Brutus, Vespasian and Titus? Also we find genius resident both in Pepin and his offspring, Charlemagne, to which case might be added, did space permit, the few great medieval English kings who were also the sons of great kings. Nor should we omit to mention the poets Bernardo Tasso and his progeny, Torquato Tasso; also the great Nicholas Bacon and the still greater Francis Bacon. Indeed, the list might be multiplied to an appreciable figure by taking an extended tour in universal biography. There are, besides, quite a number of fathers and their sons possessed of such extraordinary talent that they might, by slightly stretching a point, be likewise called men of genius.

"In the biographies of great Germans we see this fact especially creeping out now and then, and in France, to mention only three cases, we find genius exemplified in such a sire and offspring as Etienne Saint-Hilaire Geoffrey and Isidore Saint-Hilaire Geoffroy, as Lazare Hippolyte Carnot and Sadi Carnot and as Alexandre Dumas pere and Alexandre Dumas fils.

"Quite rich in illustration of the apparent hereditary transmission of genius is the list among Englishmen. Here, confining our examples to those whose fame belongs to the last century, we may select at random such names as Sir William Herschel and Sir John Frederick William Herschel, astronomers; George Canning, orator and prime minister, and Charles John Canning (earl), first viceroy of India; Edward Bulwer, Lord Lytton, novelist, and Robert, Lord Lytton (Owen Meredith), poet; James Mill, philosopher and historian, and John Stuart Mill, economist; Isaac Disraeli, author, and Benjamin Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield, statesman and novelist; Gabriel Rossetti, poet, and Dante Gabriel Rossetti, poet and painter; Thomas Arnold, educator and historian, and Matthew Arnold, poet and critic; Justin McCarthy, politician and historian, and Justin Hnntly McCarthy, advocate.

"In American biography we find the names of such famous fathers and sons respectively as Increase Mather and Cotton Mather, theologians; John Adams and John Quincy Adams, both presidents and statesmen; 'Light Horse' Harry Lee, patriot, and Robert E. Lee, soldier; General Zachary Taylor and General Richard Taylor; Joseph Story, jurist, and W. W. Story, sculptor; Oliver Wendell Holmes, humorist and poet, and Oliver Wendell Holmes, jurist; Louis Agassiz and Alexander Agassiz, naturalists; Nathaniel Hawthorne and Julian Hawthorne, writers of fiction; Thomas Crawford, sculptor, and Marion Crawford, novelist; Henry George and Henry George, Jr., economists; the two George Innesses, landscape painters; Henry James, the most famous of the Swedenborgians, and his son and namesake, the gifted novelist.

"That the genius of interpretation, a truly great art, may betimes be inherited would appear from the instances of such great actors and their sons respectively as Junius Brutus Booth and Edwin Booth, Sir Henry Irving and Henry B. Irving, the two Salvinis, Tommaso and Alessandro, and both Coquelin pere and fils.

"It is observable from the examples recorded in this article that the genius of fathers and sons ofttimes manifests itself in the same sphere of endeavor, either of them approximating or excelling, as the case might be, the fame or excellence of the other.

"It goes without saying that illustrations, perhaps far more numerous, might be given to prove the contention of the best recent scientific thought—namely, that mental attributes are not inheritable. For all that we believe we have produced a sufficient number of concrete exceptions to affirm that in this particular the late dictum of science, which, of course, is never empirical, is not altogether and absolutely conclusive."

Worse.

"How would you like to have death staring you in the face?"

"Humph! Did you ever come home late and have your wife stare at you?"—Satire.

WHAT CANADIAN EDITORS SAY OF THE MARRIAGE CASE

Consensus of Editorial Opinion is that the Decision is Satisfactory as Clearing up all Doubts on the Subject of the Validity of Mixed Marriages—Some Hold That no Further Legislation is Absolutely Required.

No Canadian paper has so far expressed editorially the slightest dissatisfaction with the decision of the Supreme Court on the marriage question, all practically being of the opinion that the object of the Lancaster Bill has really been attained, and that the status of married couples throughout the Dominion is now established beyond question. Some editorial extracts from our exchanges are appended:

Hamilton Spectator.

The ne temere decree may be binding within the church; it is of no effect outside that sphere.

If this is true, in the opinion both of the Canadian Supreme Court and of the Imperial Privy Council there will be an end of such proceedings as led to the Hebert case, and the case of the daughter of Father Chiniquy. No one will be allowed to call a marriage illegal and its fruits illegitimate in the eyes of the secular law or of society, because they may be so in the eyes of one church.

MAKE CIVIL MARRIAGES LEGAL.

Hamilton Herald.

It is conceivable that conditions may be developed which will make it desirable to have a federal law providing for the legality of purely civil marriage in any part of the Dominion—or even a law making a civil contract necessary to the legality of marriage and leaving it optional with the contracting parties to have their nuptials solemnized with religious ceremonies, or to dispense with such solemnization, as they may see fit. In order that Parliament may get power to make such a law, the B.N.A. act would have to be amended.

THE GOVERNMENT VINDICATED.

Ottawa Citizen.

There will be an appeal, in legal course, from this decision to the Imperial Court of the Empire. Should this result in the court's decision being upheld it will be not only ample vindication of the course of the government in submitting to the final legal test the constitutionality of the Lancaster Bill, but will serve also to direct to the more drastic route of constitutional amendment those who think that upon this as upon other questions vital to the public interest the enactment of 1867 is obsolete or inadequate.

PROVINCIAL RIGHTS UPHELD.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Outside of Quebec the decision will probably be received with a fair measure of general satisfaction. It upholds the principle of provincial rights, and at the same time safeguards the validity of marriage.

MARRIAGE LAW SHOULD BE PLAIN.

Montreal Star.

Any Church is within its privileges when it lays down the conditions of marriage for its own people; and there cannot be the remotest desire on the part of Protestants, who recall that the very basis of their "protesting" is the "freedom of the individual conscience," to interfere with the domestic regulations of the Roman Catholic Church. But when we come to the civil side of the marriage certainly the law should be as plain and as fixed as the Decalogue.

THE TROUBLE IS ENDED.

Ottawa Evening Journal.

The trouble is ended, unless the Privy Council finds differently—which is extremely unlikely—or unless the Quebec Legislature starts to tinker with its marriage law in the interests of the Catholic Church, which is also extremely unlikely.

WOULD PRESS THE APPEAL.

Montreal Witness.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Canada on a three to one division from which the Chief Justice stood aside is that marriages between two Roman Catholics performed by a minister of any religion is legal and binding. This is good news, but not final. The decisions in the province on concrete cases stand five to three against this divided opinion on a stated case. The appeal from this to the Privy Council should be pressed as speedily as possible.

KOREANS ARE GLUTTONS.

Always Ready to Eat and Always Gorge Themselves When They Can.

The Koreans appear to be the greatest eaters in the world. To this the Japanese, French, English, Dutch and Chinese all bear witness. All reports concerning the Korean capacity for food seem to agree. In this respect there is not the least difference between the rich and the poor, the noble and the plebeian. To eat much is an honor in Korea, and the merit of a feast, it would seem, consists not so much in the quality as in the quantity of the food served. Little conversation occurs during the Korean meal, for each sentence might lose a mouthful. A Korean is always ready to eat. He attacks whatever he meets with and rarely cries "Enough!" Even between meals he will help himself to anything edible that is offered.

The ordinary portion of a laborer is about a quart of rice, which when cooked makes a good bulk. This, however, is no serious hindrance to his devouring double or treble the quantity when he can get it. Eating matches are common. When an ox is slaughtered and the beef is served up a heaping bowl of the steaming mess does not alarm any guest. When fruits, such as peaches or small melons, are served it is said that they are devoured without peeling. Twenty or thirty peaches are deemed an ordinary allowance per person and rapidly disappear. Such prodigality in food is, however, not common, and for one feast there are many fastings. The Koreans are neither fastidious in their eating nor painstaking in their cooking. Nothing goes to waste. All is grist that comes to the mill in their mouths.—New York Press.

THE REVIEW'S NEW STORY

The Diamond Cipher

A Baseball Romance

By W. A. Phelon

CHAPTER I.

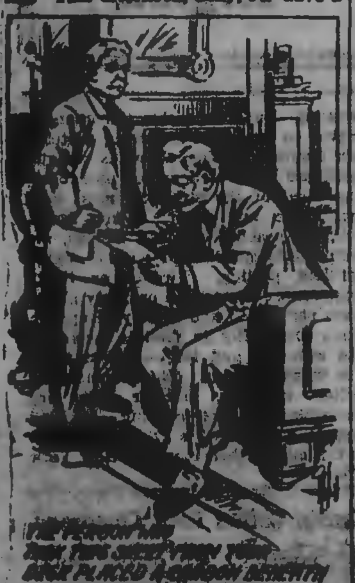
"No use, Mr. Pinkwell, no use at all. I am beginning to believe what Von Schimmel, the German expert, said in this room two weeks ago. He maintained that there was never yet a cipher formulated that the genius of deductive energy could not solve, nor a cipher so guarded that it could not fall into hostile hands."

The able head of the secret service bureau almost snarled with vexation as he spoke, while the gray-mustached veteran in the huge leather chair looked at him sympathetically, but gave no sign of his emotions. Pacing up and down the border of a Pueblo rug, Chief Wilkins tore up a few fragments of note-paper, and resumed his monologue.

"I don't know where the leak is, but I do know that there's a leak large enough to let 60 per cent. of the war department's pet secrets go trickling through. That's why I am working with every bit of energy and every available man to help in the time of need—doing things that the secret service hasn't concerned itself with since 1865. That's why I am asking you to come into the hunt, you and the best men of your agency. I don't mind telling you that I shall commandeer the Barnes agency, too, Mr. Pinkwell, and I think that when it is a problem that concerns the policies and destinies of the whole nation there will be no professional jealousies between you."

"Emphatically none," growled Pinkwell, setting his square jaw. "Bring Barnes right into this room, and Camera-Eye Sherratton too, if you can get him. I'll confer with them like an older brother; I'll lend them the best men on my payroll, and I know that they will do as much for me if the good old U. S. A. can be helped in any way."

Chief Wilkins' angry face relaxed its frown. He crossed to the big chair and shook the old detective's hand with cordial vigor. "Spoken as I thought you'd say it," he chuckled. "Spoken as old Billy Pinkwell would always speak when time and circumstances called for real men to stick together. Barnes will be here tomorrow. He'll bring his bloodhound Sherratton along with him, and we can thrash things out during the morning. This afternoon, Billy, I'll have a little talk with you. We can exchange secrets of state without interruption—there won't be any cipher messages exchanged or stolen on the way."



THE PERSON WHO TOOK THIS SHEET FROM YOUR DESK PLACED A CARBON BENEATH IT AND TRACED "YOUR WRITING."

Pinkwell carefully distributed the ash of his short, thin, pale yellow cigar upon a red design of the Pueblo rug.

"Suppose you tell me about the cipher messages, chief?" he suggested. "Inform me in full as to your troubles. Open confession is good for the soul, as I told the fellow who blew the Southwick bank."

"Did he agree with you, Pink?"

"Not exactly. He said open safes were good for the wallet, and gave me the lightsome ha ha. Tell you about him some day—he was the fellow who opened safes with a surgeon's stethoscope. Some class to him."

"Tell me at dinner. Maybe he's the boy who has been pilfering our ciphers. When did he get out?"

Pinkwell laughed grimly.

"I imagine it would take as clever a performer to read a government cipher," he responded, "but this lad has eight years, five months and fifteen days still to go, allowing for good conduct. But come on—come through with the cipher story. Have the handwriting experts been turning tricks with the war department messages?"

"Emphatically yes. Two-thirds of the orders to the troops in the field along the Mexican border have been translated, either in transit or before leaving Washington. Telegraph, wireless, sealed letter by trusted hands—some one gets to the more important messages. The ciphers have been changed, reversed, revamped, invented brand new by the most scientific experts—"

"Who very probably sold out their process inside of an hour after transacting business with the war department," Pinkwell interjected.

"No. Hardly. Because—" and Wilkins almost snorted as he forced out the words—"I personally invented the latest cipher used—cooked it up from ancient Greek, my old college trigonometry and sixty words of the Comanche tongue, learned when I spent a vacation at Fort Sill. You'd think that would be some cipher, Billy, some cipher. It held them for two days—then I found good evidence that it had been translated."

"By whom, and for whom?"

"Billy, there's the toughest problem in the whole blamed affair. I can't even state, definitely, which government to accuse. All I know is that our army orders, our Mexican policy, and I don't know what else besides are being continually relayed to an unfriendly power, and I can't actually name the power."

"The process of elimination," said the old detective, slowly, "should easily demonstrate the location of the leak, and the power to which such a leak is valuable. Which do you really figure in the equation—yellow men or wooden shoes?"

"Yellow men or wooden sh— oh blazes!" snapped the chief. "I am a slow thinker today. Probably at all times, or I would have ended this whole business without calling for outside help. As you are perfectly aware, there are fifty reasons why Germany would be glad to keep in touch with our Mexican policy, and would pay well for our secret ciphers. Then, if you look at it in another light, there are just as many reasons for Japan to grasp every chance of keeping close watch upon our troops, our naval movements and our general dealings with all other nations. I can't fix it rightly—I can't definitely assert that there is a cordon of Japanese spies from here to Los Angeles, with an intelligence bureau which can both obtain and interpret every cipher we have ever constructed. Neither can I say that there is a German system of the same pattern—I am, as yet, beautifully checked at all points. I have only this moral certainty: Nothing goes out of Washington concerning the movements of fleets or armies without heavy risk of transcription and interpretation by our enemies. There are only two avenues open—you can easily guess them both."

"Either find the leak—or devise a cipher that even a Japanese or German scientist cannot take apart and reassemble."

The chief nodded emphatically.

"If we found the leak, we would stop the source of information—for a little while. If we devised an undecipherable cipher, we could make monkeys of either kaiser or mikado until our plans had matured, and our hands could not be forced on either the Atlantic or Pacific. After that, we could ferret out the leak at leisure."

"Exactly," assented Pinkwell. "Then you think it would be best for my office to make some sort of bluff at digging up the guilty parties, while you devote your energies to the construction of a cipher that not even such a man as—well, we will say Von Schimmel—could possibly disentangle?"

The chief's nod was more emphatic than before.

"I have thought of asking the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy to join us in formulating a new cipher. Among us, we might possibly turn out something that would be too much for the wisest fellow that ever combined or subtracted words and letters."

"Something like the Dancing Men in the Sherlock Holmes story?" queried the detective, with a reminiscent smile.

"That idea," returned the chief—"a tiny dancing figure, in a different position to represent each letter, was original and clever. You will remember, though, that it was finally turned into plain English, without much difficulty. I almost think Von Schimmel was right—that there is no cipher which cannot be read by the expert delver into such fascinating subjects. Still, something must be done, and done in a hurry."

"Hurry is the proper word," assented Pinkwell. "You will have to get busy as rapidly as your affairs will let you."

Wilkins turned, opened a desk drawer, and began to fumble inside.

"I was experimenting on a cipher this morning," he explained. "Nothing complete, and nothing elaborate. Penciled it out, for a half hour's diversion. Here—see if you can read it."

Pinkwell took the sheet, inspected it for an instant, and then turned it over. "I don't think I can read your hieroglyphs on short notice, John," he remarked, suavely. "Still, I think the person who took this sheet from your desk, placed a carbon beneath it, and then traced your writing with a No. 2 pencil will be able to do so, or will find some one who can."

The chief seized the paper, held it to the light, and stared through a magnifying glass. Crumpling up the sheet, he flung it into the waste basket, only to have the detective fish it out, smooth it neatly, and tuck it into his pocketbook. The chief, almost inarticulate with wrath, examined the desk, the drawer, the keyhole, and finally sat down disgusted and disgruntled.

"Forget it, John," admonished Pinkwell. "Forget it absolutely. Don't let a clerk or stenographer in the office see you with as much as a scowl upon your lovely countenance. Send some one—some one you think you can talk pleasantly to at this annoying moment—to the esteemed secretaries. Don't use the phone."

A push-button buzzed shrilly. The door of the private office opened, and a tall young fellow, with a much-tanned face and a shock of tangled brown hair, stepped in.

"Did you call me, Mr. Wilkins?" he asked, respectfully.

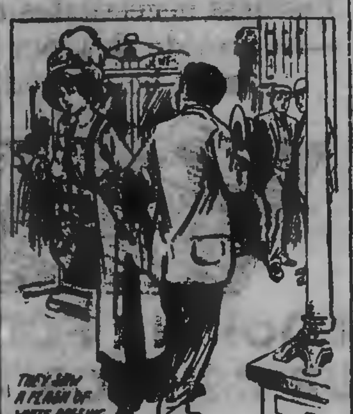
The chief looked him over rapidly. "Are you the only clerk remaining this afternoon?"

"Yes, sir. Everyone else went away at four."

"Uh huh. Gone to the ball park as usual, I presume?"

"Yes, sir. Good game today. The White Sox are here, and—"

"Never mind about the White Sox, or the Pink Ear-Muffs either," growled the chief. "You are as bad as the rest of them—how does it happen you are not going out to the game?"



THEY SAW A FLASH OF WHITE PASSING FROM THE GIRL'S HAND INTO THAT OF HER ATHLETIC FRIEND.

"Fact is, Mr. Wilkins, I expected to meet a few friends, and have a little practice of our own this afternoon."

"Uh huh. I might have known there was some earth-shaking reason for your not disappearing with the rest. Well, can you forego a few minutes of your valuable time, even if it is after office hours?"

The boy bobbed an assenting head, tried to thrust the red cap into a pocket, and dislodged some folded papers, which fell rustling to the floor. As he bent for the papers, Pinkwell anticipated his hurried grasp, and caught them up. The detective calmly unfolded the papers, finding them covered with some freakish letterings, while the boy turned red, and the chief looked quizzically on.

"I beg your pardon," spoke up Pinkwell. "I earnestly beg your pardon for such rudeness, Mr.—Mr.—"

"Brockett, sir. Harry Brockett," answered the youngster.

"I apologise once more, Mr. Brockett. I have grown so suspicious of everything and everyone in my old age that I really imagined these papers were plans of a Pacific fort, or the details of the new rifle. Translation of an Aztec scroll, son?"

"Well, hardly, sir," laughed young Brockett, self-confidence returning. "I was amusing myself with building a cipher—something that would be rather hard for anyone who wasn't engaged in the building of it to make out."

The grim face of the chief relaxed into a semi-smile.

"How did the experiment work out?"

Brockett grinned frankly. "I'm no expert practitioner in such subjects, Mr. Wilkins. Still, I think it would take a pretty capable scientist to pick it apart and put it together again. He'd have to be an American, too—or possibly a Cuban."

"Why so?" questioned Pinkwell. "Is the cipher written in Spanish?"

"No, sir. Plain English. Would you like to go over it, some time when you have a little leisure?"

"Always glad to encourage youthful talent," smilingly responded Pinkwell. "Let me look through it tonight, son? Thank you. And now, I believe, Mr. Wilkins would address you."

"Just a small errand, Mr. Brockett. Kindly run over to the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy. Ask them if they can come over here within the next hour. Then go and attend to your baseball difficulties with a clear conscience. That's all."

Brockett was opening the door, when Pinkwell reached out a detaining hand. "Son," remarked the old detective, "this cipher of yours is certainly bewildering. That is supposed to be the best point about successful ciphers, I believe. Tell me, my boy—can you read it yourself?"

"Why, of course. It is so simple that I don't even need a written key."

"Indeed? Suppose you demonstrate it to us, just for a moment. Are you agreeable, chief?"

"Go as far as you like, Billy," the chief assented. "I'll confess—considering our conversation of a little while ago—that I'm interested too. Mr. Brockett, suppose you write, in your cipher, a transcription of a few words I will give you and then let us try to dissect it?"

The young fellow took the chair at which the chief motioned, drew a pencil from his pocket, and ripped the top sheet from a paper pad. Chief Wilkins studied for a moment, and then dictated, slowly and concisely:

"Watch below Langtry till further orders. Reported force of 300 insurrectos near by."

Brockett wrote briskly for a few moments, and then handed the chief a strange conglomeration.

. . . .

Wilkins and Pinkwell gazed at that strange document for several minutes, with faces which changed from good-natured raillery to perplexity, and then to keenest interest. Young Brockett, hand upon the doorknob, waited for the verdict. The chief folded the slip of paper, and thrust it in a pocket.

"Shall I leave you the key to the cipher, Mr. Wilkins?" asked the youngster.

"No. We'll see what we can do with it just from the original dictation. On your way now, my boy—kindly tend to your errand. And—and—will you report to me, personally, half an hour before your usual time tomorrow?"

Brockett was almost across the threshold, when the voice of Pinkwell halted him.

"The Diamond Cipher, sir."

CHAPTER II.

Brockett, eager to conclude his errand and join his companions, lost no time on the road. By five o'clock the tall youngster was busily engaged in an argument, accompanied by practical demonstrations pro and con, as to the utility of the Lange steal. Some twenty of Brockett's friends—clerks like himself, collegians home on vacation, and even the two sons of a Siamese legation official—debated the practicability of the trick by which Big Bill Lange, the great star of the long ago, was wont to annex the middle station. Brockett and half the crowd maintained that the steal was not only possible but almost unstoppable; the Siamese youngsters and the rest of the little gathering declared that an alert battery, backed by quick-thinking infielders, would make the play a certain loser.

"You have a catcher with any head and any arm at all," declaimed Chula Lan Kon of Siam and Princeton, "and a second baseman who can come up fast to the bag, and you can't put it over. No chance excepting on a muff or a wild throw."

"You don't grasp the point," Brockett responded. "The catcher doesn't figure in this steal at all. He is a dead one. He is exactly as if he had never existed. The trick in the Lange steal is to stop on first till the pitch is over, and then, when the catcher begins to return the ball to the pitcher, you go down. It's three to one, easy, that the pitcher will get rattled and throw wide, or that the second baseman, not figuring on a steal, has moved away to play for the batsman."

"A pitcher who keeps his wits about him," negatived Ramon Solano, the junior cashier of the Cuban tobacco house, "wouldn't fall for that play at all. Try it, with me on the slab, and see how it goes through."

The experiment was immediately made. Chula Lan Kon, donning the mask, went behind the plate; Solano took a pitching attitude on the slab, and Brockett impersonated the daring base runner. Second was covered by a fast little infielder from Annapolis, and a Dartmouth shortstop prepared to take alternate throws. It took fifteen minutes to fully work out the theories of the Lange steal, and the sentiments of the whole throng were voiced when Chula Lan Kon remarked didactically, "If you make it, you are a hero, and if you don't make it you are a bone-head."

Darkness dispersed the crowd, and Brockett, dead tired but full of the sheer joy of living, strolled away with Ramon Solano—his chosen friend and confidant, and linked in comradeship by that strongest of youthful ties—the brotherhood of the ball field. Brockett was an underpaid clerk, doing his best to care for a widowed mother and a younger sister. Solano's father was the lord of broad acres in Matanzas and Havana, and the junior Solano had an independent income, aside from his liberal salary, that would have turned the brain of the average American boy. As far as the friendship went between Cuban and American, however, Solano's wealth counted exactly as much in the scale as Brockett's poverty: nothing whatever. The alliance cemented when both played on a team of ten-year-olds had only grown firmer with the lapse of time, until Ramon Solano, pitcher, considered Harry Brockett, center fielder, the finest fellow of his numerous acquaintance, while Brockett classed the Cuban as his most loyal friend.

"We go for a vacation to the Yellowstone," said Solano, as the boys neared Brockett's home. "My father, brother, and two or three friends will come over to get me—it will be a jolly crowd. If I could persuade you!"

Brockett laughed gayly. "Some day, Ramon, but hardly this year. If I stick to my desk, I'll climb up in the office. Probably, in thirty-six or forty-three years, I'll have a rolltop desk and the right to take two months off whenever I feel inclined that way."

"But I would—oh, well, we will talk no more of it. I know you wouldn't accept even a Shylock loan from me, Harry. Oh—excuse me—one of the young ladies at your office, I believe?"

A slim, neatly dressed young woman, whose white shirtwaist showed trimly through the gathering dusk, had smiled recognition upon Brockett as they approached. The boys doffed their hats, and Brockett explained, as they stepped by, "Miss Lawson, the chief's stenographer. A wonder on a typewriter—fastest work I've ever seen."

The Complete Lovemaker

A Book That Wasn't Written and the Reason Why.

By NANCY HAZLITT.

"I know my place, also my danger. You see, I have been hearing of you this long time," Grierson said, looking up at my lady with a lazy smile.

My lady had a way with her—it could be sharp and short when she chose. It could likewise be very meek. Now she set her finger tips together asking plaintively: "Mr. Grierson, is there nothing else you would as soon say? You are the ninth man to tell me that since I came to the picnic. I ought to feel my sins very deeply, but somehow I can't."

"Who says you have sins? I meant only your perfections," Grierson began, but she stopped him with a gesture of appeal.

"That's the very worst of all," she murmured. "You'll be telling me next that you came on purpose to see and be conquered. I do wish pretty speeches didn't run in ruts so much. If I could I'd write a book about them, telling men what not to say."

"I see! 'The Complete Lovemaker,'" Grierson answered, his eyes twinkling. "If you wrote from the riches of your experience I dare say the treatise would be most authoritative."

"There wouldn't be any treatise if I did that. You all say so much the same sort of foolishness," my lady came back at him, with just the least toss of her head.

My lady of course had a name, a pretty one—Elinor Clare. Only strangers and the older people ever called her Elinor. Somehow at school she had been rechristened "My Lady," and my lady she was likely to be to the end of the chapter.

A very pretty girl, with money to her name and much more money in prospect, withal sprightly and good hearted, she was easily the belle of the countryside. She had had beaus, indeed, before she was out of short frocks. One of them, who as a tall lad had carried her on his shoulder and cradled her asleep in his arms, was still constant, notwithstanding he was thrice eligible and the kindest, most unsuspicious soul alive.

Grierson had heard of him likewise. Indeed, Philip Darcy, the constant one, was, after a sort, his kinsman.

"Phil's the man you have got to beat," Grandfather Grierson had said in explaining the situation.

Grandfather liked my lady, but not nearly so well as he did her possessions. Therefore he had sent imperatively for Arthur, his grandson, and bidden him as imperatively court the girl and marry her.

Grandfather's was moneyed avarice, therefore the more eager. He had piled up a fortune and held on to it like grim death. Because his only son liked to spend money even better than to make it the old man excused his clutching—at least to himself.

Since that young gadabout Arthur had no knack of making money, being worse in that respect than his father, it was but right he should marry it. Grandfather Grierson said this over and over in so many keys and tenses Arthur had been tempted to run away before anything was begun. He would have run away, indeed, but for catching a glimpse of my lady. The glimpse refreshed his endurance and modified sensibly his estimate of grand-paternal wisdom.

"Suppose we write the book together," Grierson suggested valiantly. "I can make myself understood on the typewriter—can't say any more than that—but you—you have reams of wisdom, I'm sure, all ready to your hand. Do take me as secretary. I promise you shall find me willing and obliging, with no objection to long hours."

"I have a great objection to them. I couldn't stick at anything half a day unless it was to save my life," my lady confided, adding gayly: "I don't believe you could either. Confess! Don't you love to go and do the things you didn't intend?"

"Sometimes—only sometimes," Grierson said, smiling down at her. "This is one of them. I meant to ask consideration as a possible husband, yet see how you have reduced my soaring ambition!"

My lady met this with a look of wide eyed innocence and said appealingly: "Can't you understand I'm not the sort of girl you have to talk love to? There are so many other things better worth talking about."

"For instance, Philip Darcy?" Grierson said, with a keen glance.

My lady laughed joyously. "No, not Philip," she said. "I know him—all about him—more and better than anybody can tell me. He would be a saint on earth if he were not so much of a man."

"H'm! The most part of saints were men," Grierson supplemented. Then, most irrelevantly: "You have relieved my mind wonderfully. No girl of today can possibly love a saint. It is the weirdly wicked fellows who bowl over our sweethearts, even now and then our wives"—

"Dear me! And you are not weirdly wicked—just an ordinary sinner," my lady interrupted, her eyes twinkling merrily.

Grierson laughed. "Cry quarter!" he said. "You won't get me to admit I'm no match for you—that would be a bad precedent—but I will say I know when I've had enough. Now, to get back to the beginning, what about taking me on as amanuensis? I'm sure I gave myself a character, having nobody else to give it."

"A-man-u-ensis! That's a city word. I'm afraid of it," my lady said, dimpling sweetly.

Grierson shook his head at her, saying severely: "At this rate 'The Complete Lovemaker' will never get itself written. Think how the world needs it! We ought to begin work on it tomorrow."

Grierson forgot the carrying quality of his voice, even when, as now, he spoke very low. He further overlooked a slim creature in half mourning seated just beyond my lady.

Now the figure turned half about, saying, with pretty malice: "You could not have a better collaborator, Miss Clare. Arthur can give an example of a nice definition of every style of lovemaking yet invented." Then, throwing up a crape bordered veil: "You didn't expect to see me, Arthur. I know that very well. Indeed, I myself am surprised at being here, but Phil Darcy wrote me I had better come down and look after some investments."

There was a pause before the last word so significant it made my lady gasp. She turned red and white, staring helplessly from Grierson to the woman and only by a strong compulsion overcoming her impulse to run away.

It was a great relief to see Philip Darcy approaching—she almost ran to meet him, a question in her eyes. He answered it with a reassuring glance and turned to the pair, who stood eyeing each other uncertainly and in silence, saying as he stood in front of them:

"I think, Clorinda, it will be best on all accounts for you to announce your engagement to Grierson. Your scruples against it before you are out of mourning, of course, do you credit, but people down here are used to seeing widows courted, married almost, in their weeds. And nobody really knows how long your husband has been dead—whether it is a year or five makes no difference. I have just been telling Uncle Jack how the case stands"—

"Does he agree with you?" Grierson asked, his face averted.

Philip laughed. "Uncle Jack, like all the rest of us, is amenable to the logic of accomplished facts," he said. "But I don't think you'll find him very hard to fetch around. I told him also that Elinor was going to marry me early in the fall."

Mrs. Clorinda Markle, relict of the late Solomon, was not without a sense of humor. She held out her hand to my lady, saying with a frank smile: "We may flatter ourselves that 'The Complete Lovemaker' is in two editions, each limited to a single copy. I shall keep mine henceforth under lock and key. How about yours?"

"I don't think mine will permit itself to be stolen," my lady said, taking the offered hand. "I have been engaged since I was five. If in fifteen years Philip has not repented of his bargain it seems he is to be trusted to know his own mind."

Clorinda tried to speak, to say something lightly flippant, but her lips trembled, and a troublesome lump rose in her throat. She took Grierson's nerveless arm and walked away, her head high, but her eyes dim behind her veil. Darcy looked after the pair compassionately, saying, "She is too good for him."

"But she doesn't think so. Let us hope she never will," my lady answered eagerly.

Darcy looked down at her, smiling happily.

Wonderful Erosion.

A curious effect of the wear and tear to which the earth's crust is ever being subjected is exhibited in the singularly capped pinnacles existing on South river, in the Wasatch mountains, in Utah. There are hundreds of these slender pillars, ranging in height from 40 to 400 feet, most of them crowned by large caps of stones. They are not works of human art, as might be imagined, but are the memorial monuments of the hill from which they have been cut by the action of air and water. Those pinnacles alone remain of many square miles of solid rocks which have been washed away to a depth of some 400 feet. The greater hardness of the surface has caused it to resist corrosion more than the underlying rock, thus leaving huge caps of stone perched high in air on the points of their columns. One double column capped by a single stone forms a natural bridge both unique and picturesque.

When Wives Were Cheap.

There is living in Horsham, at the age of eighty-five, a remarkable old man called Henry Burstow—by hard necessity a shoemaker, by taste a singer of songs and a ringer of church bells. Even now he can sing any one of 400 songs that he knows by heart. Mr. Burstow occasionally re-enforces his memory with stories told him by his father and so can go back to 1820, when a man sold his wife at the November fair for 3s. 0d. He himself can well remember that in 1844 a lady known as "Pintoe Nanny" was brought into the market place with a halter around her neck and sold for 30 shillings to a man who parted with his watch to raise the price. Nanny changed hands again a year afterward and married one Jim Smith, with whom she lived happily ever afterward.—Westminster Gazette.

Life Insurance

Marriage is a good thing. It is a part of the duty every young man owes to his race and to the community. And one of the first duties after marriage, is life insurance. The young man of riches may scoff at this, but riches sometimes "take wings" while a life insurance policy in a sound company is something that is not affected by mischance or ill fortune. The young man who depends upon his own efforts for a living, more than any other young man, should follow marriage with life insurance, and thus provide surely for a wife, or for a wife and babies, against the inevitable. Such a young man may demur at this, on the theory that he "can't afford it." But youth is not inclined to consider all possibilities in such a case; Life insurance is one of the things that should be afforded at the expense of something less important. If a young man smokes, he surely can curtail his tobacco supply by one cigar a day, or he can save an equivalent by cutting off something else he does not need. The cost of a single medium price cigar a day will pay the premium on a life-insurance policy, say, for $1,000. And thus, by a slight concession as to a single habit, some necessary provisions may be made for the future.

You will find the most up-to-date policy of to-day issued by the SUN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

FARMERS SHOULD TAKE MORE INTEREST IN POLITICS

So Argued Mr. Burnham Before the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute—E. A. Peck, M.P.P. Speaks on the Question of Food Supply—Mr. Vincent Eastwood Opposed to Tariffs.

Favored with ideal weather conditions and a most encouraging and enthusiastic attendance, the annual meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute held yesterday afternoon, on the splendidly kept grounds of Mr. G. William Mann's farm in Smith, was pronounced to have been one of the most successful in its history. Dame Nature leagued with the efforts of the management, left nothing to be desired. Everybody who was there gained information of great value and what was more, everybody there had a downright good time. In some respects the occasion partook of the nature of a jolly picnicking party, the entire proceedings being held on the lawn surrounding Mr. Mann's comfortable rural residence. It was estimated that about one hundred people were there, nearly one half of whom were of the fair sex. The business part of the meeting was first discharged, in order that the speech making part of the program might be given undivided attention.

The president's report by Mr. J. H. Garbutt opened the program.

The report appeared to be highly satisfactory, no discussion being evoked, as provided for in the program. On motion of Messrs. Telford and Mann, the report was therefore received and adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Collins followed with the report of the Executive committee, and the Finance statement, which was received and adopted. This also included the auditors' report.

Time had been provided for a discussion or the reception of suggestions of points at which to hold the regular and supplementary meetings of the Institute this year. In the past, the regular meetings have been held at Ennismore and Lakefield, and the supplementary at Stewart's Hall, Otonabee, the 4th Line of Smith, Peterborough and North Monaghan. Mr. E.S. Hopkins, B.S.A., County District Representative of the Department of Agriculture, suggested holding the regular meetings as heretofore, but holding district meetings under Department of Agriculture auspices, in place of the supplementary meetings, wherever Department representatives are located. After some further discussion the matter of supplementary meetings was left in the hands of the Executive, to arrange dates and places of such meetings.

The most interesting part of the program came next, namely the election of officers for the ensuing year. Mr. J. H. Garbutt vacated the office of president, bearing many honors, his successor being one of the progressive and popular younger agriculturists of Smith, Mr. C.A. Moore. The appointment of Mr. Moore, followed Mr. Garbutt's refusal to again assume the duties, although pressed to do so, because, as he said, it was proper that younger blood should be introduced into the management of the Institute. Mr. Garbutt in giving up office, remarked that having been privileged to associate during his four year term as president, with those prominent gentlemen who had addressed the Institute gatherings, from year to year, he thought that it was time those privileges should be divided among the younger men in the Institute. He therefore moved that Mr. Moore be appointed president. The latter moved in amendment that Mr. Garbutt be appointed. Each secured a seconder, but when put to vote, the amendment lost, and Mr. Moore according assumed the president's position. In a neat and modest speech, Mr. Moore accepted the honor conferred upon him, promising to exert his best efforts for the benefit and advancement of the Institute. All those present, he felt, were interested in farming, and the Farmers' Institute meetings were assisting in the elevation and the betterment of every phase of the agricultural occupation. He asked the assistance of the farmers of West Peterbroough in helping along the cause of the Institute.

The young president was heartily applauded as he resumed his seat.

The office of vice-president, vacated by Mr. Moore, went to Mr. A. McGregor, the appointment being a popular one.

The only other individual office to be filled was that of secretary-treasurer. Mr. Collins, who has been always on the job for many years, expressed a wish to withdraw from harness this year and let a younger man have a hand at the work.

"I am getting tired," said Mr. Collins, "and have been on the turf for a long time.

Some one in the gathering told him that an old horse gets hardened to the turf, causing a general laugh. Mr. Collins was eventually prevailed upon, however, to accept the office for another year.

Mr. Garbutt, the retiring president, referred to Mr. Collins' good work in past years, stating that he was one man at least who was "always found on the job." There were no other nominations for secretary-treasurer, Mr. Collins, therefore, being declared elected amid hearty cheers.

At this juncture the secretary suggested that each member of the Institute endeavor to enlarge the membership by securing two new members.

The business then being concluded the president called on Mr. J. H. Burnham, the member for West Peterborough, for the opening address.

MR. BURNHAM'S ADDRESS.

Mr Burnham, in commencing, created a laugh when he said that he might not be much of a farmer, but he recognized a good-looking farmer's wife or daughter when he saw one, and that in itself had a great deal of recommendation.

Continuing, Mr. Burnham stated that he had often been much struck by the apparent apathy of the farmers with regard to what passed in Parliament. In the East Riding Mr J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., was doing everything he could to keep their interests before the House, and to secure for them the necessary assistance that could be granted by those who control the fund. The general trend of the taxes is toward the Federal treasury, and our interest, more or less, seems to cease. Mr. Burnham thought that more interest should be taken in getting the funds back to the people.

"Possibly this is due," said the speaker, "to the following conditions: A man's industrial capital may be $100,000. He may make $100,000 in one month, and if he sells for cash, will get his entire capital back in one month. By the end of a year he will have turned over his capital no less than twelve times, whereas the farmer turns over his capital but once in a year. That constitutes the vast difference between the industrial and the agricultural operations.

"What I want to impress upon you, therefore," proceeded the speaker, "is that the farming industry does not send enough good men to Parliament. The farmers of the country naturally want to know what is being put in the law, and you may have a man in Parliament who could not draw up an Act, but when his knowledge is wanted on farm topics he can give such information at once. The co-operation of farmers is absolutely necessary in Parliament.

"The farmers do not take the active interest in legislative methods as do the cities. Maybe this is due," said the speaker, "because the farmers are more independent, and more inclined to work out their salvation on the farm.

"But you have got to take a more intelligent and more active interest in the affairs of the country. If a meeting of manufacturers was called in industrial interests, there would be five hundred people to attend it, and go ahead, and it is this kind of spirit that should be shown by the farming industry.

"Send good farmers to Parliament, men who are not too lazy to work or take an active interest in things."

Mr. Burnham then went on to speak of the necessity of maintaining a sufficiently high tariff to keep up the principle of protection, and urged the Farmers' Institute to keep up the principle of a protective tariff in their meetings.

"Now is the time," he said, "for farmers to protest against any lowering of the tariff on agricultural products, or else conditions will go on, as they did in England, where the reduction of the tariff occurred."

Mr. Burnham's address was attentively heard, and was concluded amid applause.

H. B. COWAN.

H. B Cowan, the succeeding speaker, after congratulating the new president upon this appointment, gave an excellent account of the impressions he gathered from his recent trip to Texas.

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., who was present, was called upon for an address. The Provincial member expressed his pleasure at being permitted to spend an afternoon with the Institute in the country, free from the toils of the city—"for we do work sometimes in the city"—he added, causing a laugh. He was present also he said, to heartily endorse the work of the Farmers' Institute. There was no matter so important, he felt, as legislation which dealt with the production of food supply.

"We all want three meals a day at least," he said, "and some of us more than that, including a little liquid refreshment between times." Mr. Peck was not speaking personally.

It is only lately, he said, that Governments have found it necessary to deal with the question of food supply. Personally he advocated all legislation, that encouraged the farming avocation. The Government has appropriated considerable sums of money to be handed over to the provinces for this purpose, namely, development of agriculture in the province. The Ontario Government has also appropriated sums for its agricultural operations, such as agricultural farms, fairs, Womens Institutes and Farmers' Institutes. Two points emphasized by Mr. Peck were first, the necessity of arousing in farming communities interest in Farmers' Institutes' encouraging people to attend them to hear the practical lectures. Secondly, the prevention of people crowding to the cities, when they would be of more value on the farm.

Mr. E. S. Hopkins, B.S.A., was the next speaker called upon. He gave a very instructive address on the growing of alfalfa, speaking on the three varieties of it grown. There were the Colorado variety, the Grimm, and the Canadian variegated. The latter had been found to be the most useful and most satisfactorily grown.

Mr. Hopkins also spoke of the three varieties of potatoes known and of the efforts of the Department of Agriculture to interest the children of all rural schools in their cultivation. Eight of these schools had already taken the matter up.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, president of the Peterborough Board of Trade, made a very appropirate address, putting himself on record as opposing all tariffs.

"For myself, I think all tariffs are wrong," said Mr. Eastwood. I believe the greatest evils have come from our tariffs and their application.

After the speeches two large tables, laden with the good things which only the farm can produce, were fully sampled, on the spacious lawns. Everybody dug in and the affair wound up in a most enjoyable manner.

A vote of thanks was tendered by Mr. Mann to all those who had taken part in thre meeting, the motion being heartily seconded, after which the gathering dispersed.

WHEN THE COLONEL STARTED FOR THE BATTLE GROUND.

ROOSEVELT LEAVING NEW YORK FOR CHICAGO

As Colonel Roosevelt started from New York for the Convention City his managers sprang a sensation in Chicago by announcing that a negro delegate from Mississippi, who had been seated only twenty-four hours, had gone over from President Taft to the third term forces, returning to the Taft headquarters $300 of expense money.

The train on which Mr. Roosevelt travelled to Chicago struck a bowlder at Tarrytown and narrowly escaped a wreck. He is in personal charge of his campaign in the Convention City.

MONTREAL CLERICAL PAPER LOSES ITS LIBEL SUIT

Judge Greenshields Gives Mrs. Morin, Daughter of Late Father Chiniquy, Three Thousand Dollars' Damages—The Libel Was "Insulting, Humiliating and Malicious," Says the Judge in Delivering Verdict.

Montreal, June 22.—Judgment was handed down yesterday morning by Mr. Justice Greenshields in the Chiniquy libel suit. His lordship found for the plaintiff, and allowed $3,000 damages.

This was an action brought by Mr. Rebecca Morin, a daughter of the famous ex-priest and writer, Father Chiniquy, and wife of Prof. Morin of McGill University, against Joseph Begin, editor and publisher of the Roman Catholic weekly, La Croix, for $10,000 damages for libel. In an article on Chiniquy La Croix contended that, as he had taken vows of perpetual chastity, he could never legally marry, and that the woman he purported to marry was therefore only his concubine. Plaintiff contended that such a statement branded her as illegitimate.

The victory of plaintiff's lawyer, Gonsalves Desaulniers, K.C., must be very gratifying to him, as La Croix, which purports to be the organ of all devout Roman Catholics here, has bitterly criticised him from time to time for his connection with Le Pays, the organ of the advanced educationists in Quebec, of which he is part proprietor, and the famous French-Canadian Masonic body, Emancipation Lodge, in which he was a prime mover.

In giving judgment, Judge Greenshields said: "I hold then that the libel in La Croix was insulting and humiliating to Charles Chiniquy, his wife and daughter; that it was published without foundation, with a malicious disregard for the sensibilities of the plaintiff, and that defendant's action all through has been marked by flippant abandon. He persisted in his libel to the end."

"I grant the right of a paper," said the judge, "to refute the criticisms of any man whose teaching it disapproves of, but I do not grant the right of a paper to besmirch and vilify the memory of a dead man and to make gratuitous statements about his private life; and surely no attack, befouling the memory of a good woman, can ever be sanctioned by any reasoning. No publisher, be his paper Roman Catholic, Anglican, Presbyterian or Methodist, can say that, according to the laws of his church, such and such a woman is a concubine, and I trust that the defendant stands alone among his co-religionists in desiring to contend that he can.

"I cannot find any endorsation for his contention that, once a man is a Catholic he is always a Catholic, in the laws of the land. The civil law of the province gave the church certain rights in regard to the collection of tithes, but it did not give it a lien or mortgage on a man's conscience.

His lordship then came to the question of the assessment of damages. He said:

"I have taken into consideration the position in society of the plaintiff and the bitterness of the defendant's attack and his failure to use an elementary precaution, and find out whether any child of Chiniquy's might suffer from it, and I find for $3,000. The prayer of the plaintiff that defendant be imprisoned I will adjudicate upon at the proper time."

The 26th Regiment, marching from London to Goderich, has had a warm welcome in the villages and towns along the route, [illegible]

Thanks Electors.

Fredericton, N.B., June 22.—Premier Flemming, in a statement published in The Gleaner yesterday, and addressed to the people of New Brunswick, says: "I thank the Liberals all over the province who refused to obey the dictates of the Liberal machine and voted for honest government and a square deal. I promise on behalf of the Government our best efforts during the coming term, we will work unsparingly to give the province a prudent, progressive administration. Let us all unite in an effort for greater development, more progress and prosperity than our province has ever enjoyed."

To Study Canadian Law.

London, June 22.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Premier Asquith in receiving a deputation of the Associated Chambers of Commerce, said regarding industrial unrest, that he was unaware how far Canadians made a compulsory investigation before a strike or lockout was possible, but he intended having a careful enquiry into the workings of the Canadian laws and seeing if they were adaptable here.

BODIES NOT RECOVERED

Thorold, June 22.—Yesterday morning the gates were replaced in lock 22, just seventeen hours after the accident which cost three lives. The La Canadienne still lies in the same position. Credit is due Supt. Sullivan of the Welland Canal for the despatch with which he has got the lock into working order.

Directly the steamers Midland, Jacques and Britannic had been locked as far as lock 16, Mr. Sullivan ordered the waste weirs of locks 20, 21 and 22 at five o'clock to be emptied for the purpose of recovering the bodies of the little boys, Bretherick, Tiffany and Jack. Large crowds lined the canal banks yesterday in the expectation of the bodies coming to the surface. If they are recovered to-day, it has been arranged to hold a public funeral on Sunday.

The rush of water played great havoc with the waste weir banks on the side of several locks. Mr. Sullivan estimates the total damages to the locks at about $7,000.

Liberals Hold Holmfirth.

London, June 22.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the Holmfirth bye-election to fill the seat vacanted through H. J. Wilson's resignation, Arnold, Liberal, was elected with 4,749; Ellis, Unionist, got 3,379; Lunn, Labor, 3,196.

H. J. Wilson, Liberal, was elected unopposed to this Yorkshire seat in the last election.

Fleeced by Toronto Crooks.

Niagara Falls, June 22.—The police yesterday were investigating the report of L. Goodman and Henry Bowers, Philadelphia, that they were robbed of jewelry valued at $100 by the old game of matching pennies in Queen Victoria Park. The victims favor the police with descriptions of the two strangers who buncoed them, and the police believe the men to be Toronto race track gamblers.

Suffragette in Man's Clothes.

London, June 22.—Mrs. Wilcox, a suffragette leader, was discovered disguised in man's clothes at a home rule meeting in Bristol Thursday night. John Redmond, the Irish leader, was the principal speaker. The woman fared badly. She was ejected from the hall, and then a mob chased her through the streets, kicking and hustling her as they went along.

NEW ONTARIO CALLS FOR NEW COUNTRY ROADS AND RAILWAYS

Delegates From All Over the Ontario Hinterland Wait on Government.

Toronto, June 22.—Encouraging and cordial was the reception given the men of the north by Toronto and the Ontario Government. And if the main object of their visit was to secure publicity, then they achieved their purpose. Incidentally, they let it be known plainly just what they thought the Government should do to develop their country and they told everyone they met, and they made it their business to meet many, what the north is doing agriculturally, industrially and in mining.

The needs of roads and railways to open up land highly suitable for farming and to bring the farm products closer to markets was the keynote of their expressed desires.

And while Sir James Whitney told the delegation that waited upon him at the Parliament Buildings that he was utterly opposed to railway bonusing, this strict rule might be relaxed a little in special instances. "Mind you, I don't say it will be relaxed."

The Premier also said that in case the five million dollar expenditure proved insufficient while the Government was planning how best to use it, another million dollars' worth of bonds would be issued and, if necessary, two millions.

The army from the north was not so large as it was expected it would be. Temiskaming was hardly represented, this because the British manufacturers are visiting their country. The work of boosting the north fell chiefly upon men who had to travel six hundred to twelve hundred miles to get here.

Flaring red and white badges and saucer-sized buttons made every swarthy, wind-tanned man of the north prominent. The badges and buttons distinguished the visitors from the various sections. Looming large in numbers in the crowd of visitors were the men from Algoma. Every town west of Temiskaming was represented.

The delegation that interviewed the Cabinet numbered hardly one hundred and fifty. With Sir James was Hon. W. R. Hearst, who acted as chairman, Hon. Dr. Pyne, Hon. J. S. Duff and Hon. J. O. Reaume. The Premier welcomed the visitors briefly saying that he was always in a receptive mood and always glad to gain knowledge.

Mayor Munroe of the Soo, the chief spokesman, stated that they did not intend to make any demands; they were there only to make suggestions as to how best the Government could help the people of the north. Whatever other districts might do, they did not want to dictate a policy. In common with later speakers, he asked that the Cabinet come up to New Ontario and see at first hand what they had to contend with.

Reeve G. H. Farmer of Tarentorus spoke for better schools and an assessment act that would drive out the land speculator. Mayor J. W. Lyons and J. B. Dobie of Thessalon told of the need for a new north and south railroad to traverse the agricultural districts. A railway should receive a share in the natural resources of the district. "Do you mean grants?" broke in the Premier. "Yes; I have no hesitation in saying nothing will appeal to the capitalist like a land grant," returned Mr. Dobie amid applause.

H. P. Humphries of Blind River made an appeal for better roads and the resumption of work on roads started but since stopped.

"Two millions of the five million dollars to be spent on the north should be equitably spent in the electoral districts of Kenora, Rainy River, Fort William and Port Arthur," declared A. A. Wilson of Fort William.

"The forty thousand people at Port Arthur and Fort William," continued Mr. Wilson, "have to import from the States a million dollars a year in foodstuffs, which the farming district six miles to the rear of them could raise if they had better road facilities."

The need of better farming facilities to supply the towns of the north with produce, which now they get in from the States in great quantities, was also emphasized strongly by Ald. J. A. McPhail of Sault Ste. Marie.

"No Government can do this work of developing the great north alone," said Hon. Mr. Hearst, Minister of Crown Lands. "The citizens must co-operate, and I am glad that the keynote of all the speeches here to-day has been co-operation," Mr. Hearst declared that there would be sectionalism in the disbursement of the five millions. He would visit the north this summer and his officers would also go to every district and they would work out a comprehensive scheme of development that would not only be best for the north, but for the province and the whole Dominion.

Sir James also added that the deputy minister of education would make a trip through the north this fall to study the needs of the country in regard to better educational methods. Better results would have to be got from the enormous sums of money now being expended for education. He hinted that the people of the various municipalities would have to do a little better themselves if they wished their school teachers paid better salaries.

Luncheon was tendered the visiting northerners by the city and the Board of Trade in the arena on Mutual street, and 400 or 500 attended. Short speeches were made by visitors, in which optimism and belief in the possibilities of the north country predominated.

Bandits Fight Citizens.

Durant, Okla., June 22.—Scores of armed men are scouring the country around here for bandits who robbed the First State Bank of Bokchito yesterday, and in an hour's battle with citizens, probably fatally wounded R. Kelly and seriously hurt Dudley Moreland. Hundreds of shots were exchanged.

Police Draws Away Pickets.

Montreal, June 21.—The monotony of the garment workers' strike, which has been dragging along without incident, was relieved somewhat yesterday when the police swept down the streets on which factories are still being operated and drove away picketing strikers, arresting five for not moving on fast enough when told to do so.

The strikers have retaliated by swearing out warrants against several of the employers' private detectives, alleging strong-arm methods.

The arrested pickets have pleaded not guilty.

THERE'S LOTS OF CEMENT

Montreal, June 22.—At a meeting of the directors of the Canada Cement Co., Ltd., yesterday afternoon, the board authorized the secretary to give the following to the press:

"The question of the quantity of cement on hand and the difficulty of transportation were gone into.

"The official report, showing that on June 12 the Canada Cement Co. had on hand 1,085,503 barrels of cement.

"On the same date orders west of the great lakes amounted to 149,214 barrels, of which quantity 6,707 barrels were in transit.

"On the same date the company was short 300 cars and their deliveries at the head of the lakes by boat were 182,254 barrels less than the company had planned and was prepared to ship, this shortage being due to the late opening of navigation, interruptions of the Cornwall Canal, the slow despatch steamers have this year been receiving at the terminals and by water, transportation companies not supplying a sufficient number of steamers.

"Having in view the growth of the west and to assist the transportation companies, the board has authorized the building of four steamers for the company's use.

"The consumption of cement in Canada for the year 1911 was 6,309,717 barrels. The capacity of the Canada Cement Co.'s present mills is 10,000,000 barrels per annum, which capacity is being increased as rapidly as the market justifies."

TELEGRAPHIC PRRAGRAPHS

Chelmsford, Ont., was visited by a disastrous fire yesterday.

Several kegs of beer were seized in canteens at the Goderich militia camp yesterday.

The Prince of Wales attained his majority to-day, being now eighteen years of age.

Oliver Buckingham, 12 years of age, was instantly killed in a warehouse elevator at Brandon.

Telesphore Rochon, ex-inspector of bilingual schools in eastern Ontario, died yesterday at Clarence Creek.

Joseph Fortin, aged 11, was killed by an auto in Ottawa yesterday. He jumped off an ice wagon in front of it.

R. F. Pack, manager of the Toronto Electric Light Co., has been elected president of the Canadian Electric Association.

Mrs. Wm. Forbes, wife of a farmer, died suddenly while attending a church garden party at Skipmess, near Owen Sound.

Mrs. Charles Ewart took a fatal choking spell on a B. of Q. train while going home to Tweed from Kingston yesterday.

Joseph Carroll, a laborer, 45 years of age, was stabbed early yesterday at his home in Buffalo by his wife. His dead body was found later in a nearby field.

Mettie Christianson of Suring, Wis., was acquitted yesterday by a jury of the charge of murdering Hilda Nelson, three years old, by giving her poisoned candy.

Thirty-nine men of the Portuguese fishing schooner Figuera of Lisbon, which sprang a leak and foundered on the Grand Banks June 17, arrived in St. Pierre, Miquelon, yesterday.

Henry Turner, an over-zealous aviation pupil, was perhaps fatally injured yesterday in Hempstead, N.Y., by a twenty-five foot fall in a biplane in which he attempted to fly against orders.

Leopold Ellers, a native of the Island of Heligoland, but a naturalized American citizen, is to be tried by the German Imperial Supreme Court on July 5 on a charge of espionage in the Rhine district.

Helen Piers, 13 years of age, living with the family of John A. Smith, Portsmouth, Ont., as a nurse girl, tried to suicide on Thursday evening by jumping into the lake while in a despondent condition.

The N. Y. Court of Appeal has affirmed the decision of the appellate division, ordering the return to Clinton prison of Folke E. Brandt, the former valet of Mortimer L. Schiff, sentenced five years ago to 30 years for burglary.

ROWELL ADDRESSES MEN OF THE NORTH

Toronto, June 22.—There was a big gathering at the Arena last night when the Northern Ontario "boosters" gathered to discuss their needs.

Hon. Mr. Hearst spoke in a strain similar to his eariler address. Mr. N. W. Rowell also addressed the delegates.

Mr. Rowell did not criticise the Government, but he made several suggestions which he thought, if followed out, would be a great boon to the northland.

The first step that the Government should make to settle New Ontario would be to secure settlers for lands lying immediately adjacent to towns, which would provide ample markets for the products. Adjacent to each growing town are tracts of agricultural land, and here is where settlement should be first encouraged.

The Opposition leader's second suggestion to the Government was to improve the highways, putting them in permanent shape, immediately adjacent to these growing towns.

His third suggestion had regard to the securing of settlers. "New Ontario and the west are in competition in getting settlers,' he said. "Assistance should be granted by the Government to the prospective settler to improve his farm at certain interest, or the land should be cleared by the Government and charge against him."

One of the most important factors in the development of life was education. Proper school accommodation should be provided even in the most remote parts, so that the highest type of citizenship could be developed. Securing efficient teachers was a great difficulty, but the Government should give special assistance in this respect.

Another great benefit, said Mr. Rowell, was tax reform. There should be a readjustment of taxation so that land improvement would be encouraged and speculation discouraged.

GIRL WAS FOUND DEAD IN BED

Toronto, June 22.—A young girl, anywhere between 24 and 28 years of age, was found dead in her room at 141 Langley avenue yesterday evening from asphyxiation, when P. C. Clarkson, answering the summons of the occupant of the house, W. Hill, burst open the door. The gas jet was turned on full and the atmosphere redolent of gas.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Hill had smelt gas near the girl's room, but was afraid to enter until her husband arrived home from work at about 7 o'clock. It was he who called the officer.

The dead girl had been known by the name of Helen Buckley and up to Wednesday night had been an employe at a downtown hotel. Wednesday night she quit work there, and had intended leaving the city. She had packed her trunk and other articles were in another room, where she had been accustomed to cook her meals. Mrs. Hill had heard her packing until 12 o'clock Wednesday night, but further than that knows nothing of the tragedy.

In Sham Battle.

Kingston, June 22.—As a result of bullets being used by some of the men in the tactical exercises at Barriefield camp, when it was nothing less than a miracle that several soldiers escaped death, there was a board of enquiry at the camp yesterday ordered by Col. Ogilvie. The board was composed of Major Birdwhistle, Lieut. Cox, Capt. Bulger. After considerable evidence, taken in private, the board came to the conclusion that the bullets were fired by accident. The shooting of bullets caused no end of a sensation in the ranks. Col. Sam Hughes was just leaving the grounds with a party of officers when the bullets whistled through the air.

Ridgetown a Busy Hive.

Ridgetown, June 22.—Building operations are brisk in Ridgetown this year, and many thousands of dollars will be spent by those interested. The large $50,000 canning factory is being rapidly pushed forward.

Ben Jones was instantly killed by Sheriff Carruthers, when he and other robbers showed fight at Mammoth Springs, Ark., yesterday. The other two, Otto Burrow and Lifus Davis, promptly surrendered.

Motoring from Brantford to Hespeler, F. R. Lalor, M.P. for Haldimand, met with an accident when his automobile collided with a telephone pole. Mr. Lalor was thrown through a glass wind-shield and had his hand badly cut.

The reorganization of China has been made possible by the complete understanding reached yesterday by the bankers representing Great Britain, the U. S., Germany, France, Russia and Japan, to loan China $300,000,000.

ROOSEVELT HAS DECIDED TO RETIRE FROM THE FIGHT

He Now Objects to Having His Name Presented to the Convention at All, as He Has Lost Out on Every Division—Nominations Will Probably be Made at Session To-night

Special to the Review.

Chicago, June 22.—It was the hope of the party leaders this morning to be able to conclude the Republican National Convention to-night. The belief is expressed that without being arbitrary all necessary work of the convention can be finished by that time. A tentive program has been agreed to, subject to sudden change in event of unexpected developments on the floor of the convention. This agreement is for morning, afternoon and night sessions, with the nomination of president and vice-president as the climax of the latter.

If convention obliged to hold over til Monday there will be two days or more discussion before a conclusion is reached. It is strongly intimated that Col. Roosevelt's name will not be presented to the Convention at all except without his consent.

Chicago, June 22.—If Col. Roosevelt eventually heads an independent ticket it seems certain that the convention which will name him will be held at a time considerably after the adjournment of the Republican national convention now in session in this city. As a result of the decisive votes of yesterday's proceedings of the convention, particularly that on the fourth California district contest, and after a day's sober reflection on the part of his close advisers, the plan for a continuation of the present convention, as outlined Thursday, practically has been abandoned.

Some of Col. Roosevelt's more radical supporters still cling to the belief that it would be wise to carry out their original plan, which in effect was stoutly to maintain that the Republican convention is irregular and illegal, and after its adjounment to proceed with an organization in the same hall and name their ticket with Mr. Roosevelt at the head. Col. Roosevelt, however, yesterday refused to sanction this plan. He did not forbid it. He still maintains that he is bound to obey the wishes of his supporters and that he is willing, as he expressed it Thursday in his statement, "personally to bear the responsibility."

He let it be known yesterday, however, that he did not regard such an idea as entirely practicable. Should the nomination be offered to him under any circumstances, it is not his intention to decline, but he believes the wiser course would be to defer final action along such lines for a few weeks. His idea, as expressed yesterday, is that his supporters shall return to their homes and learn the sentiments in their own communities. A month or six weeks later, should conditions warrant, his leaders from the different parts of the country will assemble to determine whether there exists a sufficiently widespread sentiment to justify the creation of a new party. If the decision is in the affirmative, a national convention will be held.

Col. Roosevelt said last night he would adhere to the course which he has mapped out, regardless of what the Roosevelt delegates to the convention decide upon. If the bulk of his delegates choose to follow the course which he has mapped out, he expects to preserve the present organization of his forces. If only a handful should decide at the final count to stand for him, his decision will not be influenced.

Col. Roosevelt in a statement yesterday said he had finally stated his position, and that there would not be any change in it.

It is his confident belief that a decided protest in every section of the country will be made when the facts in connection with the unseating of his delegates become known, and that this protest will foment until it develops into a formidable movement. Such a movement, he believes, will not be entirely partisan, but will come from the plain people of all parties to whom he has made his appeal during his campaign for the Republican nomination.

The colonel would express no opinion as to the possibility of effecting a coalition with any element of the Democratic party. Some of his supporters, however, were less reticent. F. A. Perry, chairman of the Oklahoma delegation, said last night that after the convention had adjourned his delegation would go to Baltimore and open negotiations.

"We shall invite the Roosevelt delegates to go with us," he said. "The same situation exists in the Democratic party as in the Republican party, and I believe we shall be able to come to terms with progressive Democrats for the formation of a progressive party."

The Taft forces in the Republican national convention further demonstrated their control of that body yesterday. The convention took up piecemeal the contests from many states and in each instance the Taft delegates were declared entitled to their seats by majorities ranging from a high-water Taft vote of 605 to 404, to a narrow margin of 542 to 529.

The latter vote was in the California case, in which the convention rules for selection of delegates by Congresional districts came into conflict with the state primary law providing for a state-wide vote on all delegates.

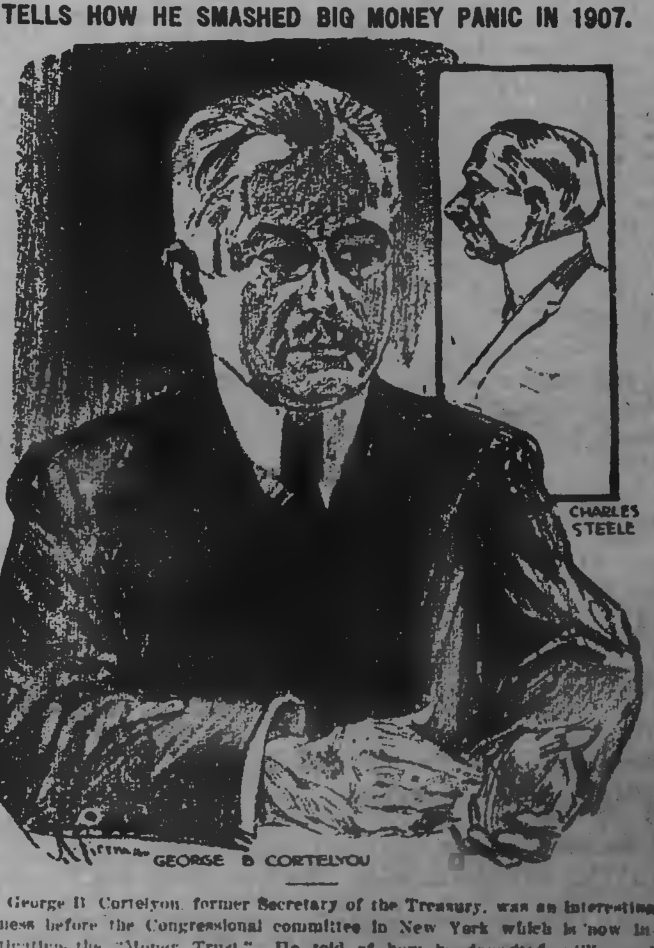
Despite the fact that the Roosevelt people were defeated in all their fights yesterday, there was no indication of a bolt. Some of the Roosevelt leaders had feared that the Californians might take matters in their own hands and fail to observe the Roosevelt program of sitting through the convention to the end and then possibly taking independent action. But their fears proved groundless.

After the California case had been disposed of yesterday, however, the delegates seemed to be in much better humor and there was much fun and merriment during the late afternoon as the minor contests were pushed through without serious opposition. To-day the convention enters its fifth day and still is proceeding under temporary organization, a condition unprecedented in the history of the party. The leaders are going at their task in earnest to-day and although many doubt their ability to do so, are going to try to get through with the nominations and everything else before adjourning early Sunday morning.

To Impeach Judge Archibald.

Washington, June 22.—The House judiciary committee voted unanimously yesterday to report articles of impeachment against Judge Robert W. Archibald of the commerce court, who has been under investigation for alleged misbehavior in office in connection with the Erie Railroad. The report will be made during the week of July 1.

TELLS HOW HE SMASHED BIG MONEY PANIC IN 1907.



George B. Cortelyou, former Secretary of the Treasury, was an interesting witness before the Congressional committee in New York which is now investigating the "Money Trust." He told of how he deposited millions of dollars of government money with the national banks in New York and thus ended the money panic in 1907. Charles Steele also gave testimony.

DO YOU USE PILLS?

If In Doubt About the Right Pills to Use Read the Following Letter Carefully:

"I am one of those persons whose system requires aid," writes Mr. Young Gledhill, from Picton, "but it is so easily affected by reason of the great sensitiveness of the bowels that ordinary drastic pills inflict great injury to the delicate coating, and excite such persistent activity as to be with difficulty checked.

"I wish in the highest terms to express the great value of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in cases like mine, and I am sure also for elderly people, and the very weak there is no pill like them.

"Speaking of my own experience with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I can say they have proved the most stimulating pills for the liver I have found. I have proved their tonic action upon digestion, and the same results have been secured by friends upon whom I have urged their use. The manufacturers are to be congratulated upon possessing so valuable a prescription, and the public should know that so valuable a remedy has been placed at their command."

No other pill for constipation, for liver, kidney, or stomach trouble, compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild and sure always to restore health. Refuse substitutes. Sold by all dealers, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE HUDSON BAY ROUTE

J. H. Sexsmith, M.P., for East Peterborough, has recently returned from a trip to the West where he spent some time studying the conditions in that section of the Dominion. Mr. Sexsmith has an optimistic view of the situation after his investigation and has no time for the calamity howlers to be found either in the East or the West.

The member for East Peterborough learned in conversation with one of the Government engineers that Hudson Bay is navigable for at least seven months of the year. If ice drifts in from the Atlantic through Hudson Straits, the same tide that carries it in, sweeps it out again, while the channels that connect the great bay with the Artic Ocean are so narrow that no danger is feared from ice from that direction.

When the Hudson Bay Railway is completed the transportation problem in the West will be practically solved by the establishment of a comparatively short water route to the English market. Mr. Sexsmith is of the opinion that the wheat of the far Western Provinces will be shipped over the new route and not by way of the Panama Canal when that highway is opened.

Saskatchewan and Alberta as wheat producers are still in their infancy and Mr. Sexsmith has no fear that with the Hudson Bay route in operation the three Great Transcontinental railway lines will suffer for lack of patronage. There will, he says, be plenty of freight not only for them but for two or three more roads if they can be built.

By what process of reasoning, with the above facts before them, can it be shown by any party that a Reciprocity Pact would benefit the prairie provinces? The chief export is wheat and even now wheat can be exported, free of duty, to Minneapolis provided it is ground in bond and exported to England in the shape of flour. Two new waterway routes will soon be opened for western traffic. In the smaller products of the farm the supply is not equal to the demand and Reciprocity with the United States would expose the farmer of the west to the competition of a powerful rival in these lines.

Surely Premier Scott is hard pressed for an issue in the Saskatchewan campaign when he makes Reciprocity his battle cry.

THE NEW BRUNSWICK ELECTIONS

The Liberal party will surely fail to extract any comfort from the result of the recent election in New Brunswick, in which the Provincial leader of the organisation went down to defeat and only a sorry remnant of two of his forces survived. Even the rainbow-chasing George P. Graham must fail to see in such a disaster any "gleam of hope," or any of "the silver lining in the cloud" with which optimistic visions he sought to cheer his colleagues after the election in Quebec.

The New Brunswick Liberals were routed horse and foot. Premier Flemming made a clean gain of eight seats, with four polling divisions yet to be heard from, and the number of Liberals in the House has been reduced from twelve to two. The two independents elected are really supporters of the Government.

Indirectly the result is a compliment to Hon. J. D. Hazen, who left the premiership of New Brunswick to enter the Borden Cabinet as Minister of Marine and Fisheries, as it was on the record made under his leadership that the election was fought. Local issues only figured in the contests, and there is not left a peg upon which the Liberal press can hang a claim either of Federal interference or that the result in any way indicates disapproval of the Borden administration, which latter claim would most certainly have been advanced if Premier Flemming had lost so much as a couple of seats.

THE DEMOCRATS EMERGE

The interest taken in the long drawn out fight between the two factions of the Republican party has dominated all else in the political situation in the United States, until the Democrats have almost been forgotten. Now in their preliminary arrangements for their national convention, that party is coming into the lime light once more.

Right at the start, it is made apparent that the Democrats have troubles of their own. A majority of the National Committee favored the selection for temporary chairman of Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, who in 1904 was the unsuccessful candidate for president on the Democratic ticket. To this William Jennings Bryan, thrice defeated himself in the same race, objects on the ground that the judge is not a progressive, but rather a devotee of the old style of Conservative Democracy. The great Democratic boss, however, has been over ruled in this matter and Judge Parker is the choice of the majority.

Bryan, in his journalistic capacity, is now attending the political rough house in Chicago, but announces that he will be in Baltimore next Sunday and his arrival will probably be the signal for a united move against Judge Parker on the part of those who still swear by the "Peerless Leader."

It is nothing new for Bryan to make war on Judge Parker. With similarly expressed reasons, he opposed his selection in 1904, when the judge was nominated on a platform which contained a free silver plank and refused to accept until the plank was eliminated. It is an old quarrel renewed, but the indications are that Bryan will lose and that Judge Parker will have the honor of presiding over the convention, at least through the early stages.

From what can be gathered from the press dispatches, neither of the parties propose any sweeping change in their respective platforms. We are told that the Republican manifesto will deal only with general issues preferring to go to the people on the record they have already made.

The Democrats, we are told, will insist on tariff reform. They have been doing that so long and have neglected so many opportunities to make good, that the public is prone to take but little stock in any reiterated professions.

They will demand the election of senators by direct vote of the people. That is a safe stand seeing that Congress has declared in favor of such an amendment to the Federal constitution and it is now up to the various states to endorse or reject the measure.

Furthermore, the Democrats want an income tax apparently forgetting that the Supreme Court declared all such legislation by the Federal law makers, was unconstitutional.

The regulation of the trusts is another demand made by the Democrats. Everybody wants such regulation, but all the anti-trust activity that has kept the commercial interests of the Republic in a ferment for years, seems to result in no good to the general public.

NOTE AND COMMENT

When the Democrats get going in National Convention W. J. Bryan will give all the political bosses pointers on how to dominate such a gathering.

That Harry K. Thaw did not like the bill of fare in the asylum is now being used against him as evidence of his insanity. Patrons of boarding houses and restaurants will be warned in time.

The truth after all is said and done seems to be that Roosevelt would have ordered a bolt from the Convention had it not been made plain to him that only about 200 delegates would have answered his call.

If the relation of the Church to the State is not yet fully established in Quebec it cannot for lack of judicial decisions. Close on the judgements tendered by Judge Charbonneau and the Supreme Court comes the statement made by Judge Greenshields to the effect that no church, however great and powerful, can override the civil law of the land, and that the church is dominated by that law.

Mass was celebrated in an Orange Hall loaned for the occasion by the brethren when a Catholic church was burned down. A Past Provincial Grand Master of the Order and a priest walked down the street together in cordial conversation. All this in Quebec. Surely the lion and the lamb may yet lie down together without fear of a tragedy and the millenium cannot be so far distant after all.

You'll Sleep More Soundly

If You Keep Healthy With Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Insomnia goes with Indigestion.

The man or woman with a good appetite, sound digestion, and bowels and kidneys working right, is never troubled much with sleeplessness. It is when the bowels become constipated and the liver and kidneys sluggish that the trouble begins.

Lazy liver and constipated bowels quickly bring on billiousness, indigestion and sick headaches, making a sound, refreshing night's sleep impossible. Or the inactive kidneys allow the blood to becomes loaded with uric acid, which causes rheumatism, with all its sleep-destroying tortures.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, taken regularly, induce sweet and dreamless sleep by keeping all these organs active and regular. The headaches disappear, the digestion becomes good again, the blood is purified and perfect health returns.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been a favorite household remedy in Canada for over half a century, and they are in daily use throughout the world. Being purely vegetable they are safe for young and old. Made by W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont., and sold by all dealers at 25c. a box.

Put a Stop to Paying Toll.

Sir William Henry Wemyss Cooke, the owner of Hornet's Beauty, which was beaten in the Lincolnshire Handicap recently, belongs to a well-known Doncaster family.

Wheatley Park, the family seat, which lies close to the somewhat malodorous Don, is not more than a mile or two from the town. In the days of the late baronet, who, like his son, was a very keen sportsman, the authorities erected a toll-gate near the entrance to the park, so that every time the baronet drove into the town he would have to pay toll.

But this did not suit his book, and so he went to considerable trouble and expense in cutting a new road from the house, and a new entrance to the park, which enable him to avoid the toll-gate when going into Doncaster.

At the worst Mr. Roosevelt can recall Browning's lines:

What I aspired to be,
And was not, comforts me.

The DIAMOND CIPHER

A Baseball Romance

By W. A. PHELON

(COPYRIGHT, 1912, BY W. G. CHAPMAN. COPYRIGHT IN CANADA AND GREAT BRITAIN)

Solano half-turned, and peered through the twilight. "Rude form, I know," he spoke, half-apologetically, "to stare after a young lady. I was just wondering, though, where I had seen her lately—several times, in fact. A-hem, Harry—she has met a friend."

Half a block up the street, a little man, his head scarcely up to the stenographer's shoulder, had emerged from the shelter of a doorway. He lifted his hat with ceremonious precision, and bowed over the young woman's extended hand. Miss Lawson checked her onward walk for the fraction of an instant, and the young men, idly glancing towards the couple, saw a flash of white passing from the girl's hand into that of her new-met friend. The little man bowed again; Miss Lawson walked on, and the little man came down the street with a rapid, jaunty stride. As he passed the boys, his face was for an instant in the dying light of the day, and the strong, brown features, with a wide scar across one cheek, were clearly outlined.

He was a Japanese.

When Brockett presented himself at Chief Wilkins' private office in the morning, none of the other clerks had as yet appeared. Miss Lawson, however, was already at her desk—it had long been her custom to come early and work late, with an intelligence, a faithfulness, and an attention to detail which had won her repeated commendations from the chief. As Brockett crossed the office and halted at the chief's particular door, the girl looked up, threw the boy a sunshiny smile, and resumed the polishing of some small factor of her typewriter. Brockett returned the smile, knocked lightly on the frosted glass, and heard a loud "Come in."

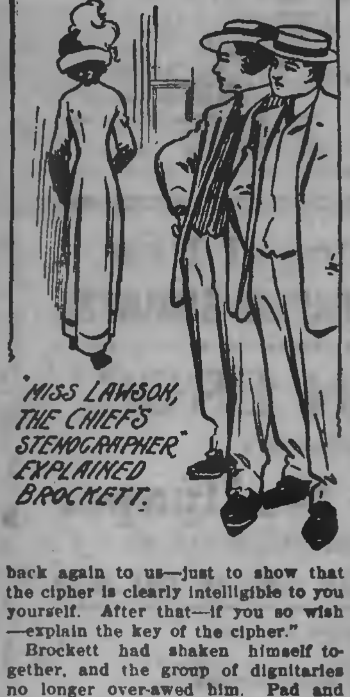
Chief Wilkins sat at his desk, flanked by the burly Mr. Pinkwell. Three big leather chairs nearby were occupied by three stately gentlemen whom Brockett, with natural surprise, recognized as the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy, and General Cole, commander of the army. The boy, thus precipitated into a distinguished conclave, could only struggle against sudden dispersal of his thoughts and senses into the semblance of a cloud of wandering bees, and, in default of a clear comprehension of the situation, could only stare inquiringly at the grim face of the chief.

"Mr. Brockett," came the incisive tones of the chief, cutting through the boy's understanding like a spear-point thrown from a long, long distance, "will you give these gentlemen another demonstration of your cipher?"

The spear-point went clear through, and Brockett woke up.

"Why—yes—of course. How shall I demonstrate it?"

"Suppose," explained the chief, "we have General Cole dictate a sentence to you. Write out that sentence in your cipher. Then read the sentence back again to us—just to show that the cipher is clearly intelligible to you yourself. After that—if you so wish—explain the key of the cipher."



"MISS LAWSON, THE CHIEF'S STENOGRAPHER" EXPLAINED BROCKETT.

Brockett had shaken himself together, and the group of dignitaries no longer over-awed him. Pad and pencil ready, he waited for the general's words, and the soldier, slowly, sententiously, dictated.

"Send Eighth cavalry, 385 men, to Laredo. Support with First infantry by Friday. No guns at present."

Brockett pencilled briskly, and handed the general a sheet scribbled bewilderingly in this fashion:

L SH E BH BOSTON R Pos T pos PO W WP COBB TO TC PO pos W SH BH TC L fin FA FA TC W TO BB HR TO 3BH CUBS HR E SB Pos E TO W WP AB WP SB W HR BH pos WP UMP 2BH fin E L pos TO FA W SH L SH E TO.

The sheet of paper went around the circle, and then back to Brockett, who promptly read off the general's original dictation. Silence followed for a moment, and then the general, slapping his hand sharply on his knee, exclaimed: "By blazes! Gentlemen, it's too much for me!" A general burst of laughter followed, and Brockett felt the last traces of embarrassment melt rapidly away.

"Mr. Brockett," interrogated the chief, after the merriment died down, "how old are you?"

"Nineteen, sir."

"What education, if I may ask?"

"High school, sir. Then one year at Columbia. Had to leave when my father died."

"Yes, I see—making it essential for you to support the family, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir."

"Speak any languages besides English?"

"I have picked up Spanish from a friend, a Cuban, Ramon Solano."

"H-m, h-m. That accounts for your remark of yesterday—that a Cuban might understand this cipher. Have you shown it to your friend, Solano?"

"Yes, sir. In fact, he suggested some of the points in the cipher, and can read it as well as myself."

"H-m, h-m. Rather sorry about that. Is this Solano a good, square fellow?"

"Best in the world, sir. He's a real American in everything but his birthplace, chief. I'll vouch for him every time."

The secretary of the navy spoke up at this juncture.

"I think I know this young Solano," he interposed, "and I know his father. If I am not mistaken, he might be the very man we need in the affair now under discussion."

Chief Wilkins resumed the interrogation.

"Mr. Brockett, would you be willing to take a chance for your country? A chance that might involve risking your life a dozen times, and which might not yield you even a taste of glory as your reward?"

"I am willing to do anything I can possibly accomplish, if you give me the word, chief."

"Good boy! I sized you up that way the first time I ever saw you in the office, son. Could you say as much for your friend Solano?"

"Yes sir. I think Solano would go to any lengths to prove his love for the United States."

"Very well. This afternoon, Mr Brockett, kindly make duplicate copies of your cipher for General Cole, the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy, Mr. Pinkwell, and myself. By the way, we might as well have it done now, and save the time. Mr Brockett, will you call in Miss Lawson?"

AN EXCELLENT REMEDY FOR LITTLE ONES

Mr. John C. Lepage, Rimouski, Que., writes—"Your Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent remedy for little ones and I always keep them in the house." Thousands of other mothers say the same thing. The Tablets always do good,—they cannot possibly do harm. They are the only medicine for children sold under the absolute guarantee of a government analyst to contain no opiates or harmful drugs. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels; break up colds; expell worms, cure indigestion and promote healthful sleep. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Proud Duke.

An English importer in New York told a story illustrative of the pride of the late Duke of Fife.

"A very rich woman in Grosvenor square," he said, "once asked the duke to dinner in terms like these:

"'Mrs. Parvenu's social secretary is desired to invite the Duke of Fife to dinner on the 7th inst. at 8 o'clock.'

"To this invitation came back the answer:

"'The Duke of Fife's piper is desired to inform Mrs. Parvenu's social secretary that the Duke of Fife declines her invitation.'"—Washington Star.

Depending on the Neighbors.

She was a rather plump old woman and had always tried to be accommodating to her neighbors, but even her obliging spirit had to refuse a request from a neighbor who sent by her little boy the following message:

"Please, ma'am, mother sent me over to see if I couldn't get a couple of pounds of lard off of you."—Lippincott's.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

How Mrs. Bethune was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. — "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I had cramps, backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband's told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do all my own housework, work in the garden and entertain company and enjoy them, and can walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the week. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl, and tell them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

A FAMILY OF POLITICIANS.

Jos. Chamberlain, of Boer War Fame, Founded a Ruling House.

The rise of the Chamberlain family to political power in England has been remarkable for the counterpoise which it has provided during the last quarter of a century to the influence of the house of Cecil. As Colonial Secretary in Lord Salisbury's last Ministry Joseph Chamberlain was permitted a free hand and, although he was titular chief of only that small section of Liberal Unionists who deserted Gladstone in 1886 on the question of home rule, he dragged his chief and the Tory party into the disastrous Boer war. It was notorious that Salisbury had a great admiration for the Boers, but the descendant of a long line of noble Cecils was no match for the shrewd screw manufacturer of Birmingham. As English politics go, Balfour was the natural heir to the Premiership when his uncle, Lord Salisbury, retired in 1902, but the vigorous personality of Chamberlain was felt to be so dangerous to his chances that his feared opposition was neutralized by making the younger Chamberlain Postmaster-General, with a seat in the Cabinet. Austen Chamberlain has so improved his chances since and consolidated his leadership of the Protectionist wing of the Conservative party that, on Balfour's retirement from the leadership a short while back, it was necessary to elevate a compromise chief in the person of Bonar Law, Chamberlain's influence being sufficiently strong to prevent the election of a dyed-in-the-wool Tory. His youthful son, though only five years old, is already heralded as a worthy successor in public life to his father and grandfather, to whom the torch of tariff reform can be passed when the time comes.

Joseph Chamberlain was born in 1836 and retired from active business in possession of a comfortable fortune, at the early age of 38. He had been several times mayor of Birmingham, his native town, when he entered Parliament, in 1876, as an advanced radical, with strong republican tendencies, and an ardent home ruler. He entered Gladstone's Cabinet in 1880, but forsook both the Liberal party and his own earlier platform, six years later, on the question of home rule. He allied his band of seceding Liberals with the Conservative party and became Colonial Secretary in the Tory Cabinet of 1895. Through Salisbury's inability to keep a tight rein on his Cabinet, Chamberlain now had an opportunity for the unfettered pursuit of his personal ambition and, in 1899, he goaded President Kruger, of the Transvaal, into a declaration of war although at the time the English army was totally unprepared for active service. His Cabinet colleague, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared that he could not help feeling a profound sympathy for Kruger because he had so many dealings with Chamberlain. Three years later, when the war was over and the people had leisure to reflect upon its mismanagement and blundering inefficiency, Chamberlain diverted attention by launching his famous scheme of Imperial unity. He proposed not only the creation of an Imperial army and navy system, but the development of a great economic entity by means of a protective tariff against the rest of the world. He favored a duty upon the importation of breadstuffs and meat into the United Kingdom—the duty to be remitted on products of British colonies should they in turn discriminate in favor of English goods. The opposition of Canada and Australia to both an zollverein and a formal naval and military union proved fatal to his propaganda, while the strong objection in England to the taxation of food forced his retirement from the Tory Cabinet in 1903, after eight years of strenuous service as Minister for the Colonies. He continued his forceful campaign for tariff reform, but shortly afterward was forced by ill health to withdraw permanently from active public life. In 1887 he went to Washington as British commissioner in the fisheries dispute.

Austen Chamberlain is his son by his first wife. He is the recognized leader of the tariff reformers and, should Balfour retire definitely, he would stand a strong chance of the Premiership in the next Tory Government.

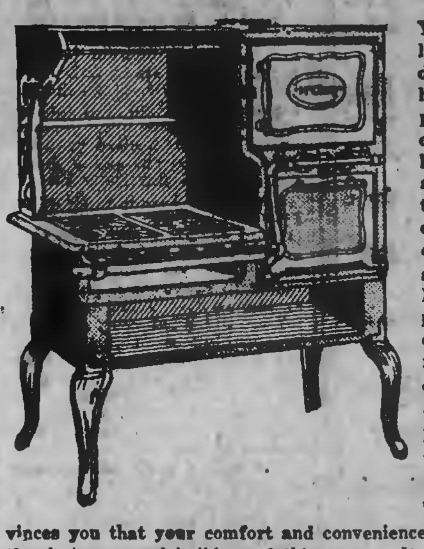
Cooking is a pleasure when you have a "McClary" Gas Range in your kitchen



You wouldn't think of lighting the furnace during the intense heat of summer. Why persist in cooking on a coal range during the hot weather? GAS is a much cheaper fuel than coal—far more convenient and easier on the cook in the summer time. Any McClary gas range pays for itself very quickly in the actual money it saves.

The Model shown in the cut is "McClary's" latest production and therefore the greatest range value there is.

The first glance convinces you that your comfort and convenience have been studied by the designers and builders of this range. It is quite apparent that you can cook a big dinner on this range without being crowded. The big roomy Oven is placed high. The Broiler is also elevated. There is no "stooping or bending" over this range.

Like other "McClary" ranges, this model has the white enamelled broiler and drip pans. Also Anti-Rust linings which add to the life of the range. The body is finished in bright, black enamel, and is easy to clean.

Just see the many styles of "McClary" gas ranges at your dealer's. All "McClary" gas ranges can be changed from artificial to natural gas in a few moments if necessary—see them and pick out the gas range that suits you best. 503

ALCOHOL AND THE NATION.

Unless the American people destroy alcohol as an element in their beverages alcohol will destroy the American Republic. That was the message brought to the American Medical Society at its meeting in Atlantic City the other day by Dr. MacNichol, the New York surgeon who was sent abroad by President Roosevelt to investigate the subject of alcoholism and narcotics. Lincoln said that a nation cannot stand half slave and half free, but Dr. MacNichol declaring that "a nation half diseased and half well cannot live," went on to prove that the United States "show three-fifths of the rising generation mentally and physically diseased."

"Within a period of 50 years the population of the United States increased 330 per cent., while the number of insane and feeble-minded increased 950 per cent. Degeneracy is shown in the lessened fertility of the nation. In five years the birth-rate fell off 33 1-3 per cent. A degeneracy so appalling in magnitude staggers the mind and threatens to destroy this Republic. Let this degeneracy continue at the same rate for one hundred years and there will not be a native-born child 5 years old in the United States."

And this expert investigator is plain and outspoken as to the cause of the alarming degeneracy in the American people. Alcohol is the main cause. He says:

"A hundred different intermediate agencies may contribute to the undoing of the race, but back of them all stands alcohol as the chief degenerative factor. . . The great burden of drink is not borne by the drinker, but by the drinkers' children. The germ cell that is to be evolved into another being is the most highly-organized of all the cells in the body. In its protoplasm lies the material and pattern of the perfected organism. Should such poison as alcohol lessen the nutrition of this cell or impair the protoplasmic material and deface the pattern these shortcomings and defects would be sufficient in subsequent stages of development to produce mental and physical defects and deformities. A defective germ cell cannot evolve a normal body. For this reason the children of drinking parents present a large percentage of functional organic diseases."

Not content with this statement of the law of biology, under which "the sins of the fathers are visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation," the expert scientist cites the facts presented in New York schools. It was found that 62 per cent of the children have drinking parents, and 91 per cent. of these children of drinking parents suffer from some functional or organic disease. One institution for the treatment of defectives was found filled with children, every one of whom was of alcohol-poisoned parentage. If this percentage of hereditary taint holds generally, it is no wonder the alarm is raised that "a nation half diseased and half well cannot live."

And it is this national aspect of the question which makes the campaign in Canada against the traffic in intoxicants of supremest interest to the Canadian nation. Every alcohol-tainted child born into Canadian citizenship is not only a loss where there ought to have been a gain, but it is also a positive burden and an active menace to the well-being of the nation. The legalized agencies of the drink traffic are now known to be legalized destroyers of the nation's vitality and power. How long will the intelligence of the Canadian people stand for the privileged and protected bar-room, whose known and inevitable output is a generation of physical and mental defectives and weaklings? Poison in the germ-cell is death to the nation.

SUCCESSES IN COMPETITION OF ALFALFA GROWING

Alfalfa, one of the greatest of farm crops, can be grown to perfection in Peterboro County. During the past few weeks, The Review has been advising its readers of the Alfalfa competition that was to be conducted by Farm & Dairy for the benefit of Peterboro County farmers. The fields have now been judged and the alfalfa fields of the following competitors scored 70 points or more within the possible 100.

F. Birdsall, Birdsall 81,0; H. C. Garbutt, Lakefield, 79.5; F. Elmhirst, Villiers, 78.5; T. Graham, Central Smith, 78; Mrs W. Pilling, N. Monaghan, 76.5; W. A. Rosborough, Smith 73.5; Stewart Brown, Douro, 72; J. C. Taylor Keene, 71.0; E. A. Scott, R.R. No. 1, Smith, 71.0; C. Telford, Ennismore, 70.5; Will Scott, Smith, 70. Several other competitors had very fine fields.

Mr. F. E. Ellis, one of the editors of Farm & Dairy, who judged the fields, tells us that of all the entries, there were none that could be considered a failure and that the great majority of the fields would be considered in the recognized Alfalfa growing districts down in Western Ontario, as good. The competitors themselves were very much pleased with the crop, and its wide adoption in Peterboro County should have a big influence in the prosperity of our farmers.

Land in Colorado, that a few years ago could not be given away, is now worth $200 an acre. It was found that this land could grow alfalfa. That the most of our farm land in Peterboro county will grow alfalfa and the next few years will see a constantly increasing acreage of this crop seeded in our county.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

The St. John's Tennis Club are holding their opening season tea on the Nicholls Oval at 5.30 this afternoon. All members and prospective members are asked to be present

An alarm from box 21 and a telephone message to the fire station sent the brigade to the Peterborough Steam Laundry last night shortly after ten o'clock. An electric iron had been left with the current on, and had become red hot. The glow was noticed. There was no damage done as the iron was on its stand.

MERCHANTS AND CITIZENS ARE ASKED TO FLY THE FLAG

Peterborough will be thronged with visitors on July 1, when the forty-fifth anniversary of the national birthday is to be appropriately celebrated by the city. Every effort is being made by the committee to prepare a program of such length and variety that all may be entertained and in all possible ways to make the holiday a memorable one.

As it is to be everybody's entertainment, every sport and event free to the public, the citizens of Peterborough are asked to help in perfecting arrangements. The suggestion is made that the city be arrayed for the occasion in holiday attire. Merchants are asked, especially, to decorate their places of business and private residences should not be neglected. All of them can, at least, fly the Union Jack.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED BY ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY TO TAKE UP THE IMMIGRANTS' CAUSE

At the regular meeting of the St. George's Society last night, Messrs. Moss, Pretty, John, Jay and Guy were appointed a committee to interview both the Dominion and the Provincial members with regard to ways and means of helping immigrants when they arrive in the city and need assistance.

Mr. Howson, Immigration Officer, will also be asked to be present at meetings which may be arranged.

The committee was appointed following a discussion on matters appertaining to the condition, in which immigrants find themselves on arrival in Peterborough. The society feels that assistance should be given the new arrivals while they are engaged in finding houses and employment.

Mr. J. John, in a report to the Relief Committee, pointed out that many immigrants come to Peterborough in very poor circumstances. The report went so far as to say that some are brought on what was practically false pretences. Cases were cited to show how necessary it was that firm action be taken in the interest of new-comers.

President Moss explained that the Government had empowered the Immigration Officer to secure a place of accommodation for immigrants, but this matter had not been taken up by the local officer.

HOME REUNION ASSOCIATION.

Mr. Jay, when called upon to tell of the Imperial Home Re-union Association, said that Messrs. J. J. Turner and Mr. G. N. Gordon were taking a great interest in the work, both gentlemen being imbued with the spirit of progress and fellowship.

COUNTY COUNCIL ON INSPECTION TRIP TO BRIDGES

The County Council went on their annual inspection tour of bridges, roads and lakes, yesterday. As there have been some negotiations with the Government, the Dominion Parliament representative went with them.

At Burleigh the new approach to the bridge was recommended for further repairs.

At Buckhorn the old question of liability for the $3,000 and maintenance between the county and the government was threshed out again. It was finally admitted that Messrs. Graham and Stratton have refused to back up their promise, and Robert Shaw who has had this matter in hand from the beginning was again appointed to try and complete the transaction on which there is little liklihood; if not the county will provide.

At Gannon's Narrows, the recommendation was made by the Council that the boat channel should be alongside the new wharf. This was agreed to and will mean that the swing will be moved about thirty feet to the south. Owing to the lateness of the hour, the Pigeon Creek Bridge was not visited.

Chemong Park was reached at six o'clock and mine host Robert Davis the new proprietor of the Chemong Hotel, delighted the entire crowd with the tasty meal he prepared.

THIS REDSKIN DIDN'T KNOW HE WAS DRUNK

His first appearance in police court cost a local young man $2 this morning. It was whiskey as usual, that resulted in him being gathered in last night.

A swarthy visaged Indian resembling more, however, the negro fistic champion, was also a victim of the stuff that cheers. The police had some trouble in arresting him last night. He gave his name as Richard Cornelius.

"Corny" did'nt know he was drunk so he told the magistrate. He gets wild, when under the spell of liquor on a previous occasion tearing down a portion of the police station. He paid $2.

GROTESQUE DANCES.

Yaqui Natives Wear Antlers and Jump Like Deer.

Natives of the Yaqui region in Mexico make use of queer costumes in their dances. Seated on the ground around a fire, four good singers chant dialogues between the deer and other animals and birds, such as the coyote, the jaguar, the wolf, the bear, the eagle and the hawk. Their music is made by beating with small sticks, saturated in blood and then dried, on "guegas" or tightly stretched mats of plaited tule leaves.

The dancer ties on his head the skin and horns of the head of a deer—which is often better than his own—and from his belt of deer hide hang many deer hoofs, which rattle continuously as he goes through the steps of the dance. In his hands he carries two large rattles, made of gourds partly filled with pebbles. These he also shakes to keep time to the music.

The dancer tries to imitate, as far as possible, the movements of the deer. He shakes himself sideways and with his hands makes motions similar to those of the deer's long white tail as the animal goes running swiftly over the plain, leaping through the underbrush or trying to free himself from the flies which infest the valleys of the mountains. He whirls around, jumps and leaps straight up and down into the air. When we are least expecting it another pascola appears, wearing the head of a coyote, a bear or a puma, chases the deer, tries to bite him, leap on his back or otherwise bear him to the ground, but the deer always escapes.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

LARGE CROWD HEARD ENJOYABLE BAND CONCERT

The grassy slopes of Victoria Park were again thronged last evening by hundreds who turned out for regular Friday evening band concert, supplied by the 57th Regimental Band, under the leadership of Prof. Gliddon.

The threatening weather of the earlier part of the evening, was fortunately dispelled and in no way decreased the attendance, which was, if anything, larger than on the opening night.

The exceeding merit and popularity of the program was strongly evidenced by hearty applause at the finish of each number.

A couple of Ted Snyder's popular hits were splendidly received.

Mr. Asa Huycke, in his vocal rendition, with band accompaniment, was most enthusiastically applauded.

The Regimental Band is now in a most efficient and well organized organized condition, and is also well supplied with the latest and popular compositions in the musical world.

SAINTS BEAT PETES AT THE HITTING GAME AND WON FIRST FIXTURE BY 8-3

Bunched Infield, Wafting in the Fourth, and Wilde's Homer in the Fifth Gave Visitors Five Runs—Petes Banged the Ball Hard, But at the Fielders.

The Petes couldn't do but very little against Howick's brand of twirling in the first game against St. Thomas yesterday afternoon, while the visitors were more successful with Lefty McDonald. The honors went to Dad Stewart's boys with an 8—3 count, and they deserved the win.

The Petes could hit Howick's offerings on the nose, but the balls invariably went into the mit of the fielder, who had little else to do but close the leather.

Umpire Johnson was present again with several more decisions that were all to the bad, both teams suffering.

The game was devoid of anything in the line of features, but the visitors gave a good exhibition of speed on their infield hitting. Slow work on the paths would have meant putouts on short clouts.

Lefty McDonald presented the visitors with the first run in the initial innings, when he threw wild to Nasher on a fielder's choice, Gurney scoring. In the fourth, while Howick, the fifth man up, was the only batter to wait the ball outside the bases. St. Thomas scored three. Nasher made the second error of his team when he threw badly to Barthold following Keifel's grounder. Two more runs were gained in the fifth when Wilde hit over the fence between White and Beard with Kopp on first. Kopp counted again in the seventh, being hit in by Sweeney's double. Another double to the sawdust in the ninth by Powers made the eighth tally, Keifel crossing the plate.

The Petes looked good to land a couple in the fifth. After Tully had fanned Trout was safe when the throw pulled Gurney off the bag. McDonald singled to right and Nasher came along with another hit. Swartz missed three, but Beard banged a long fly to Manager Stewart, who saved the situation with a good catch.

In the fifth the Petes scored twice. White flew out to short, but Barthold cut second bag for a single. Byrnes sent him to third with a double, and Tully with an infield hit scored him. Trout sacrificed Byrnes in. McDonald fanned.

Prospects were bright in the seventh. Nasher singled to centre and Swartz was safe when Sweeney fumbled his grounder. Beard sacrificed the runners and White hit a pretty one between third and short. Nasher scored easily, but Swartz, instead of being held at third, was allowed to proceed and he was easy picking on the throw to the catcher from Kopp at left. Barthold was out second to first.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

The New York American League team has closed its option on pitcher Keating of the Lawrence Club. The option did not expire until July 20, but Vice-president Arthur Irwin of the New York Club, watched Keating strike out 10 New Bedford batsmen yesterday and closed the deal, paying $7,000 for Keating and giving in exchange Pitcher Hoff and Third Baseman Boyd. Keating will remain with the Lawrence Club until the end of the season. With Irwin looking on Keating was credited with four strike outs in the last inning, one man reaching first base on a dropped third strike.

Now for a ball players' union. The players threaten to form one, having a grievance because Ty Cobb was laid off by Ban Johnson for hitting a spectator at New York. If they have the union they will demand:

One—Overtime after nine innings.

Two—Double pay for Sundays and holidays, with Saturday half holiday from June to October.

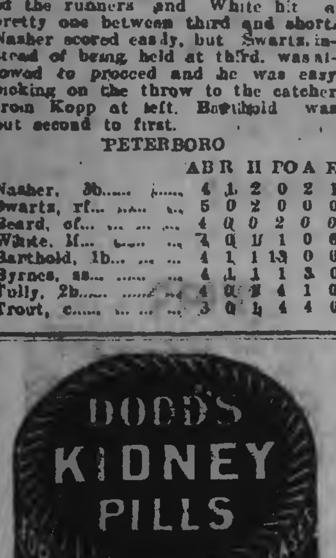
Three—Piecework scale: One base hit, $5; two base hit, $10; three base hit, $15; home runs, $25; special home runs with bases full, $50.

Four—Valet service in clubhouse, street clothes to be pressed daily while engaged on diamond.

Five—Scale of fielding: Pop flies, $1; ordinary assists, $1.50; extra long, $1.75; catching thrown ball, $1.25, if it bounces; half hops, $2; long bounds, no bonus; double plays, $4. Penalty for errors, 10 cents (first three excepted.)

Six—Schedule for 100 games only.

It is about up to some of the Peterborough players to get busy with the stick if they want a box of those "Perfection" cigars offered by S. Davis & Sons, Limited, for a home run. Since the Davis people made this offer on Wednesday, Red Fisher, the big Hamilton catcher, has put the ball over the fence for two homers, and yesterday Second Baseman Wilde, of St. Thomas, completed the circuit with one of the longest hits ever made on the local grounds. These three runs were wasted as far as earning the box of "Perfections" went, as the Davis Company's donation is for local players only. Now, boys, put the wood on heavy if you wish to fatten your averages, and at the same time "smoke up."



SOUTH CENTRALS LOST TO CENTRALS

At the baseball game between the South Central and the Central ball teams on the Oval yesterday afternoon the Centrals were victors by 18 to 6. The losers had two pitchers, Richardson starting on the mound. The playing was very loose on both sides. Cavanah, of the Centrals, in the course of the game had a finger knocked out.

COLONY OF THE CRAZED.

A Belgian Town Where Insane Folks Are Wholly Unrestrained.

In the year 600, according to legend, a young Irish princess named Dymphne, seeking to escape from her cruel father, traveled to the continent of Europe and in Belgium established herself in a hut, where it was her misfortune to be discovered and murdered by her parent. A temple was afterward built to the memory of the princess, and it later became a refuge for the "sick in mind." Huts and houses were gradually built to accommodate those who came until after many centuries it became the town of Gheel, known far and wide as the colony of the crazed.

The remarkable thing about this Belgian town is that the residents accept patients into their own homes so that they may enjoy the beneficial effects of domestic and social intercourse. Nearly every house contains at least two mental incompetents, and except in certain cases the patients are permitted to go about town and enjoy themselves. A stranger may not know whether he is meeting a patient or a sane resident in his walks through the town.

For more than 100 years this system has prevailed at Gheel. Attempts at suicide are few, the death rate among the unfortunates has averaged about 4 per cent during the past few years, while in England the rate has been 7 per cent for the past ten years. The percentage of recoveries for twenty-five years has been almost double that in England.—New York World.

Why Elizabeth Ordered Fish.

The connection between fish eating during Lent and a strong navy may appear remote, but to Elizabethan statesmen it seemed very real and vital. So much so that every one should eat fish on every day of Lent, as well as on certain appointed days throughout the year, under penalty of a heavy fine. And the reasons set forth for this enactment made no mention of religious observance. It was simply stated that the queen needed ships for the defense of the realm, and as not only was the fishing industry "the chiefest nurse for the bringing up of youth for shipping," but "great numbers of ships be used therein, furnished with stuff and men at all times in readiness for her majesty's service," the consumption of fish must be enforced.—London Chronicle.

Feline Charity.

"I believe I'll give that poor stray cat a piece of meat."

"What, and pauperize the cat! Always help the poor to help themselves. Scatter some crumbs on the sidewalk. They may attract a bird for the cat to grab."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

FIRE IN THE HOLD.

Vessels at Sea Are Often Smoldering Furnaces Below Decks.

Smoldering fires on board ship are common enough and in many cases are comparatively harmless. They arise mostly from spontaneous combustion caused by piling large quantities of coal in close quarters.

It is said on excellent authority that there is not much danger from such a fire, hardly any on an iron or a steel ship. The first protective measure in such an event is to exclude the air, so that the fire can only smolder. Then the bunker is flooded with water, which usually serves to extinguish it.

Even in wooden ships the danger from smoldering fire is not half so great as has been pictured by nonseagoing folk. This is illustrated by the experience of the captain of the Twin Brothers, engaged some years ago in the wheat trade between San Francisco and Liverpool. The vessel was returning from Liverpool with a thousand tons of coal in the hold as ballast. Just after it rounded Cape Horn it was discovered that the coal was on fire.

There was a steam pump on board, and after closing the lower hatches the crew flooded the hold until the ship had settled about four feet lower in the water. Then the captain stood pat and let her burn. No one was frightened, and every one was confident that the ship would be safely brought into port. Call was made at Valparaiso for fresh water and provisions, but not a man deserted.

The vessel was seventy-two days in reaching San Francisco from the Horn, and all that time the coal burned, and little streams of smoke could be seen coming through the cracks in the deck. Arriving at San Francisco, the Twin Brothers sailed out on the mud flats and was flooded until she settled almost even with her upper deck. This extinguished the fire.

The appearance of the vessel after all this was pretty fair evidence what a ship may sustain in the way of a fire. In a dozen places the bottom had burned through, and all that was between the crew and the deep sea was the thin sheet of copper bottom. The weight of the coal and the pressure of the water kept about equal strain on both sides of the copper sheeting, and it had not broken, although it was little thicker than an ordinary tin pan. There was one place where this copper was exposed about the bigness of the top of a barrel.—New York Tribune.

Luring the Beaver.

Beavers when they have been undisturbed for long are very curious in relation to strange sounds. They will come swimming out of their house even at the firing of a gun. The Indians usually call them with a hissing noise or one produced by munching the lips. Another favorite tole is a sound made by tapping the trousers with the hand. The most successful beaver caller in Newfoundland killed great numbers of beavers in the open season by making a sound that resembled the cutting of chips off a tree. It is said that the unfortunate beavers never fail to respond to this noise.

Charles Lamb's Bad Cold.

When Charles Lamb was suffering with a cold he wrote the following to his friend Bernard Barton:

"Do you know what it is to succumb under an insurmountable daymare—an indisposition to do anything or to be anything, a total deadness and distaste, a suspension of vitality, an indifference to locality, a numb soporifical good-for-nothingness, an ossification all over, an oyster-like indifference to passing events, a mind stupor, a brawny defiance to the needles of a thrusting in conscience, with a total irresolution to submit to water gruel processes?"

Money.

"Say, pop, what is money?"

"Money, my son, is the root of all evil—that is to say, with it you can buy a wife or keep expensive bachelor apartments. No matter which one you choose, you'll wish you had the other."—Philadelphia Record.

Many owe what health they have to the unquenchable flame that burns undimmed in the faculty of hope.—Walter De Voe.

Easy Walking.

A newspaper woman, a spinster, went to interview a member of one of the leading firms in Boston and was told to wait five minutes for him to be at liberty. Three-quarters of an hour later he came hurrying toward her with, "Well, Miss W., I would never wait so long as this for any man!" "Oh, Mr. Cole," she retorted, "if you had waited forty-five years for a man you wouldn't mind an extra half hour."—Boston Post.

UNKNOWN COUNTRIES.

Mongolia and Tibet Mostly a Riddle to the Outside World.

Neither the Chinese themselves nor the rest of the world knows much of Mongolia or Tibet. The most of those two countries belong to the desert, and, although they have been inhabited since the time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, the outside world is to them a sealed book, and they to the world an unguessed riddle.

The great desert of Gobi, that is partly in China, partly in Manchuria, partly in Mongolia and partly in Siberia, is traversed by the oldest transportation lines in existence. It has a caravan route over which tea and silk laden camels have traveled toward Europe for these 3,000 years, and yet from the time when Kubiai Khan macadamized the road until the time when the Russian railroad paralyzed it by the competition of steam no one of the merchants who traveled over it turned either to the right or to the left to tell Europe and the occident of the wonders or the terrors of that unknown land.—Argonaut.

A FUNNY SULTAN.

He Liked to Play Practical Jokes Upon His Invited Guests.

We all like our little joke, and eastern potentates have from time immemorial enjoyed the reputation of being the merriest of monarchs. The Moorish palace of Sultan Abu Yakub Yusauf at Seville—known today as the Alcazar—contains one of the most elaborate practical jokes extant. When in a gay mood some important merchant or notable of Seville would receive a pressing invitation summoning him to the presence. In a fever of delighted expectancy the flattered guest would don his whitest raiment and hie him to the palace.

There he would be ceremoniously conducted to the gardens and directed up the long avenue. But, alas, halfway up it he would inevitably tread upon a moving flagstone resting upon a spring, and immediately countless fine jets of water would gush out of the ground and from the surrounding shrubbery and drench him. Amid the jeers of the courtiers the luckless and bedraggled wight would beat an undignified retreat. Before he was allowed to leave the palace, however, he was sworn to secrecy on pain of death At all costs nothing must make the joke fall flat when repeated.

The treacherous flagstone has been removed, and today the visitor may pass with impunity, but a peseta to the head gardener will usually cause the fountains to play. Not many people know of their existence, however The water is sprayed through hundreds of tiny pipes, so small as to be almost invisible, which are placed in the cracks between the flagstones.—Strand Magazine.

By and Large.

A correspondent asks, "Where did the fool expression 'by and large' come from, and what does it mean?" It is scarcely foolish, for the men who invented the phrase were the great sailors of the past, and by and large they opened a new world for folk to whom the speech of adventure is a closed volume. To sail "by" is to sail as close to the point from which the wind comes as the ship's lines will allow and as skillful steering will permit. To sail "large" is to sail with the wind. Together they include all possible points of sailing. Therefore "by and large" is a vivid phrase to express the idea of all included.—New York Sun.

Labouchere's Jest.

Labouchere once said that politica audiences generally applauded the sentences that were least intelligible especially if they happened to be quotations from the classics. On one occasion, while addressing a politica audience, he said, "Gentlemen, wha we want is government for the masses by the masses, or, in the words of the old Greek classic, 'Zoe mou sas agapo!'" There was loud and prolonged cheering. The humorist refrained from spoiling the effect by confessing that the words, being translated into English, meant, "O life of me, I love thee!" and were the last line of "Maid of Athens."

GRAND LODGE OFFICERS CORINTHIAN MASONIC

Presentation of Handsome P. M. Jewel to W. Bro. T. A. S. Hay, Treas. of the Lodge

Last night was a field day at Corinthian Masonic Lodge, the occasion being the getting together of the brethren to accord a welcome to distinguished members of the order, Rt. Wor. Bro. W. D. McPherson, of Toronto, Deputy Grand Master, and Most Wor. Bro. E. T. Malone, Toronto, Grand Treasurer. It had been anticipated that the Grand Master Aubrey White would also be present but was unable to come, being detained by illness. He sent his fraternal regards and good wishes.

The work of the evening was conducted by Wor. Bro. F. D. Kerr, Master of Corinthian Lodge, assisted by able and experienced members, and by the officers of the Lodge and of Peterborough Lodge. The able manner in which the work was done, drew very favorable comment from the visitors.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation to Wor. Bro. T.A.S. Hay, one of the oldest members of the Lodge, of a very handsome Past Masters jewel. The presentation was made by the Deputy Grand Master, and some further comment was made by Wor. Bro. Kerr, who spoke in feeling and very complimentary terms of Wor. Bro. Hay's long service and his loyalty and affection to and for the order. He was a skilled master, ever ready to assist others, willing to remain in harness and help, when others retired and grew indifferent. Wor. Bro Hay deserved much more than a jewel, but he knew he had the regard of every mason for his earnest work and fidelity.

Wor. Bro. Hay acknowledged the gift in suitable terms and expressed his thanks to the lodge and members His remarks were warmly applauded.

At the conclusion of the formal meeting, the brethren adjourned to the refreshment room, where a banquet was served, Bro. T. H. Hooper the caterer, setting out a very fine and ample spread. The tables were nicely decorated and the viands delicious.

Wor Bro. F. D. Kerr, filled the chair, and at the conclusion of the banquet, proposed the loyal toast of the King and the Craft.

The toast of the Grand Lodge, and Grand Master and officers, was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. R. E. Wood, in a happy speech. In the course of his remarks, he read a letter written 45 years ago, by the then Grand Master, Most Wor. Bro. Wilson, and addressed to Wor. Bro. John King, who was principal of the Peterboro Grammar and Public school. Bro. King was grandfather of Dr. King, of Charlotte street. The letter expressed pleasure at a recent visit to the local lodges.

Rt Wor. Bro. W. D. McPherson acknowledged the sentiment of Grand Lodge and gave some account of an official and friendly visit made by members of Zetland Lodge of Toronto to Winnipeg. It was a royal visit.

He complimented Corinthian Lodge on having sent to Grand Lodge many distinguished members, and to the order at large, many others. And this should be an incentive to present day members to endeavor to excel and be worthy of the traditions of the local lodges.

Most Wor. Bro. E. T. Malone, protested that he could not make a speech but he could illustrate what he had to say and proceeded to do so. For half an hour, the gathering attentively listened and laughed, and enjoyed the pleasure of hearing the dryest of statistics, enlivened with the dry humor stories and pleasantry. It was a model after-dinner address in every respect.

Rt Wor. Bro. John Crane, District Deputy, in a short address, thanked the brethren for the assistance given him in discharge of his duties, and spoke in high terms of the work of the Grand Master and officers of Grand Lodge.

Wor Bro. E. A. Peck, proposed the toast of the visiting brethren and the toast was responded to in a suitable manner by several of the visiting brethren.

Other toasts were proposed and acknowledged and the gathering broke up after a very pleasant evening.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT'S NEW COLONIZATION PLAN

Details of the New Policy as Announced the Other Day—Every inducement Held Out to Prospective Settlers, Whose Interests will be Safe Guarded by the State—New Purchaser of Northern Timber to Build a Saw Mill, Roads and Bridges and to clear farms.

The plan of the Ontario Government to colonize New Ontario, as announced the other day, is in a large measure the official recognition of, and the placing of the official seal of approval upon a system which already prevails to a limited extent in that country.

A private individual or a corporation under present conditions, buys a tract of timber in New Ontario close to a line of railway and proposes to manufacture the lumber on the ground. A mill is built and houses are erected for the accommodation of the employees and their families. In this way a number of rude villages have sprung up in the new country, villages without any of the advantages of incorporated towns in the older provinces. Perhaps a building is set apart for a church and religious services are occasionally held. A school is a necessity but this is supported in many cases by private contributions and receives no government aid because the conditions upon which such grants are made are not met in these miniature institutions of learning. The lumber is shipped out of the country as soon as manufactured and when the supply of timber is exhausted the plant is dismantled, the village abandoned and the country despoiled of all of its visible assets is left to itself in a shape which possesses no attraction for the prospective settler.

In the majority of cases, however, no mills are built but the rough logs are carried out of the country either by train or by floating them down the streams to the mills in old Ontario. In that case the number of men is limited, there is no village built but all hands live in the camp in the woods and that only during a few months of the year.

Under the Government's new plan Willis K. Jackson, a wealthy lumberman of Buffalo, has purchased 98,000 acres of land at $1.00 an acre. He contracts to erect within a reasonable time a lumber plant to cost not less than $70,000. His agreement gives him no claim to the beds of streams, water power or other such natural advantages. The land is to be divided into farms of 150 acres and Mr. Jackson binds himself to clear 25 acres on each of sixteen farms and to place a settler on each in a space of two years. The Government retains the power to set the price on each farm but the money goes to Mr. Jackson. Before the farms are offered for sale a house and barn must be built and a well dug on each by Mr. Jackson and the purchaser must perform the ordinary duties of a settler before he receives his deed.

In this way the employees of the lumberman are to become the purchasers of his land, at a reasonable price for the Government will take care of that part of the arrangements. He can secure it, too, on easy terms and equipped with buildings and a water supply, something that the settler under the old terms of colonization was obliged to provide for himself. Besides this he has sufficient land ready for cultivation to ensure him a living from the start.

Poverty then, by the new scheme, can no longer bar a settler from making a venture. He is practically receiving aid from the state and is given his own time to pay it back.

Roads and bridges are to be built by Mr. Jackson who is also to erect schools which are to receive the usual assistance from the Government.

The settler on taking possession of his holding finds, as already stated, 25 acres cleared while the remaining 125 acres is covered with timber of various kinds. For this timber he has a convenient market at Mr. Jackson's mill. He may dispose of it on the stump or cut it himself and carry the logs to the manufacturing plant. Here, too, the Government will see that he gets a square deal. There will be no wily timber looker to underestimate the value of his trees as they stand or no unscrupulous scaler to take advantage of the settler in the measurement of his logs. The Government will set the price of his timber just as it does that of his farm. Of any lumber which the farmer may require for additional buildings the supply is convenient and once more the Government will see to it that he is not overcharged. Besides he has the advantage of good schools for his children and the problem of building roads and bridges need not worry him.

Could any man ambitious to settle on a farm of his own get better terms anywhere or be afforded more ample protection in his venture?

It may be asked where does Mr. Jackson stand to realize anything in this transaction. In the first place he has the prospect of easily procuring desirable help to man his plant, a serious problem in the lumber woods these days. Then, besides the sale of land to his employees, he has the opportunity to buy their timber on terms of mutual advantage for it is safe to assume that the Government will see fair play between him and the farmer.

In the official announcement of the new plan of colonization it does not appear that Mr. Jackson is to be required to pay anything in the nature of timber dues. It is probably that this exemption is to repay him for his outlay and that this portion of state income is in this case to be devoted to the benefitting of the settlers and the development of the country, which is to be carried on at the rate of locating sixteen farmers every year.

As the Government retains the title to town sites a town will be built under state supervision so that no one will suffer through the inflation of real estate prices by private speculation.

PROF. ROBERTSON AT ST. PAULS'

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. R. Pogue, who has gone to Ottawa to open the new Westminster church there, the Rev. Prof. Robertson, of Knox College, will occupy the pulpit at St. Paul's to-morrow at both services. Prof. Robertson occupies the chair of apologetics. He came to Canada about two years ago from Scotland. This is his first visit to Peterborough.

Rev. Wm. Roulston, of Belleville, will take the services at St. James' church to-morrow.

At St. Andrews the pulpit will be taken by Rev. Samuel Lundy, of Ireland.

Rev. C. J. Cameron, of Toronto, is to preach at Murray street church to-morrow morning.

Farewell sermons will be preached by the Rev. G. W. Henderson at Charlotte street church to-morrow.

HIGH-CLASS PROGRAM GIVEN AT S. A. TEMPLE

The varied program, as given by the Territorial Band at the Salvation Army Temple last evening, was one of high merit and enjoyment. The visitors were met at the C. P. R. station, and escorted to the Temple by the local Temple Band. His Honor, Judge Huycke was chairman.

Following the concert, supper was served to the visitors in the basement, after which they left for Ottawa, where they will spend Sunday.

POWER QUESTION IN PETERBORO

The power question was the topic of discussion at a special meeting of the City Council last evening, the several phases of the situation as it now stands being thoroughly taken up and debated upon. The first step that must be considered before headway amounting to anything can be got under way is the matter of ridding the main streets of the unsightly and useless poles, which are admitted to be an eyesore and a blemish to the city's beauty. An agreement for their removal has been entered into with Mr. Duckworth, of Toronto, but it appears that the operations are being held back by the C.P.R. Company not complying with their promise to remove their poles at the Simcoe street corner.

The Peterborough Light and Power Company are also willing and ready to remove their poles off the east side of George street and put in iron poles for trolley power and lighting to the stores.

The C.P.R. inspector when in the city some time ago promised the Mayor to get the company's cable diverted through the arcade-way at the rear of the Bank of Nova Scotia, but so far, apparently, no action has been taken to carry out his promise.

It is estimated that once under way all the poles required to be moved could be taken down in about four days.

SEVERE NEURALGIA

Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

There is an excellent reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the most severe cases of neuralgia, sciatica and other complaints in the group known as disorders of the nerves. This group also includes St. Vitus dance, partial paralysis and the common state of extreme nervousness and excitability. Each of these complaints exists because there is something the matter with the nervous system. If the nerves have tone and are strong and healthy you will not have any of these complaints. The reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders is, that they restore weak, run-down nerves to their proper state of tone. They act both directly upon the blood supply and the nerves. The highest medical authorities have noted that numerous troubles generally attack people who are bloodless and that the nerves are toned when the blood is renewed. It is thus seen that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders by curing the cause of the trouble. The following is an instance. Miss Annie Jones, London, Ont., says: "For over a year I was an intense sufferer from neuralgia, which located in my face and head. The pain at times was so intense that I could scarcely keep from screaming, and nothing I was doing for the trouble seemed to help me. As time went on my whole nervous system was affected. At last when I felt that my case was almost hopeless I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The result of this treatment was that I am now enjoying such comfort as I had not known for years, and only those who have suffered from neuralgic pains can realize what a blessing the Pills have been to me."

If you are suffering from any blood or nervous disorder begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which you can get from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

QUEER QUITO.

A City With No Chimneys and Where Carriages Are Curiosities.

Travelers in South America see many strange places, but the queerest of all is probably Quito, the capital of the republic of Ecuador. The first thing which strikes a visitor to that city is that there are no chimneys to the houses.

Charcoal is all that is burned there, and consequently no smoke arises. Another peculiarity is that while the streets are well paved you may pass days in the city and never see a wheeled vehicle.

There are some carriages in Quito, but they are rarely used, and when one of them comes rattling along everybody turns out to look at it as at some curiosity.

A third peculiarity is that while the bulk of the population dress in ponchos (a kind of cloak or loose garment) and short linen trousers a considerable number of people—white men—are to be seen walking about and wearing frock coats and tall hats. These men, the visitor is generally told, are enlightened and cultivated men, natives of Spanish origin, who claim that they form the nation of Ecuadorians. Indians, of course, do not count.

Every white man in Quito who can possibly manage it wears this sort of coat and hat to emphasize his importance and highly civilised condition.

This dress justifies him in calling himself doctor and others in so styling him, and he also thinks that it gives him a claim to come into your apartments without being invited and try to borrow 5 cents from you.

How Malta Became European.

Malta underwent a geographical as well as a political change through its acquisition by England in 1814. It had always been regarded as part of Africa, to which it seemed to belong both from topography and language. After its annexation, however, it was discovered that the garrison was entitled to the higher pay granted to troops employed out of Europe and was therefore more privileged than the soldiers in the Ionian islands. To remedy this parliament passed an act decreeing that so far as pay went Malta should be regarded as part of Europe. It used to be a joke that Malta had become European by act of parliament, and the jest soon became a reality.—London Standard.

The Baldheaded Eagle.

The staid, dignified and homely baldheaded eagle, the glorious emblem of the American republic, mates but once and lives with his one mate until he or she dies. If left a widower—even a young widower—the baldheaded eagle never mates again. He remains alone and disconsolate in the nest on the rocky crag or in the branches of a tall pine that formed his domicile while his mate was alive. No other female eagle can tempt him to forsake his disconsolate life.

Wasted.

"I always was unlucky," he said, with a weary sigh.

"What's the matter now, old man?" his friend asked.

"I've spent over $500 on havin' my boy taught to play the fiddle, and now his hair's all comin' out."—Chicago Record-Herald.

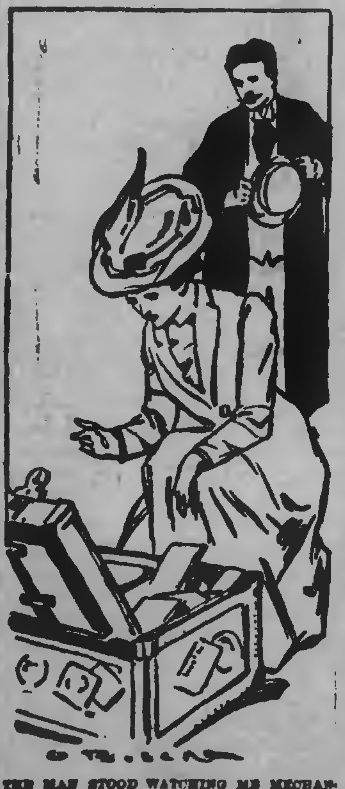
A Gentlemanly Thief

He Was Very Quick In Returning Stolen Funds

By F. A. MITCHEL

A few years ago I was one of those lone traveling maidens. An orphan, I inherited sufficient means to go where I liked and, desiring to see something of the world and study foreign languages and cultivate a taste for art, I sailed for Italy.

Travelers in Italy, especially southern Italy, need to be very careful of their possessions. On leaving one's room at any boarding place it is dangerous to leave anything of value unlocked. One morning I went out to visit the Coliseum, forgetting to lock my trunk, in which I kept my valuables, especially my book of travelers' checks, which I used to meet current expenses. I happened to remember my neglect when gazing upon that arena in which so many gladiators, so many Christian martyrs, gave up their lives. Small things present are of more importance to us than important matters past. I hurried back to my hotel and up to my room. There, standing in the center of the room, stood a well dressed young man looking around as though he scarcely knew what he was doing.



THE MAN STOOD WATCHING ME MECHANICALLY.

My anxiety for my checks overcame any fear I might have had, though I admit the man did not look dangerous, so I made a dash for my trunk, raised the lid and looked in a corner where I kept the book. It was gone! The man stood watching me mechanically and knew by what I did, for I said nothing, that I missed something. I looked up at him with an accusing expression on my face, and he turned pale.

There was a bell cord in the room hanging from the ceiling—obsolete in America—and I started for it. The man placed himself between me and it, but instead of regarding me with a threatening look gave me one of appeal. I paused, and we stood confronting one another.

He said something to me in Italian which I did not understand, having just arrived in the country. Then he asked me in French if I spoke that language. Since I could not carry on a conversation in French I made no reply. I pointed to my trunk and by signs indicated that if he would surrender what I missed he might go free. He shrugged his shoulders and by his expression asserted his innocence of the theft. Then, taking a gold pencil from his pocket and an old letter, he handed them to me and by signs asked me to write something. I guessed that he wished me to put down the amount of money I had lost and wrote, "Three thousand francs." Then he spoke the French words "Quel nonome," which I understand, and with my name also. Then, bowing politely, he walked out of the room.

Try a Review Want ad. It pays.

What to do I did not know and hesitated until it was too late to do anything. Then I ran downstairs and told the story to the proprietor. He at once sent for a carabineer, or one of the national police, and gave my experience to him in the Italian tongue. The carabineer asked a great many questions and took a lot of notes and then went away.

Two hours later I was still deliberating how to obtain money for my immediate expenses when I was handed an envelope bearing my name. I tore it opened and uncovered three notes for 1,000 francs each. There was not another thing in the envelope—not a word of explanation.

Never was I more astonished. A thief who would take my checks and then cash them was a wonder. But I was destined to another surprise the next morning when I received through the mail my book of checks. Yet the return of the checks was not so remarkable, because they could not very well be cashed without an identification book I carried in my corsage.

Time passed, and the mystery was not explained. Then some friends of mine came to Rome who entered the social world there and gave me an opportunity of getting an occasional glimpse of it myself. At a ball given at the Quirinal palace, to which my friends gained me an invitation, I was destined to another surprise. A lady whom I had met said to me: "Prince Palloni desires to be presented to you. May I bring him?"

I answered her that I should be pleased to meet any friend of hers, and a little later I saw her advancing on the arm of a young man wearing several decorations on his breast. On being introduced he bowed so low that I did not see his face, but when I did see it it expressed mingled embarrassment and merriment. He was the thief I had found in my room.

There was probably cause for his amusement in the expression of my face. Notwithstanding the return of my checks and the amount they called for I had never doubted that this man was a thief. Had I not come suddenly upon him in my room, found my checks missing, and had he not shown every evidence of having taken them? His making memoranda of my name and the amount of my loss I had regarded a clever trick to throw me momentarily off my guard so that he might make his escape. The return of the checks I had accounted for on various theories; the 3,000 francs I had received had remained an unsolvable mystery.

So I stood staring at him with as much wonder as if my great-grandfather's ghost had suddenly loomed up before me. He, on the contrary, had an advantage. He had seen me, recognized me and had asked to be presented to me, knowing of our previous meeting, and had prepared himself for this second one.

"You are surprised," he said, with a very pleasant smile which revealed white teeth under his dark mustache.

"I should think I have reason to be surprised. You speak English. Why did you not address me in that tongue when"—

"When I was pilfering in your room at the G. hotel? How did I know that you spoke that language? I tried you in Italian, then French. Meanwhile I had become terror stricken at the position I was in—caught in a lady's chamber and her money missing. How could I ever explain to the world? In the incident I saw men staring me in the face."

"But how"—

"How did I come to be there? A friend of mine who was ill in the G. hotel begged me to come and see him. I went and sent up my card. He directed that I be shown to his room. A stupid waiter piloted me and, leaving me before your door, left me. I knocked and received no reply. Supposing my friend might not be able to speak loud enough for me to hear, I turned the knob and went in. Surprised to see no one there, I was gaping about me when you entered."

"Why did I not think of something like that before? Well, where did you go when you left me? Who sent me the 3,000 francs? Who stole my checks?"

"One reply at a time, if you please. Frightened out of my equanimity, I left the hotel by a rear passage, then went to my bank, drew 3,000 francs and sent them to you at once."

"Why did you do that?"

"Because you needed the money, and I hoped that it would induce you to refrain from setting the police on my track. As to your checks, I know nothing about them."

"How do you account for their loss?"

"Some one, doubtless a servant of the hotel, entered your room and, finding your trunk open, took them."

"And could not realize on them without the identification that was given me with the checks, which I carry always on my person."

"I wished on that memorable morning that you had carried all your belongings on your person."

It seemed to me now that I had been very stupid about the whole affair. I should not have taken a gentleman for a thief and told the prince so, but he smiled and said that there were plenty of thieves who were more aristocratic looking than himself. I asked for his address that I might return the 3,000 francs he had sent me, for which I now thanked him, inasmuch as at the time I received them I certainly needed them. Then he asked me to dance, and we whirled away, I feeling very strange at dancing with a thief.

The more I thought about the prince's action upon being innocently caught in my room with my trunk open and my property missing the more I admired not only his presence of mind, but his ability to decide quickly the best way out of the matter. In an instant he decided on a course that was his only hope of escaping temporarily from the critical position he was in and hit upon the best method of escaping permanently. His taking my name and address and the amount I had lost accomplished the first, and his sending it to me anonymously accomplished the second.

The adventure in the end was a great advantage to me. The prince, who was given to archaeology, showed me many things that I would never have seen without his guidance, and his little lectures upon them were delightful. In addition to this, he was of great benefit to me in a social way. He seemed to feel that he must make amends for the unfortunate contretemps in which he was concerned.

I have returned to America, and a letter from my Italian friend announces that he will be over himself in the next steamer.

"It was a terrible situation," said Dubbleigh. "There were we, hub deep in the sand and the tide rising. At the end of an hour the water was up to the floor level of the tonneau, and then I managed to get hold of an old cuss with a team of horses, and he hauled us out."

"By George, that was a narrow escape. What did you give the old fellow for rescuing you?" said Higgs.

"I offered the old duffer $10, but he was a retired sea captain, and he attached the car for salvage," said Dubbleigh.—Harper's Weekly.

WILL HAY FEVER BE NEXT "INCURABLE" DISEASE TO BE CURED?

Wonderful Results Obtained by Using Tablets Made From Fresh Fruit Juices.—Lady In Cornwall Centre Tried Them.

Genuine Case Of Severe Hay Fever Completely Eradicated From The System By "Fruit-a-tives", The Famous Fruit Medicine.

"I suffer tortures every year with Hay Fever—please tell me frankly if "Fruit-a-tives" will do me any good". You are saying this to yourself as you read this article. First of all, read the facts about this distressing trouble. Hay Fever is not a nervous affliction. There is probably no actual disease of the nerves. But the nerves—and in fact the whole system—is affected by the condition of the blood. The nerves are intensely irritated by impure blood, due to defective action of the bowels, kidneys and skin. In fully ninety per cent of the cases of Hay Fever, there is chronic Constipation, Weak Stomach, Indigestion and hot, dry skin. The great truth of this is shown by the fact that sprays, gargles and other local treatment do not cure. They cannot. The trouble does not lie in the nose and throat but in the stomach, bowels, kidneys and skin. This is why "Fruit-a-tives" cured Mrs. Kemp of Hay Fever.

CORNWALL CENTRE, ONT., NOVEMBER 27th. 1911

I was a martyr to Hay Fever for a long time—probably fifteen years—and I suffered terribly at times. I consulted many physicians and took their treatment—and I tried every remedy I heard of as good for Hay Fever. But nothing did me any good. Then I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and this remedy cured me completely. I am now well, and I wish to say to every sufferer from Hay Fever—"Try Fruit-a-tives". This fruit medicine cured me when every treatment failed and I believe it is a perfect cure for this dreadful disease". MRS. HENRY KEMP.

Impure blood causes the itching eyes, sore throat, irritated nose that we know as Hay Fever. As this is true, the sensible thing to do is to purify the blood by taking "Fruit-a-tives". Mrs. Kemp took "Fruit-a-tives" and is cured.

Why not let "Fruit-a-tives" regulate your bowels, kidneys and skin? Why not let "Fruit-a-tives" give you health, and strength and appetite? Why not let "Fruit-a-tives" so build up the system that you won't have Hay Fever this summer? "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. It is particularly suited to the use of women because it is pleasant to take and acts mildly and gently. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. Dealers in all parts of Canada sell "Fruit-a-tives". But if you are unable to obtain them in your neighborhood, they will be sent you postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

REAL VALUE OF PLAY.

A Brief Period Snatched From the Regular Routine Aids Health.

Self improvement societies that have tried to find the best way to live have never discovered anything more valuable than play, says Collier's Weekly. A man may shake up a continent by his energy or build kingdoms by his brains, but so far as his personal life is concerned he has been a failure if he has not learned to play.

Play, of course, is not confined to games. It may be a walk in the woods, a row upon the river, a sail upon the lake. To some making a garden is play, as to others is chopping wood. To play is to follow the irresponsible inclination which gives the most pleasure with the least mental strain and bodily wear.

Ideal play is a brief period of care free living snatched from the regular routine. It is enjoying the pleasure of being alive; it is absorbing from the earth and air and sun without conscious effort. More and more we are trying to teach the children how to play, but we do not know how ourselves. Before us always is the bogy of wasting time, and the devil of disease, old age, misery and failure never invented a falser bogy. We send our children to the public playground and go on ourselves getting soggy and heavy and gloomy and nervous.

Suffragette Activity.

The women of New York state are trying to bring the Empire State into the suffrage group to follow California. New York city is about torn asunder with suffrage doings. There are nine local organizations. Mrs. Clarence Mackay's branch opened a circulating suffrage library recently. The Woman's Political union held a meeting in Carnegie hall to listen to Mrs. Pankhurst, and the collection they took up amounted to $9,000, and with this they are branching out in various directions. A votes for women ball is the next affair, and then comes the suffrage parade, when they count on having 30,000 women in line, with banners and floats, to say nothing of a company of cavalry. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont has opened a magnificent clubhouse, and her next venture is a daily paper. The woman's suffrage party is starting a magazine that will compete with the Ladies' Home Journal in advertising and furnish such reading as women have never had dished up to them.

DISRAELI AS A SON.

His Generosity In Becoming Reconciled to His Father.

My mother was among the first of Disraeli's acquaintances to recognize his great ability, and she saw a great deal of him when at Mrs. Norton's, when he was a young man about town. She did not see very much of him after he had once entered upon his political career. Here, however, is a little anecdote which is very characteristic and amusing. My mother had a great admiration for the "Curiosities of Literature" and was anxious to make the acquaintance of Disraeli's father, but there was a difficulty about this, as at the moment he was not on good terms with his father.

However, he appeared one day with his father in tow. As soon as they were both seated Disraeli turned around and, looking at his father as if he were a piece of ornamental china, said to my mother: "Madam, I have brought you my father. I have become reconciled to my father on two conditions. The first was that he should come to see you and the second that he should pay my debts."

A Bill That Wasn't Paid.

A medical man in France was asked to be present at a duel in his professional capacity. He got up early, traveled some miles, "flamed" the swords and ministered to his client, who was slightly wounded. When both honor and wound were healed he looked for his fees and sent in a bill for $10. The patient replied through his wife, who wrote: "I am told that between men there is a question of delicacy which forbids even the slightest appearance of trade in such a matter. Neither the doctors nor the seconds are brought on the ground for money. If you persist in your claim I shall, to my great regret, be obliged to leave to others the duty of settling this fine point with you."

Domestic Repartee.

"You will remember," said she haughtily, "that you proposed to me four times before I consented to marry you. You wouldn't take no for an answer."

"I remember," he replied sadly. "It seems to me that every time you have changed your mind I've got the worst of it."—Exchange.

Freshen Up Last Season's Gown With a Tunic.

BRILLIANT GOWN IN CHIFFON AND VELVET.

If a silk frock of last season needs freshening up there is nothing that will do the trick so well as to drape it with a chiffon tunic. These tunics come in lovely embroidered and beaded designs already made in the shops, and the most inexperienced dressmaker can fit them to the frock they are to adorn.

The costume illustrated has a chiffon tunic weighted with a deep hem of velvet and also with heavy embroidery and gold cord. The tunic falls in slender lines over a drop skirt of satin. The waist line is high, in the prevailing empire style. The long tight sleeves of satin add to the dignity of this costume. But the brilliant color scheme—which of course does not show in the reproduction—makes one forget the severe lines, for the satin is rich dark red, and the red chiffon tunic above the red satin lining is made brilliant by the gold embroidery.

Story of a Stingy Husband.

In a lively article in the current number of Farm and Fireside on the relations between husbands and wives on the subject of home finances there are several interesting reports of actual cases. Following is a report of a stingy husband:

"A girl I knew in my youth was married after a short acquaintance to a scholarly professional man. He had been brought up under hard conditions in a strenuous school of poverty. She was the daughter of wealth and had never been denied a reasonable wish. Her husband is what is called a good provider. He bought amply for the table and was not averse to having plenty of fuel and sufficient house furnishings to keep his home comfortable and dignified. He simply declined to let Betty buy so much as 5 cents' worth of anything. He did not wish her to have accounts at shops, nor did she desire them. When she wanted to buy anything for herself or the children he accompanied her, superintended her purchases, examined every pair of stockings and every yard of muslin and frowned upon ruching and trimmings as needless, drawing out his well filled pocketbook and paying the bill with a flourish when the shopping had been done to his satisfaction. She never had any money in her possession except when her mother sent it to her as a gift, and when this was done she took excellent care to keep Reuben in ignorance. Once the good man, for in some ways he was good, was compelled to leave home for a few days. He carefully counted the amount that his wife would spend for the house during his absence. Then he lost his train and had to wait over another day. Coming home, he asked her for the cash and put it back in his own pocket for the next twenty-four hours."

WOMAN'S HAIR

Here's a Preparation That Makes Hair Fascinating

PARISIAN SAGE is the ideal hair tonic and beautifier of the present time.

It is compounded on the most advanced scientific principles, and nothing on the market to-day can compare with it.

It accomplishes so much more than the ordinary tonics, and does it so quickly that users are astonished.

PARISIAN SAGE kills the dandruff germs and eradicates dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Since its introduction into America it has become a prime favorite with women of refinement.

PARISIAN SAGE gives a fascinating lustre to women's hair and makes it beautiful. It makes the hair grow luxuriantly; it is the daintiest and most refreshing hair dressing that science has produced, and has not a particle of grease or stickiness in it.

A large bottle of PARISIAN SAGE costs but 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and dealers everywhere. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package.

Billy Phenomenon

He Wasted No Time

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"There ain't nobody going to take Florine to the dance tomorrow night," observed Henry Johnson idly. The little group of young men gathered about the stove in the village store, exchanged sly glances and then resumed their stolid staring at the ruddy coals.

"How do you know that?" demanded Sandy Peters aggressively. He sat a little in the background, and it was generally understood that his violent red hair provided such warmth for his body that he never drew near the fire no matter how cold the weather. "What do you know about that?" repeated Sandy Peters, thrusting out his freckled chin. Florine Gray was his cousin.

"Her mother told my mother that Florine wouldn't go with nobody that had asked her," explained Henry Johnson hastily.

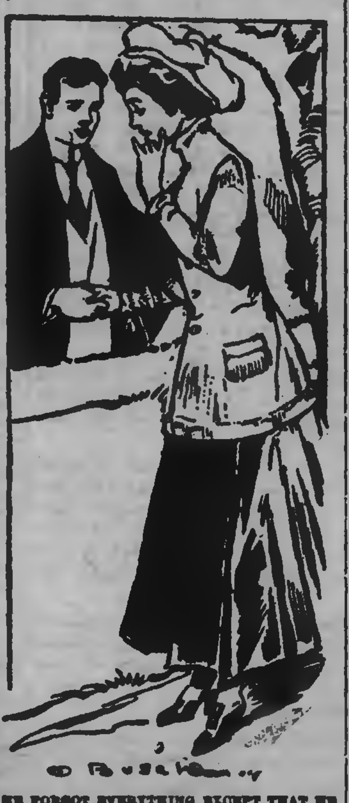
"Anybody else got anything to say about my cousin Florine?" demanded Sandy belligerently, and a general shuffling of feet, followed by intense stillness, having given the impression that so far as the circle of young men was concerned the subject was closed, Sandy arose, yawned, stretched himself and went home.

After it might be assumed that Sandy had reached home, conversation was resumed. Ruel Lane was the one to break the heavy silence. "I guess there ain't nobody around here good enough for Florine Gray."

"Did she turn you down, too?" asked Jacob Leonard quickly, and the four others laughed loudly at the confusion of the two.

"Never mind; all the rest us will be there," consoled Lem White—"leastways, all of us except Billy Phenomenon here."

"And why not me?" demanded Billy from his seat on a cracker barrel,



HE FORGOT EVERYTHING EXCEPT THAT HE LOVED HER.

from which point of vantage he had watched the circle around the fire.

"You never go to dances. You can't get a girl to go with you," grinned Jacob Leonard.

"I never asked one yet," retorted Billy, growing red about his ears.

"Why not?" came in a chorus from the others.

"Because," said Billy slowly—"because somehow there wasn't one that I wanted to go with, I guess—no, I don't mean that they're not all sweet and pretty and too nice for us to be talking about down here, only somehow"— He paused for the right word, the inoffensive word to express himself, for most of the boys had sisters, and Billy Phenomenon was too chivalrous to offend.

"Ah, you're stuck up like Florine Gray! I guess you better go and ask her to go to the party, Billy. Two such aristocrats as you and Florine ought to go together for sure."

Billy's hands clinched, and another wave of red invaded his smooth brown cheeks. "I guess we better stop talking about the girls," he said quietly and left the room, knowing that they were laughing at him.

Mrs. Deacon Price had brought him from an orphan asylum, and the Prices had adopted him. His name had been William Philemon, but his little lisping tongue had twisted "Philemon" into something that sounded like "Phenomenon," and from the beginning it had been his nickname in the village. The Prices had given him their own name, too, but he was generally called "Billy Phenomenon," and he grew not to mind it.

The Prices had educated him, and when he returned from the academy the deacon had died and he had taken the management of the big farm on his broad young shoulders, and he was making a success of it. But Riverdale people were narrow, and they had no welcome for strangers in their midst and consequently they never forgot that, although Billy Price might be Mrs. Deacon Price's adopted son and probable heir to all the Price money and broad acres, nevertheless he was an unknown waif from the orphan asylum and not quite on a level with the rest of them who had been born in the houses they lived in and expected to die in.

To taunt Billy Phenomenon with a tenderness for Florine Gray was like touching an open wound.

As he walked toward home Billy Phenomenon turned over in his mind the possibility of his asking Florine Gray to go to the party the next night. He had never invited a girl to go anywhere in his life, and it was a custom in Riverdale social circles for young men to escort their girl friends and sweethearts to all the merrymakings in the neighborhood, and it was a very rare occurrence that a girl cared to go without masculine escort. It was an open acknowledgment of being without admirers.

Of course Florine Gray would never be in that predicament save of her own choosing, for she was the acknowledged belle of Riverdale and could have had her pick among a dozen of the most eligible young men. As a matter of fact every youth gathered about the village stove that night had asked Florine if he might escort her to the party—that is, every one save Billy Phenomenon. And Florine had sweetly and graciously refused every one without explanation, and the chagrined youths found solace in the thought that Florine was "stuck up" and proud. Even her cousin, Sandy Peters, had made a half joking attempt to invite Florine, but he retired in confusion at the first shake of her sunny head.

"Sandy, boy," Florine had smiled, "if you take me to the party who will take Gracie Blake? I suppose Jacob Leonard won't mind that."

"I should say not!" exploded Sandy. "You're right, Florine. I guess I better take Gracie, and you can go with whoever you want to. I might as well go and ask her, eh?"

"Yes, do," urged Florine, and he went.

Billy Phenomenon knew nothing about all this, but he was thinking seriously of asking Florine to go. Perhaps she had refused all the other fellows for the reason that she was hoping that the city fellow who had shown her so much attention last summer might come down to Riverdale. He had heard through devious channels that had had its source with the girl in the postoffice that the city chap had sent several picture postal cards to Florine after his departure.

"If she's waiting for that fellow to ask her and he don't maybe she'll be sorry she didn't accept one of the boys," pondered Billy Phenomenon as he dreamed along the road toward home. "It will be too bad if she has to stay home after all." His heart beat unsteadily as he thought about Florine Gray and realized the utter hopelessness of his love for her.

He was passing the Gray place now, and his steps lagged, as they always did. The house set back under the tall, bare locust trees, and a soft light was diffused through the drawn yellow shades. It was growing dark now, and he could see something white leaning against the private hedge that surrounded the orchard. It must be Florine Gray. She wore a white sweater coat and a white cap.

Florine did not hear him coming. She was leaning against one of the slender young trees inside the hedge, and she was sobbing softly, quietly.

Billy Phenomenon stood frozen in his tracks. Florine Gray, the lovely, fortunate girl, belle of Riverdale, crying—for what? He could think of only one answer. The city chap had neglected to invite her to the party. For an instant he longed to annihilate the city chap as he had yearned to do in the summer time. In his mind's eye the air was full of immaculate neckties polished tan shoes and snowy panama hats. He forgot his shyness; he forgot that he hardly knew Florine save in his dreams; he forgot everything except that he loved her and she was in trouble.

He leaned over the hedge. "Florine!" he called gently.

"Oh!" cried Florine sharply and turned about, but he could not see her face in the darkness. "Who is it? What do you want?" Her voice quavered.

"It's me—Billy Phenomenon. I—er—I was going to ask you if you'd go to the party with me tomorrow night," stammered Billy excitedly.

Florine swayed toward him and grasped the hedge with little white, cold hands. "Why—why—Billy, what made you ask me?" she questioned eagerly.

"Because I wanted you to go with me. I'd be proud to—of course you don't know how I feel about it." Billy was talking rapidly now. His hands were covering Florine's little cold ones, and, wonder of wonders, she had not withdrawn them. Their young faces were close together, and he could feel the quick intake of her breath. "I never dared ask you before, Florine, but I've thought a lot about it. I don't suppose you'd go with me with all the other chances you can have." He felt a sudden depression in her silence.

"Oh, Billy Phenomenon, why haven't you asked me before?" half cried Florine. "I've been wanting you to. I've held off going with any one every time for a year hoping you'd ask me to go. And you wanted me all the time?"

"Yes," gasped Billy, his smooth cheek touching her satiny one now. "I want you all the rest of my life, Florine!" And their lips met across the hedge in a kiss of understanding.

NERVOUS·DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so."

Life Insurance

Marriage is a good thing. It is a part of the duty every young man owes to his race and to the community. And one of the first duties after marriage, is life insurance. The young man of riches may scoff at this, but riches sometimes "take wings" while a life insurance policy in a sound company is something that is not affected by mischance or ill fortune. The young man who depends upon his own efforts for a living, more than any other young man, should follow marriage with life insurance, and thus provide surely for a wife, or for a wife and babies, against the inevitable. Such a young man may demur at this, on the theory that he "can't afford it." But youth is not inclined to consider all possibilities in such a case. Life insurance is one of the things that should be afforded at the expense of something less important. If a young man smokes, he surely can curtail his tobacco supply by one cigar a day, or he can save an equivalent by cutting off something else he does not need. The cost of a single medium price cigar a day will pay the premium on a life-insurance policy, say, for $1,000. And thus, by a slight concession as to a single habit, some necessary provisions may be made for the future.

You will find the most up-to-date policy of to-day issued by the SUN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

COOLED THEIR WRATH.

Bailey's Way When He Caught a Tartar on the Telephone.

When the telephone bell rang the senior partner said to the junior partner:

"If that is that man Bailey just you tell him what you think of him, even if you lay yourself liable to a fine for violent language."

The junior partner relieved himself of a few abusive epithets, but presently after a brief pause he expressed the same sentiments couched in much milder terms. Said the junior partner:

"There you go crawfishing again. Why can't you stick to what you said in the first place?"

The junior partner dropped the receiver.

"Supposing you come and say it yourself," he said.

The senior partner did so, but after a little he, too, repeated his harangue with all the backbone left out.

"It's no use," he said. "You can't curse a man twice over the phone who answers your first outburst with 'I beg your pardon. I didn't quite catch that. Say it again, please.' That is Bailey's way. You try to say it again, but the second time it sounds pretty rank even in your own ears, and your tempest of rage moderates into a tranquil breeze." —New York Times.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

UGANDA'S ROYAL SUICIDES.

Kings Who Drank Poison When Sickness or Age Threatened.

Some of the curious customs of a pastoral people of Uganda, known as the Banyoro, are told by the Rev. John Roscoe. He said that when once a king was enthroned his person became sacred, and his food was restricted to milk and beef from a sacred herd of cows, which were kept apart from other cows.

The Banyoro monarch never allowed himself to grow old or his faculties to become impaired. When he thought he was going to be seriously ill he called a council, arranged the state affairs with the principal chiefs without giving them any reason for thinking that he was about to die and dismissed them to carry out his instructions.

Then he returned to his private house and summoned his chief wife and ordered her to bring a cup of poison. He drank the contents and in a few minutes was dead. The widow thereupon called one or two of the principal chiefs, who prepared the body for burial. For as long as possible the death was kept secret. Each day the milk and beef were brought to the royal residence, and inquirers were informed that the king was suffering from an indisposition which required him to rest.

In the meantime the chiefs were engaged in making private arrangements to guard the body and protect the sacred herds of cattle during the wars which would follow on the announcement of the death. When the news leaked out the sons of the dead king fought among themselves, brother killing brother. The survivor became king and attended his father's funeral.

At the ceremony several of the widows of the deceased king were clubbed to death, as were the cowmen and the cook. Other widows took poison. All the bodies were placed in the grave, the idea being that their ghosts should minister to the ghost of the king in the next world.—London Standard.

BUNCH THEIR WEDDINGS.

Only One Day in the Year For Marriages in Plougastel, Brittany.

In the city of Plougastel, in Brittany, France, all marriages take place on one and the same day. The men are all fishermen, many of them going as far as the Newfoundland banks, and are at home only during a few months in the winter. One day in early February is set apart for the weddings. Little courting is done, but much haggling over the dowry of the girls. They have to bring a certain quantity of linen, chickens, pigs and vegetables. Frequently a match is broken off because the girl's father refuses to add a sack of potatoes to the dowry.

On the day set the inhabitants of the entire region go to Plougastel. The whole population goes to church to hear mass, to take communion and to witness the wedding ceremonies. Often fifty or more couples are united on the same day. Bride and groom do not walk together until the ceremony has been completed. For the rest of this and the whole of the next day every house is open to receive guests and to provide food and drink for them. On the evening of the second day the young men carry the dowries of the brides to the houses of the grooms. There they dance and frolic until early morning, and, after they leave, the couple are for the first time together and alone. During the remainder of the year no marriages are concluded.—Leslie's.

Brutal Conduct.

"But why are you determined to get a divorce from your husband?"

"Because he is an absolute brute."

"You amaze me. You used to say that he was as gentle as a child."

"Yes, that's what I used to say. But you ought to see him now! Listen! Since the baby began teething nothing would quiet the little darling but being allowed to pull his papa's whiskers. And when he found that out what do you think he did? He went down and had his beard shaved off, that's what! Do you think I'd live with a man that has that sort of disposition?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Reasons.

Fishes, fishes in the stream,
What makes you shine with such a gleam?

"The sun and water make me shine
That I to children may seem fine."

Birdies, birdies on the bough,
How do you sing so sweetly—how?

"The air in blowing fans my throat,
Delighting children with each note."

Flowers, flowers in the grass,
Why are you fragrant as we pass?

"The earth and sun and raindrops make My smell so sweet for children's sake."

So fishes, birdies, flowers—all
Live at children's beck and call.
—Philadelphia Record.

PERILS OF THE CONGO

MR. AND MRS. HARRIS TELL OF LIFE IN BLACK AFRICA.

Canadian Missionary and His Wife Whose Evidence Led to the Reforms of the Rubber Atrocities Have Passed Through Thrilling Adventures in Pestilential Marshes and Tropical Forests.

Recently there arrived back in London a Canadian lady and gentleman who, as they sit together in an office in the Vauxhall Bridge Road, within sound of electric tramcars and the tooting of motor-horns and all the noise of modern civilization, have recent memories of tropical forests silent as death except for the cries of wild beasts, and of great journeys through pestilential swamps, and of adventures among black races to whom a white woman was marvellous.

These two people are Rev. John H. Harris and Mrs. Harris, both natives of Ontario, and some days ago they told some of their adventures to a London paper.

Both of them are well known to all those people who helped to overturn the hideous regime of King Leopold in the Congo. It was purely upon their evidence as missionaries and as eye-witnesses of the atrocious brutalities of the old Belgian administration that the Congo Reform Society based its great indictment, which triumphed at last over all the enemies of truth and humanity. Now for a year this man and wife, comrades in courage and suffering and peril, have been visiting the Congo again to investigate the conditions of the natives in the rubber countries under the new administration, and to go beyond the limit of those territories in a general exploration of the conditions of life and labor among the natives of Southern Nigeria and other parts of Central Africa.

The tribes in the territories explored by Mr. and Mrs. Harris include the Aruwimi peoples, famous for their hostility to Stanley's expedition; the Bangalas, who suffered from the atrocious cruelties of Lacroix and Arnold; the warlike Budjas, oppressed by the iron hand of the Lothaire's administration; and the Mongos, decimated by the Abir. They also made a tour of a wide area in the Kasai territory, where in many districts the natives are in revolt against the present system of taxation and labor.

Mr. Harris has already published several reports on his investigations. He gladly admits that under the new regime atrocities appear to have ceased. In territories where King Leopold's agents formerly ruled by organized torture the natives have new hope and a chance for ordinary human life. Nevertheless, there are still many abuses which call for remedy, and the new system of taxation presses heavily upon people who find it difficult to provide the number of francs demanded by the officials. Yet anything is better than the old tribute of rubber, the very memory of which still has a terror for the native mind.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris traveled for the greater part of their long journeys on foot, with a body of native carriers with their stores and baggage. They suffered many hardships, and the long marches were a severe test for a lady's courage. For days on end they tramped their way through the tropical undergrowth of great forests, where the high trees shut out the light of the sun, and at night they would pitch their camp and sleep in a little tent, in these solitudes. Mr. Harris, tired out, would sleep soundly, but Mrs. Harris, with more highly-strung nerves, would often lie awake listening to the strange sounds that came from the dark forest.

"I used to hear," she said, "the cries of birds, which sounded like wild shrieks, or with harsh and horrible notes. Then there would be the bellowing of a hippopotamus, and sometimes the fierce voice of a leopard." The natives were afraid of leopards, and many a time at night they would abandon their posts of duty round the tent and steal away, because they believed they heard the approach of one of these beasts, leaving the open tent unguarded.

On one march in the Bangala district the husband and wife had to walk across miles of marsh-land, so boggy that they sank up to the knees. A frightful smell rose from the rotten vegetation and foul water, which splashed them up to the neck, wetting them to the skin. "It was just like walking over a prodigious sponge," said Mr. Harris. Wet continually, they tramped for eight days at the rate of 20 miles a day, and one day, when they had been walking from 7 in the morning until 8 at night in search of a village which they had been told existed on a tributary of the Bangala river, they were lashed by a terrific tornado. Shivering and soaked they arrived at the spot where they hoped to get shelter and refreshment to find that the village no longer existed. They were without water and food for the carriers, they were exhausted by their long journey, they had been cut and pricked in the bush, and now, when they realized that they would have to push on further, some of the tall fellows, who were strong men and brave men, broke down and wept.

DIABETES

Sanol's Antidiabetes, the great discovery of a German Specialist, is the only practical and thoroughly tested Remedy for Diabetes-mellitus. It has a specific action against the poisons of the disease, and by its use the secretion of sugar almost immediately abates and disappears altogether after a short time. So long as the disease has not reached its last stages, a cure can be effected with "Sanol's Antidiabetes."

Open wounds heal after a little time, the disagreeable thirst disappears, after a few days the general health of the patient becomes speedily improved.

Sanol's Antidiabetes is used with an alternate diet regimen based on long experience in the study of this disease.

All sufferers from this terrible and hitherto considered incurable disease should not hesitate to give "Sanol's Antidiabetes" a trial, as we feel absolutely certain that it will justify all the claims we make for it.

This remedy is perfectly harmless to the organic system, being composed only of herbs and extracts, and containing no poisonous or injurious matter whatever.

The Demon of the Niger.

The natives inhabiting the country near the source of the Niger believe that a devil lives in the rock from whence the river springs. They are very superstitious and greatly fear this devil, who is supposed to kill any person who dares to look at the source. Whenever the natives are showing a stranger the spot they cover up their faces and walk backward in the direction of the spring, pointing toward it with outstretched hand behind the back.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

BUFFALO EXCURSIONISTS BROKE THROUGH WHARF

Two Hundred and Fifty People Were Thrown Into the Water and Twenty Were Drowned—Eight Bodies Recovered and Six Identified.

Buffalo, June 24.—Between fifteen and twenty people were drowned and a number injured last night when a 60-feet dock at Eagle Park, Grand Island, Niagara River, collapsed under the weight of 250 people, precipitating them into twelve feet of water. Eight bodies have been recovered, of whom six have been identified.

The known dead are: Mrs. McKee, Mary McKee, Mrs. McKee's 10-year-old daughter; Mrs. Richmeyer and her 10-year-old son; Mrs. Gallagher, Cecilia Kelly, 9 years old.

Missing: Mrs. Heilstrom and four-year-old baby; Viola Semf, Miss Irene Thomas, Mrs. Westfall, and Mrs. Hyde. So far as known, all of the victims were residents of Buffalo.

Fix Brothers, owners of the excursion steamer line to which the Henry Koeber and the Lottie Koeber belong, said late Saturday night that at some 250 persons were thrown into the water and that eight bodies have been recovered. The boats had carried one load back to Buffalo, and were at the dock taking on the remainder, when the accident occurred.

The excursionists were preparing to return to Buffalo after an outing at the park, and between 350 and 400 persons were on the dock to take the steamer, when the underpinning gave way and hurled those nearest the boat into the river. The dock was V-shaped with the landing at the apex. It is at the foot of a high embankment and its approach is by a long flight of stairs. The current in the river at this point, which is twelve miles above Niagara Falls, is eight miles an hour.

The outing was under the auspices of Court Amherst, Lodge No. 232, I.O.F. of Black Rock, and was for the benefit of sick brothers.

TWO POLES WERE KILLED AT A TORONTO CHRISTENING

In Hope of Healing Old Quarrels Toronto Poles Invite Italian "Boss" and Water-Boy to a Festival, But Trouble Breaks Out and Two Poles Are Killed—Elder Italian Is Still at Large—Youth Arrested.

Toronto, June 24.—One man shot dead and another so badly stabbed that he died later at the Western Hospital was the climax of a christening ceremony held by the Polish colony at Humber Bay last evening Joe Napoli, an 18-year-old Italian water-boy was arrested on a charge of murder after a chase from the Humber to Mimico. Big Frank, an Italian sub-forman, is being searched for by detectives in the vicinity of Mimico, as he is believed to be an accomplice of Napoli.

Members of the Polish colony had been holding a celebration all day yesterday in honor of a christening. The two Italians, who worked in the same construction gang as some of the Poles were invited to take part in the festivities. There were several kegs of beer on hand and the afternoon was devoted to a drunken carousal.

There has always been bad blood between the two nationalities and the invitation to the festivities was extended in an endeavor to establish more friendly relations between the Poles and the Italians.

Big Frank has had several quarrels with the residents of the colony, but of late he had been treating them with more consideration.

When he called yesterday he was accompanied by Napoli. After partaking freely of the liquor and refreshments a discussion arose between Mike Gyrada, aged 23, and Napoli. The two left the house and walked to the top of the hill, a short distance away, while the others stood on the doorstep. Gyrada called Napoli some bad names, which the latter resented. Napoli drew a revolver from his pocket and shot Gyrada in the breast, just below the heart. He fell to the ground and died almost instantly.

John Masternak, a chum of the murdered man, then rushed to the scene and grappled with Napoli. He was followed by Big Frank, who, seeing his compatriot getting the worst of the fight, drew a knife and stabbed Masternak several times in the neck and shoulders.

Thomas Masternak went to his brother's assistance, and succeeded in taking a revolver from Napoli, who was still standing near Gryada's body with the revolver in his hand.

The shots attracted the attention of Thomas Quinn and D. Shadwell, who live near by. They both rushed from their houses. Shadwell secured a large revolver, and with Quinn ran to the scene of the fight. In the meantime Big Frank and Napoli had started to run towards the railway tracks. Seeing that the pursuers were gaining on them, Napoli hid behind a bush near the railway track. When he was almost cornered, he ran west along the railway tracks to Salisbury avenue crossing. There he was joined by Big Frank. A light engine which was passing at the time was flagged by Napoli, who boarded it. By this time Quinn was only a few yards away and he shouted to the engineer not to open the throttle. Shadwell then discharged his revolver twice, and Napoli dropped off the engine and disappeared in the woods on the banks of Mimico creek.

Big Frank stood on the crossing and when the rest of the pursuers reached the spot, he advised them not to follow. They were completely deceived by this move on his part, and left him there. On the west shore of Mimico creek Quinn and Shadwell lost track of the fugitive, and proceeded west along the railway to the Mimico camp, about a mile and a half distant. He has not been seen since.

Napoli was run to earth after a hard chase and handed over to the Toronto police.

American Section Men Strike.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 24.—A reported strike of all the section men on the western division of the Grand Trunk Railroad is denied here. Only a few Italians, it is stated, quit work because of a dispute with their fore man over wages. All have returned to work.

Would Ruin Him.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 24.—It was expected that John R. Harrington would testify in re-direct examination concerning a conversation with Darrow which was said to have been taken down by stenographers, listening through a telephone device at Clarence Darrow's trial on Saturday.

Harrington testified Friday that Darrow had shown him last September a roll of bills which Darrow said contained $50,000 and were procured from "Tveitmore's Bank in San Francisco, that Darrow told him at the time that if he could arrange to reach two jurymen, James D. McNamara would never be convicted.

Harrington also testified that on the morning of Bert Franklin's arrest for attempting to bribe George N. Lockwood, Darrow had said to him: "My God; if he speaks I am ruined."

MRS. PANKHURST IS RELEASED

Special to the Review.

London, June 24.—Owing to her health breaking down Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, militant suffragette leader, has been released from custody. She was serving nine months for enticing to malicious damage of property in connection with window smashing.

FENIAN RAID VETERAN DEAD

Cornwall, June 24.—John Franzer Smart, for 28 years deputy sheriff of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, died at his home here yesterday, in his 68th year. Smart was a veteran of the Fenian raid of 1866-70. He was a captain-adjutant of the militia between 1874 and 1885, retiring with the rank of captain. He was a graduate of the Kingston Military School.

He married Josephine Liddell, daughter of the late David Liddell, in 1873, by whom he is survived.

He played with the original Cornwall lacrosse team when the Indians were their opponents, and was also an enthusiastic curler and member of the Cornwall Rifle Association.

Gumdrops Cause Suffocation.

Winnipeg, June 24.—George Rendell stumbled while eating gumdrops Friday and fell, bumping his head and dying in ten mnutes. A post mortem revealed a gumdrop in the trachea causing suffocation.

CHAPAIS NOT AT UNVEILING

Quebec, June 24.—Hon. Thomas Chapais, who was invited to speak at the unveiling ceremony of the Mercier Monument, has declined the invitation. He will make no statement for the press, but it is generally assumed that he would have found such a move inconsistent with his former attitude towards the one-time Premier of the province.

During the election of 1891, which led to the defeat of Mr. Mercier, Mr. Chapais was one of his most ardent opponents and attacked Mr. Mercier's private life and public administration in no uncertain terms in the columns of Le Courier Du Canada.

Mr. Tellier, the leader of the Quebec Conservatives, who was also billed to speak, has refused as well, so the ceremony is likely to be more or less a party event.

Dr. Thoms Dies Suddenly.

Bremen, Germany, June 24.—Dr. Ludwig F. Thoma of New York died here yesterday. He came to Germany to arrange a program for a trip which 600 teachers belonging to the German-American Teachers' Association are to make in this country later in the summer. He was taken ill shortly after his arrival here and has been in the hospital ever since.

PRESIDENT TAFT WAS GIVEN MRJORITY OE FIRST BALLOT

The Platform of the Republican Party Uphold the Protective Policy.

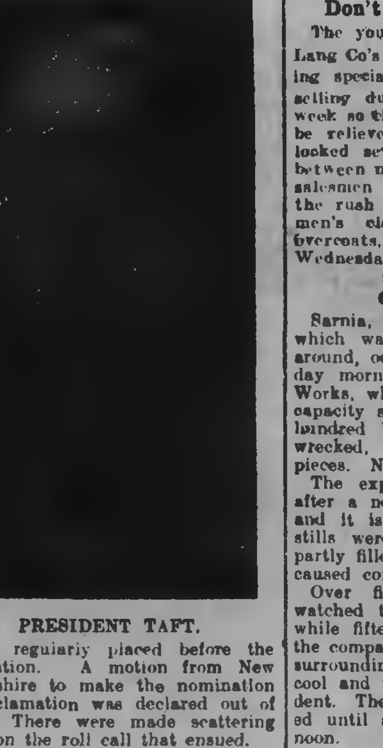
Chicago, June 24.—With nearly 350 of the Roosevelt delegates declining to vote and hastening away at adjournment time, to tender to Col. Theodore Roosevelt the nomination of a new party, the 15th Republican national convention, at the end of a long and tumultuous session, Saturday night re-nominated William Howard Taft of Ohio for President, and James Schoolcraft Sherman of New York for vice-president.

President Taft received 561 of the 1,078 votes in the convention, or 21 more than a majority.

The decision of the Roosevelt people, under direction of their leader, to refrain from voting, left no other candidate near the President. The announcement of the Taft victory was greeted with cheering from his adherents and groans and hisses from the opposition.

When it became absolutely certain early Saturday that Mr. Taft would be nominated without great difficulty, the leaders in control of the convention decided to give him as a running mate his companion on the ticket in 1908.

All others dropped from the race and Mr. Sherman was the only candidate regularly placed before the convention. A motion from New Hampshire to make the nomination by acclamation was declared out of order. There were made scattering votes on the roll call that ensued.



PRESIDENT TAFT.

The convention amid much confusion adjourned sine die.

At no time was there an indication of a walk-out of Roosevelt delegates As a rule they expressed their revolt by silence.

After the committee on credentials and the convention had approved the action of the national committee in giving the Roosevelt people four delegates from Texas, in the third and fifteenth districts, the credentials report as a whole was adopted. This ended the contests and the convention took up the report of the committee on permanent organization. It recommended that the temporary organisation be made permanent. Former Vice-President Fairbanks, chairman of the resolutions committee, was introduced to read the platform. He was greeted with applause.

The platform, after the usual praise of the Republican party, contains a declaration that the party will always uphold the authority and integrity of the courts. At the same time, it declares for measures to reduce delays and to make impeachment easier. The Sherman anti-trust act and the inter-state commerce law come in for considerable praise, but it is added that legislation should be added to indicate specifically what acts of monopoly and restraint constitute crimes.

The protective policy is upheld, and the doctrine laid down that the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad should be the basis of protection.

A scientific enquiry to determine the cause of the rise in cost of living is advocated. Legislation to prevent panics by improving the conditions in banking and currency is declared a necessity. At the same time it is declare desirable to preserve the independence of individual banks while providing for the transportation of crops and for the fostering of foreign trade.

Don't Wait Until Saturday

The young man in charge of the Lang Co's clothing stock, is now making special efforts to increase the selling during the end part of the week so that the Saturday rush may be relieved. The doors had to be locked several times, last Saturday, between noon and closing time. Extra salesmen are being kept on to meet the rush of the next few days. The men's clothing, including winter overcoats, etc., is to be ready for Wednesday.

Gasoline Explodes.

Sarnia, June 24.—An explosion, which was heard for fifteen miles around, occurred here at 7.30 yesterday morning at the Imperial Oil Works, when a two thousand barrel capacity steel plant, containing two hundred barrels of gasoline, was wrecked, the top being blown to pieces. No one was injured.

The explosion took place shortly after a new shift of men went on, and it is supposed that when the stills were being emptied into the partly filled tank the sudden change caused combustion.

Over fifteen hundred spectators watched the blaze which followed, while fifteen streams of water from the company's plant played upon the surrounding tanks, keeping them cool and thus avoiding further accident. The blaze was not extinguished until about 1.30 yesterday afternoon.

OFFICERS CAUGHT TWO BURGLARS

Belleville, June 24.—The local police, at an early hour yesterday morning, had a rough and tumble tussle with three burglars. At two o'clock a general store at Oanitton Village, two miles north of this city, was burglarized, and a considerable quantity of groceries, money and postage stamps were taken. The men were seen leaving the premises, but evaded their pursuers. As the robbers were coming towards Belleville the police were notified and caught the men at the east end of the G.T.R. yards. When surrounded the men put up a desperate fight, one making an effort to use 44 calibre bulldog revolver, which he carried.

One of the men in the melee escaped. The two arrested gave their names as James Brady, aged 32, and John Berry, aged 22, and claimed to be Canadians. One of them said he would not be taken alive, but they were, however, both locked up in jail. All that was taken from the store was found in a bag, which one of the trio carried.

COL. ROOSEVELT.

Defeated at the Republican Convention for the Presidential nomination, he will probably form a new party.

GOMPERS LOSES IN SUPREME COURT

Washington, June 24.—Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and John Mitchell, labor leaders, were found guilty of contempt of court to-day by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in connection with the court's injunction in the Bucks stove and range boycott case. They will attempt to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, which reversed their former conviction. The sentences are, Gompers, 1 year; Morrison six months, first sentence, and second sentence, three months shorter. Mitchell was not present, and sentence upon him was deferred.

ANOTHER HERO OF BOER WAR ANSWERS LAST ROLL CALL

Special to the Review.

London, June 24.—Field Marshall Sir George Stuart White, famous as the defender of Ladysmith in the Boer War, died to-day, aged seventy-six. He was born in County Antrim, Ireland, and served in the Mutiny in the Soudan and in the Afghan campaigns, distinguishing himself by winning the Victoria Cross in Afghanistan. After the conclusion of the Boer was he was appointed Governor of Gibraltar, and later Governor of Chelsea Hospital where he died.

The successful defence of Ladysmith lasted from November 2nd, 1899, till March 1st, 1900.

ST. JOHN KNIGHTS MEET IN TORONTO

Toronto, June 24.—The legions of the Knights of St. John have descended upon Toronto, but it is a friendly invasion, the occasion being the thirtieth international convention of this honorable body. Six thousand knights had arrived last night, and more to the number of ten thousand in all are coming in on the trains to-day.

The welcome of the province will be extended by the representative of the Premier of the province and that of the city will be tendered by Mayor Geary and Ald. McGuire. Representatives of a number of local Catholic orders will deliver addresses of welcome. To these will respond General John C. Shea, supreme counsel of the order, and Mrs. Renner, president of the ladies' auxiliary.

The great parade of the order will be held at 3 o'clock sharp, the knights assembling at Queen's Park at that hour. In this parade the general marching strength and fitness will be judged.

Upon the program for the four days of the convention are a number of novel features. One of these is an organized descent of the ladies upon the shopping district, when they will look over the big stores in a body.

Ship Owners Decline Arbitration.

Paris, June 23.—The French Transatlantic Line on Saturday declined to accept the Government's suggestion that it should arbitrate between the shipping companies and the seamen, saying that such action was not provided for in the contracts made with the strikers. The shipping companies of Bordeaux have also refused the Government's suggestion.

The Messageries Maritimes of Marseilles, on the other hand, has accepted the offer of the Government.

Neither La Lorraine nor Virginia sail on scheduled time from Havre as no bluejackets are available.

DEMOCRATS REJOICE AT THE REPUBLICAN PARTY SPLIT

But They Have a Fight in Their Own Ranks Over the Selection of a Chairman—Said That Bryan Wishes to Test His Strength at the Outset.

Special to the Review.

Baltimore, June 24.—The struggle over the temporary chairmanship for the Democratic National Convention, which opens to-morrow, overshadowed everything here to-day. Efforts to converge the views of progressive and conservatives failed last night, and William Jennings Bryan's declaration of progressive principals sharply defined the issue.

Bryan and his supporters have announced no candidate for chairmanship, but realising the necessity of having one, if they are to defeat Alton B. Parker, are in conference with the determination to make a selection. Some profess to see in the importance Bryan attaches to the fight for the chairmanship a purpose to seek nomination himself and test his strength at the very outset of the convention's deliberations.

All Democrat leaders are jubilant at the outcome of the Republican convention in Chicago.

NEW PROGRESSIVE PARTY NOMINATES ROOSEVELT

First Step Is Taken by the New Party In U. S. Politics During the Last Hours of the Republican Convention—"Thou Shalt Not Steal" Will Be One of the Cardinal Principles—Convention In August.

Chicago, June 24—Former President Theodore Roosevelt was nominated for President on an independent ticket Saturday night, in the dying hours of the Republican national convention, in which he had met a defeat.

The followers of Col. Roosevelt gathered in Orchestra Hall, less than a mile from the coliseum and pledged their support to the former President.

In accepting the nomination, Col. Roosevelt appealed to the people of all sections, regardless of party affiliations, to stand with the founders of the new party, one of whose cardinal principles, he said, was to be "Thou Shalt Not Steal."

The informal nomination of Col. Roosevelt was said to be chiefly for the purpose of effecting a temporary organization. Beginning to-day when a call is to be issued for a state convention in Illinois, the work of organization will be pushed forward rapidly, state by state. At a later time, probably early in August, it is expected that a national convention will be held.

Col. Roosevelt last night said he accepted the nomination on the understanding that he would willingly step aside if it should be the desire of the new party, when organized, to select another standard bearer.

Comptroller W. A. Prendergast of New York nominated Roosevelt. Dean W. Lewis Baker of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, who was to make one of the seconding speeches, delivered on Saturday night the address which he had prepared for the Republican convention.

Representatives of twenty-two states composed the notification committee, which informed Col. Roosevelt of his nomination and in a sense stood as sponsors for the movement.

The first persons admitted to the hall were those wearing large red badges with the words: "National Republican Convention, compliments of Roosevelt national committee." The wearers were the Roosevelt "steam roller" delegates who were excluded from the Republican national convention.

When the doors were opened the surging crowd, held in check by the police, were ushered first to the balcony and galleries. These were quickly filled and the police had difficulty in handling the throng. The crowd extended for blocks in a line four deep.

Governor Hiram Johnson of California, who presided at the convention, arrived early with Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester; Amos Pinchot, and Governor Robert F. Bass of New Hampshire.

When news of the nomination of President Taft reached the hall, all the Roosevelt leaders seemed pleased. The information that Vice-President Sherman had been re-nominated appeared to add to their delight.

Senator Clapp read the resolution nominating Col. Roosevelt. It was adopted with a cheer.

"To any man with red blood in his veins," said Governor Johnson, "it's always a pleasure to fight a fraud, and especially to fight a fraudulent convention.

"The delegates present represent a majority of the legally elected delegates to the national Republican convention. They propose to do right here and now just what they were elected to do."

The governor's speech was interrupted with a wild burst of cheering.

BRANTFORD MAN FATALLY INJURED

Brantford, June 23.—Chauncer Dumeath, a young man 23 years old, died at the hospital here Friday night from terrible injuries he received at nine o'clock by falling from the top of a car between the wheels of a moving freight train at the Grand Trunk depot. His right leg and arm were severed and the injured man lived three hours after his removal to the hospital. He had ventured from his home near the depot to the top of the train to talk to a brakeman of his acquaintance and it was while going from one car to another that a sudden jerk of the train caused him to fall. He was employed at the Malleable Iron Works.

Borden's Home Fire-Swept.

Halifax, N.S., June 24.—The business district of the town of Canning, the home of Sir Frederick Borden, ex-Minister of Militia, in the Annapolis Valley, was almost completely swept out by fire yesterday morning at six o'clock.

The losses, partially covered by insurance are: J. E. Kennedy, $4,000; Cornwallis Trading Co., $10,000; A. D. Payzant, $4,000; Fred. Northrup, $1,000; R. W. North, $3,000; Mrs. Burbidge, $500; D. M. Beakwith, $3,000; C. B. Dickie, $3,000.

SUFFERED FROM VIOLENT CATHARTICS

The Warning of Mr. Geo. C. Fox Is One That Should Be Heeded by All.

Few men on the road are better known than genial George Fox, whose friends throughout the West are legion. In the following letter he expresses gratitude for signal services rendered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. He goes on to say: "Until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and experienced their wonderful mildness and curative power, I estimated the value of every pill by its activity. Talking about this to a well-known physician I met on the train the other day, he explained there are different kinds of drugs that act upon the bowels, the most active being known as drastic. Except in extreme cases where the life of the patient depends upon speedy evacuation of the bowels, pills should never be drastic. Purgatives cause catarrh of the bowels and inflammation; their dose must be increased, causing even more harm. With such a clear explanation I could see why Dr. Hamilton's Pills are curative and not irritating, why they are mild, yet most searching.

"From my experience I recommend everyone that takes pills to give up the old-fashioned harsh, purging pill, and, instead, to use Dr. Hamilton's. They cure headache, biliousness, constipation, bad stomach, and keep the system in perfect condition."

THE PASSING OF THE BOSS

Colonel Roosevelt emerges from the smoke of the presidential conflict with thwarted and crushed ambition, and with a pride that has been cruelly chastened by the stripes of his countrymen. He not only overestimated the place he held in the confidence and affection of the public, but he grossly exaggerated his own personal value and worth in the conduct of the affairs of the nation. He is down and out. With his passing there will in a great measure die out that feeling of national unrest which he represented, and for the existence of which his preachings have been largely responsible. He was a physician who flourished chiefly by working upon the morbid imagination of his patients, and led them to believe that they were ill and that no one save himself had the remedy for their ailments. Now that his quackery has been exposed government for the people, by the people, has a chance to survive in answer to the prayer of Lincoln, but government by Theodore Roosevelt or by any other political boss of inordinate personal ambition has received its quietus for all time.

The greatest political boss that party politics ever nurtured passes from the stage, and with his going the breeding of the cult has received a blow from which it cannot recover for years. Roosevelt stopped at nothing to attain his own ends. During the closing days of his presidency, drunk with power, he ran riot. His wildcat preachings, his threats aimed at the established business interest of the United States, his war on the railways, plunged the country into a panic which the prospect of his retirement at last alleviated. Holding himself greater than half a thousand chosen representatives of the people, he bullied and browbeat Congress by flooding that body with messages daily until the query, "What will Roosevelt do to-day?" became a standing question.

Human friendship was nothing to him, promises given and agreements made were disregarded. Everything was trampled under foot as he sought to raise himself into place and power. When Taft was first elected Roosevelt wrote into the party platform its chief planks, only to repudiate them later.

Roosevelt dies hard. With his expiring breath he asserts that he will form a new party, but the threat is idle. He would have bolted the convention had he not learned to his humiliation that only a corporal's guard of his supporters would for his sake consent to have the party wrecked. Furthermore, he is now without the sinews of war. The money princes who who knocked the heads out of their treasure chests for him have had enough of the game. They spent a million and a half in vain and the key is turned on the strong boxes. Roosevelt also talks of an alliance with the progressive wing of the Democratic organization. He will, however, probably find that that party with their chances of success brighter now than for years, are not over anxious to strive to resuscitate a political corpse that the Republicans have tossed over the fence into their back yard.

The recent political crisis through which the Republican party has passed will no doubt be fruitful in due season. If it has proved conclusively that no one man, for his own aggrandisement, can dominate a party, the unseemly struggle has not been in vain.

With the passing of Roosevelt the National Political Convention may find its finish. If every state of the union would adopt the primary system the convention would be of no value. The people could express directly their choice for president and choose the electors to go through the formality of declaring finally their choice. The National Committee, composed of a member from each state selected by the National Convention is not in the true sense representative of or responsible to the people. It has been made apparent that this body has the power to thwart the will of the people, and backed up by the parent organization, refuse to recognize the delegates selected by popular vote. This may or it may not have been done last week at Chicago. The point is that the power exists, and there the danger lies.

MR. ROWELL'S SAILS DROOP

Mr. Rowell, the leader of the Provincial Opposition, in his address to the New Ontario boosters in Toronto the other day, showed a disposition to reverse the conventional attitudes held by the horse and the vehicle to which the equine is supposed to furnish the motor power. One of the greatest inducements in his opinion to secure settlers for the north, is good schools. These institutions, as a general rule, Mr. Rowell seems to forget, follow and do not precede the settlement of new territory. He can if he is fair and he usually tries to be so, find that the Whitney Government has been either lax or slow in the establishing of good public schools in the newly settled regions, where the circumstances warrant the outlay.

Again Mr. Rowell says that the country adjacent to the towns should first be settled so that a dual purpose may be accomplished, the towns have a source of supply and the farmers a convenient market. Very natural and plausible this. But when Mr. Rowell and his colleagues in Opposition pay their proposed visit of inspection to New Ontario next August, they will find that the condition which finds favor in his eyes already exists. Towns that have sprung up either as a result of the development of the lumber or mining industry are surrounded by farms on all lands that are suitable for agricultural purposes. In other cases the town follows as a natural sequence of the settlement of the country and the extension of farming just as a school is built and equipped for the same reason.

One of Mr. Rowell's pet hobbies is that the Provincial Government should lend money to settlers to aid them in clearing and otherwise improving their land. He satisfies himself, however, with the general assertion of a somewhat broad principle and fails to elaborate his theory by giving details. How would Mr Rowell proceed in this matter if he were at the head of Provincial affairs and what security would he exact from the borrower? Would he himself as a private citizen be willing to loan money on something the value of which is entirely in the perspective? Where would be his guarantee that the money loaned would be so used as to enhance the value of the settlers holding to such an extent as to render the investment a safe one? And would Mr. Rowell be willing to use funds of the state in an enterprise in which he would hesitate to employ private capital?

In his address Mr. Rowell seems to have forgotten that the Government has made provisions to take care of New Ontario settlers along the lines which he himself favors, but in every case upon a more practical basis. In their new plan for the colonization of the north the Whitney administration proposes to aid the farmer without recklessly loaning him money on something the value of which exists only in the future. The new settler is to be given a holding with a house and barn already built, a well dug, twenty-five acres of land cleared and a school just as soon as the need of such an institution becomes apparent. He is to be provided with roads and bridges at no cost to himself and is to be afforded an opportunity to secure remunerative employment for himself and his team during the winter months when he can do no farm work. Besides this, he is assured of a convenient market for the timber on his farm so that while he extends his clearing he is still earning money. In the price which he is to pay for his holdings and in the sale of his timber his interests are to be safeguarded by the state. No grasping corporation can squeeze him and no real estate speculator can fleece him by inflating the value of land. When a town is established lots can be purchased from the Government, not from private parties, at reasonable figures and upon easy terms.

Does not this policy rather tend to crowd Mr. Rowell with his fine spun theories off the stage and into the background?

NOTE AND COMMENT

Let anyone who would cast a doubt on the validity of his neighbor's marriage read Judge Greenshield's decision in the Chiniquy case, think twice and then decide not to speak.

The Oppositionists, who won out in the New Brunswick election, will celebrate their victory with a dinner covers for two, and one cab to carry the banqueters.

If Roosevelt intends to make the Democratic party the Mount Pisgah from which he is to view the promised land with presidential settings, he will probably find himself crowded from the summit by a throng of sightseers who have long been taking in the prospect.

A coalition of Republican and Democratic progressives, headed by Roosevelt and Bryan, or Brayn and Roosevelt, is the latest facetious phase of American politics. Such a combination is the last word in iridescent dreams and the prophets should try another form of dope.

Had the spoils system on the Welland Canal, anything to do with the fatal disaster? asks the Globe. Besides illustrating the truth that an insinuation in the form of a question is the most pusillanimous variety of invective, the above query is a startling example of partisanship run mad.

Mr. Rowell is ready with suggestions as to the best system of taxation to be employed when the now unsettled portions of New Ontario, are turned into fertile farms, but the first and most difficult step in the preparation of the repast is the capture of the hare. It will be time enough to discuss taxation, when there is anything of taxable value in sight.

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, June 22.—In attempting to guard against possibility of an upheaval of prices Monday when the Chicago Board of Trade will not be in session, wheat shorts competing today forced a material advance. The market closed steady at a rise of 3-8c to 7-8c over last night. Corn finished 1-4c to 1-2c to 5-8c up, oats dearer by a shade to 1-2c, and provisions varying from 2 1-2c decline to 5c increase in cost.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat ⅛d to ¼d lower than yesterday, and on corn ⅛d to ¼d lower. Antwerp closed unchanged on wheat. Berlin 1½c lower, Buda Pest 1c higher and Paris unchanged.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 22.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat shows no improvement, and the cables on oats were weaker, with prices bid 1½d to 3d lower, while, on the other hand, the market here was firmer, with sellers of round lots of extra No. 1 feed asking 49½c c.i.f. for shipment from Fort William. The demand for car lots from outside sources was fair, but the local trade was quiet. Spring wheat flour continues quiet and firm, but there is a fair demand for winter wheat grades, of which supplies are small and prices strong. Demand for millfeed is quiet. Butter is firmer, but prices show no change. Receipts for the week were 20,480 packages, against 23,110 a year ago. Cheese is quiet and easy, owing to the limited demand from abroad. Receipts for the week were 75,788 boxes, against 88,406 a year ago. Eggs fairly active and steady. Receipts for the week were 8,508 cases, against 6230 a year ago.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The DIAMOND CIPHER

A Baseball Romance

By W. A. PHELON

(COPYRIGHT, 1912, BY W. G. CHAPMAN. COPYRIGHT IN CANADA AND GREAT BRITAIN)

Brockett had half-opened the door, when he faced around, closed the door again, and looked calmly into the eyes of the puzzled chief.

"Chief," he exclaimed, rapidly, "I'll make out the duplicate copies of the key myself. Anyone who was unused to that sort of work might confuse the symbols. I will have them done early in the afternoon."

"Very well," the chief assented. "Bring me the copies, and then go to army headquarters. General Cole will be awaiting you at three o'clock. If possible, get your friend, Solano, and take him with you. General Cole will explain to you both just what he wishes you to do."

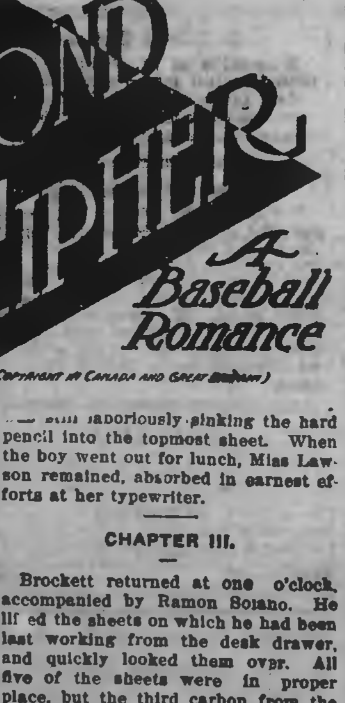
Brockett bowed respectfully to the group of notables, and walked out. Going to his desk, he attended to a few matters of routine duty, and then, with hard pencil and carbon papers, began laboriously copying the key to his bewildering cipher. His hands became smutted with carbon and pencil dust, and Brockett, who was meticulously neat about his work, went to the washroom. Returning after an absence of but a few minutes, he was just in time to see the stenographer, Miss Lawson, moving away from his desk, empty-handed and with the most innocent of demeanor. A glance at his cipher reassured him—none of the sheets were disturbed, none of the carbon papers missing. Brockett finished copying the key, and then waited, apparently busy in other work, until Miss Lawson was called away to take dictation. Then, rapidly slipping the completed work and the used carbons into his inner pocket, he took five fresh sheets, four fresh carbons, and proceeded to carefully inscribe the top sheet with the words of an old Columbia college song, mangling and jumbling words, lines and rhythm. When Miss Lawson returned, the boy—still laboriously sinking the hard pencil into the topmost sheet. When the boy went out for lunch, Miss Lawson remained, absorbed in earnest efforts at her typewriter.

CHAPTER III.

Brockett returned at one o'clock, accompanied by Ramon Solano. He lifted the sheets on which he had been last working from the desk drawer, and quickly looked them over. All five of the sheets were in proper place, but the third carbon from the top had been removed, and a fresh carbon substituted.

General Cole, kindly and affable, had the boys feeling thoroughly at home before they had been in his office for five minutes. The old soldier was in cheery spirits, and his genial mood communicated itself to his young visitors, who—long counted among the most ardent admirers of the general—were at first inclined to bashfulness when actually in the presence of their ideal fighter. Solano, whose father had often spoken of General Cole and his prowess as shown in the rush up San Juan Hill, was almost in raptures over the unexpected interview, while Brockett, wondering much over the events of the past four hours, was trying to figure out what on earth would happen next. He was not long left in suspense, for the old warrior plunged into his reasons for requiring their attendance in his office.

"Brockett, my boy," said the general, pleasantly enough, but with something governing the tone of the calm, even voice—something that seemed to electrify both young men like the current of a mighty battery—"I believe that I can make you—and your young friend—quite useful in the immediate future."



"I AM DEEPLY SORRY THAT YOU SHOULD LOSE THE OPPORTUNITY OF ENLARGEMENT OF FORTUNE."

Solano gasped, astounded, and fixed his big black eyes upon the general's face. Brockett nodded, and leaned forward, expectantly.

"I have had considerable experience with government and military ciphers," the soldier continued, "and I must say that yours is the most extraordinary jumble and most weirdly mangled collection of hieroglyphics I ever looked upon. For that very reason, my boy, I am forced to believe that you have stumbled upon something of real value to the army, the nation—and your own personal future. I can't figure where any expert in the world could read that cipher without a key, and an untranslatable cipher, right now, is imperatively needed. If, during the next thirty days, the war department—yes, and the navy, too—can transmit certain important messages, without danger of their being transcribed by hostile influences, a service of the most notable kind will have been performed for the country. Do you follow me?"

Brockett nodded eagerly, but Solano could not shift his great black eyes from the general's visage. The old warrior resumed his speech.

"Mr. Brockett, a key of your cipher, and a message, written in that cipher, must be carried, by a messenger on whom we can unhesitatingly rely, to a person—a person whose name can be revealed only to the messenger and one companion—in the City of Mexico. You are the inventor of the cipher, and can instruct in the use of its key more rapidly, more successfully, than any other man. You are also, I believe, honest, loyal, and fairly resourceful. Furthermore, you say that you have learned to speak a little Spanish. How would you like to carry a message of importance, and a key to your cipher, as far as the capital of Mexico?"

Brockett choked up, flushed, and stammered a vague sentence which he in all probability meant to signify acceptance of the proffered honor. The general smiled, reassuringly.

"You don't say it very clearly, son, but your meaning is easily understood. Now, then, something along the same lines. If you had a companion on this journey, a man who spoke Spanish by right of birth and blood, and who could be trusted as absolutely as yourself, the chances of success would be more than doubled. Ramon Solano, I knew your father. I have heard good reports of you. If you are even half the man your father was a dozen years ago, you are already selected for this commission."

The Cuban gazed straight into the eyes of the fighting man, and the general understood.

"Now, boys," the veteran continued, "let's get busy without delay. You will please make arrangements with the folks at home for a somewhat prolonged absence. While you are gone, Mr. Brockett, your mother will receive your salary—and perhaps a little more. Mr. Solano, you are not in government employ—"

The Cuban waved a supple hand.

"I have ample resources of my own, general, and shall consider it a pleasure to expend them on such a mission."

"Nevertheless," answered General Cole, "the government will take the liberty of supplying you both with the funds needed in the completion of the enterprise. Enough money to cover all probable expenses will be advanced you, and when you reach the frontier arms, horses, general equipments, and trustworthy guides will be found. Tonight, Mr. Brockett, you will receive full instructions at your home. Read them over carefully—you also, Mr. Solano. Be ready to start tomorrow afternoon. I need hardly remark that you are not supposed to speak of the commission with which you are entrusted—not even to your most intimate friends. As to your parents—that, of course, is a different question. I think that is all, boys—go home and bid your good-byes. You will know all further details in the evening."

Brockett hurried home to break the strange news to his mother, while Solano agreed to notify his father that he had decided to preface his vacation by a few extra weeks of travel, and made all possible speed to the nearest Western Union office. The Cuban picked up a pad of cable blanks, and reached for a pen. It was broken. Another pen proved equally useless, and Solano fumbled in his pocket for a pencil. A little man seated on the next stool turned quickly, and proffered him an ink-pencil, one of those annoying contrivances which were invented a few years ago to displace both lead pencils and fountain pens—and which are now a memory, and nothing more.

"Very annoying, the unpleasant delay," said the little man, amiably. "Permit me that I am of a little assistance?"

And Solano, as he scribbled his brief cablegram, gave thanks, with true Latin politeness, to the stocky, scar-cheeked Japanese who had walked past Brockett and himself the previous evening. When the Cuban left the telegraph office, the little brown man caught up the pad of cable blanks, scrutinized the impressions left by his message, and, despite the fact that the cablegram had been written in Spanish, seemed to have no trouble in deciphering its meaning. Whatever information he gained, however, seemed to afford but small satisfaction. He smiled mirthlessly, tossed the pad back upon the counter, and walked out into the busy thoroughfare.

Brockett's mother, a sweet-faced, thoroughly feminine, but thoroughly sensible woman, did not offer any serious objections to her son's acceptance of the strange commission so shortly to be entrusted to his care. Mrs. Brockett, in fact, cherished an abiding belief in the foresight and the cleverness of her boy—a belief that he could take care of himself under almost any circumstances. Bertha Brockett, Harry's only sister, was much more worried over the possible dangers of the journey than either her mother or the young athlete himself. She forecasted terrors of the road and hobgoblins of the passes. In her sixteen-year-old imagination, Mexico teemed with bandits, Yaqui savages, and ferocious insurrectos. As Miss Brockett was not only eloquent, but extremely pretty, her arguments might have dissuaded almost any young adventurer—unless the adventurer happened to be her brother. Sisterly counsels and entreaties have been wasted on the wandering winds for many centuries, and, presumably, always will be.

Young Brockett had dined, had received some excellent advice from his mother, and had rebuffed the imploring sister with much humor. He was glancing over the evening paper, and waiting the arrival of Ramon Solano or of the messenger who should bring him his instructions, when the doorbell tinkled lightly. Bertha, answering the bell, admitted a stocky, well-dressed man of middle age—a swarthy little fellow, with one cheek crossed by a broad, indented scar. The boy at once remembered the Japanese whom he had seen stop Miss Lawson on the previous night, but gave no sign of recognition as he looked inquiringly at his Oriental visitor.

There was Old World politeness in the courtly bow with which the stranger prefaced his self-introduction.

"I speak to Mr. Harry Brockett? Yes?"

"At your service, sir. You are Mr. ——?"

"I am Mr. Yazimoto. Of Tokyo. Importer of Oriental goods."

"Won't you sit down, Mr. Yasimoto?"

"I thank you, yes. May I speak of the business that brings me to you, Mr. Brockett?"

Brockett, wondering, nodded his assent, and the Japanese spoke suavely.

"Mr. Brockett, I am a man who has much, very much, of business trouble. There are many who are competitors with me in the honorable occupation of importing Oriental wares. Yon doubtless can comprehend it so?"

"Perfectly, Mr. Yazimoto."

"There are, of these who are competitor against me, some, whom I do not know by name definitely, who resort to means not wholly honest. I am sorry, much, that I say this of my own countrymen, but it is truth I tell you. I have reason to believe that my correspondence, both in Japanese and in English, is as you say it, held up, read by these not so honorable competitors. So I have come to you, Mr. Brockett."

"To me? Why, what can I do for you?"

"That shall now be told you, Mr. Brockett. I could now make use of some new, some very difficult correspondence cipher. If in English, that would be very good—my firm has at home most admirable English educated clerks. Friends of mine tell me that you, Mr. Brockett, have devised such cipher. A cipher of most honorable excellence. If this cipher were to be adaptive to the use of commerce, I would pay well. I say, in fact, Mr. Brockett, I pay modestly high moneys. Suppose that you demonstrate for me the idea of your cipher. If it shall prove satisfactory for the commercial purpose, I pay you $5,000. And, that I show I am a man of business, and that I do not waste the valuable time, I pay you, if satisfactory or no, $500 that you only demonstrate for me the ideas of the cipher."

The smiling Japanese had drawn forth a thick, prosperous-looking wallet, and was fumbling with it, when Brockett slowly, but emphatically shook his head.

CENTER OF THE EARTH.

It May Be a Mighty Mass of Molten Precious Metals.

Did you ever stop to consider the fact that in all probability the center of the earth is a globe composed of gold, iridium and platinum? These metals are, of course, in a liquid state, the iridium at the exact center—that is, provided there is not some heavier metal at present unknown to man occupying that place—the platinum next and the gold surrounding the other two.

"But," you say, "what proof have we that this proposition is correct?"

In answer I would say:

"Two proofs, and perhaps more."

First, the three metals are the heaviest known substances, compared bulk for bulk. This being the case, they would naturally be attracted to the center of our planet. In the beginning the earth was liquid, if not gaseous. In either case the heavy metals mentioned were held in solution. By gradual condensation the metals settled to the center, iridium first, platinum next and gold last.

Ages ago, when the crust of the earth was thin—very thin—all of the gold now known was thrown out in volcanic eruptions. This last mentioned fact is the second reason for believing that our globe has a golden center, woven around a nucleus of iridium and platinum.

A third reason for believing that there is gold at the center is this: The earth as a whole weighs five times as much as a globe of water of the same bulk, while the rocks forming the outer crust are less than three times as heavy as water.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Tragedy in a Clock.

Hogan was late at work several times and was advised to buy an alarm clock. It worked finely for a time until one of the kids got to monkeying with it and took it apart. When it was put together again it wouldn't run.

Hogan couldn't understand it, on account of past performances, and did a little dissecting on his own account. When he opened the clock he found the remains of a large insect mixed up with the machinery.

"No wonder it won't run," he said to his wife. "The engineer is dead."—Chicago Post.

A Transposition.

"There is one thing I cannot understand," said the student of theology.

"What is that?" inquired the professor.

"Why Moses, the lawgiver, should be called the meekest of men, while Solomon, with hundreds of wives, was called the wisest."—Washington Star.

WEDDING BELLS

SIMPSON—McARTHUR

The wedding took place at three thirty o'clock, Saturday afternoon, at Hamilton, of two very popular young people, in Mr. Ben Simpson, of football fame, and Miss Emma McArthur, formerly a teacher in the Collegiate Institute. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Sedgewick in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends of the contracting parties, and was held at the residence of Dr. W. G. Thompson, 3 Stanley avenue, brother in law of Miss McArthur.

The bride and groom were unattended. The bride was given away by Sheriff Middleton. The parlor, was daintily decorated with palms and peonies, and presented a pretty picture The costume of the bride was of heavily embroidered Brussels net over white satin, with the customary veil and orange blossoms. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses Her going-away gown was a cream suit, with a black and white leghorn hat, trimmed with pink roses. The popularity of the bride and groom found ample testimony in the many beautiful and costly gifts received. From the Hamilton Football Club, was received a magnificent cabinet of silver, while the teachers of the Collegiate Institute presented them with bookcases.

Mr. and Mrs Simpson left on the evening train for Detroit and other points west. On their return they will reside in their new home on Delaware Avenue.

MANN—TOVEY.

One of the prettiest weddings of the month was solemnized on Saturday afternoon in Charlotte street Methodist church, the nuptial parties being Miss Beatrice Tovey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Tovey, who became the bride of Mr. Arthur Mann, druggist of Grand Forks, B.C., and a former resident of Peterborough.

The church abounded with beautiful floral decorations, chiefly marguerites, and the bride's white syringa, arranged by girl friends.

Rev. G. W. Henderson performed the ceremony.

In the absence of the bride's father, she was given away by her brother, Mr. George H. Tovey. She wore a beautiful gown of white Duchess satin with Cluny lace. Vera Tovey, niece of the bride was a very charming flower girl, with Master Douglas Shortly as page. Dr. Max Yelland and Mr. Stewart Laing were ushers.

While the signing of the register was in progress, Mrs. G. Bruce Hughes sang very acceptably "O Promise Me."

Miss Mabel Clarry played the wedding march.

Mr. and Mrs. Mann left on the 5.30 Grand Trunk for points in the United States.

The bride previous to her wedding was the recipient of three showers, attesting to her popularity, one from the stenography staff of the C.G.E. Works, of china; another from Miss Brown, of Limoges, and one from her girl friends, of linen.

The staff of the engineering office of the C.G.E. presented the bride with a beautiful brass chafing dish, while the Virginia Club, composed of a number of her girl friends, gave her a handsome silver coffee percolater.

Mr. and Mrs. Mann will return in about ten days and will be in the city for about a couple of weeks before leaving for their future home in Grand Forks.

The gossip of to-day may be the superstition of to-morrow.

VOTES OF THANKS

To All Those Who Assisted in the Success of Summer Fair.

At a meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Peterboro Health Association held on Friday afternoon, the following votes of thanks were passed—To the Hon. Minister of Militia Col. Sam Hughes, for his kindness in coming to open the Summer Fair. To Mr. J. Hampden Burnham, M.P., for his assistance in securing the ue of the Armories for the Fair and in arranging other details in connection with it.

To Lt. Col. Clegg and the officers of the 67th Regiment for their very kind courtesy and assistance in connection with the Fair.

To Major Young for his interest and help.

The the Sergeants Mess of the 57th Regiment for taking entire charge of the Bowling Alley and shooting gallery and also for their valuable assistance on the main floor of the hall, especially during the Grand March.

To Mr. Gliddon for his assistance in providing musical entertainment during the Fair, and also to each Lady and Gentleman, who assisted with the evening programmes given in the Theatre and Cafe Chantant.

To Mr. Cameron of the Bell Telephone Co., for installing a telephone in Mrs. Dunsford's Booth.

To the Press, to Chief Howard and the Firemen, and to the many friends who assisted in making the Fair, a social and financial success, by contributing in anyway to this end. The Fair Committee wish to thank the City Council for the generous grant towards defraying the advertising expenses and also the Water Commissioners.

The kindness of the Allin Ice Co., and their faithfulness in giving a constant supply of ice, (free) to the booths that needed it, was much appreciated by the convenors of these booths and by the Fair Committee.

The convenors and the Fair committee feel under a great obligation also to all those who contributed to the various booths.

A small metal purse with handkerchief is still in the possession of the Secretary, 273 Hunter street. It was picked up in the Cafe Chantant.

The financial report while not complete owing to the difficulty of getting in the returns, was very satisfactory to the meeting. A sum of $3500 and perhaps more, will go to the credit of the Health Association as a result of the Fair.

A pleasing feature of the meeting was the presentation by Mrs. Matthews on behalf of the Convenors, of beautifully framed photograph groups of the Convenors to Mrs. Kendry and Mrs. Travers, with kind words of appreciation. Votes of thanks to them and to Mrs. W. H. Bradburn for their work in connection with the Fair were passed.

HOPE FOR THE EMMIGRANT

Our George street contemporary is just now making a fierce attack on the local emigration office. Mr. Hewson, the local official in charge, is an appointee of the Laurier Government but the Examiner has discovered that his work is bad, and that of everybody else from the minister, down. We learn that the local office never had a telephone until last week, and heretofore emigration matters have been shamefully neglected, from the first start off in England of the emigrant to the poor pittance he receives in many cases when he gets here. The present government have been doing their best to remedy evils, and if the Examiner insists, it is possible that Mr. Hewson may be removed. The Examiner pursued the same course respecting the superintendent of the Trent Canal, who is also a Liberal appointee. But, it is hoped, that with a little patience all these departments will get into working order, and the emigrant will receive some consideration as the local St. George's Society very properly demands. It is very interesting to notice that the Examiner has most fault to find with the officials with whom it formerly had no fault to find.

IN THE ENGINEERS.

Both Officers and Private Draw Higher Pay Than In Other Branches.

According to an old service saying, officers of the corps of Royal Engineers are either "mad, married, or Methodist."

Lord Kitchener, of course, comes instantly to mind as a living refutation of the charge, but there is not a grain of truth in the jest.

The sapper is the best paid officer in the army, and competition for commissions in the R. E., which are won via the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, has always been keen.

True, the regimental pay of a sapper subaltern is only a trifle better than that of the infantry lieutenant, but every Royal Engineer, officer or man, draws "engineer pay."

In the case of officers, this ranges from $1.00 to $3.50 a day extra, and so the sapper subaltern is nearly as well paid as an infantry captain, apart from the fact that he has many opportunities of earning additional pay and special allowances.

Map, road, and railway making, laying of telegraph lines, construction of fortifications, surveying, bridging, irrigation, are some of the sapper's duties; but he has also often to act as architect and builder, and it is here that various stories are told against him.

Once a sapper officer was deputed to build a gymnasium. Elaborate plans were drawn, many workmen employed, and eventually the building was completed. It was an imposing structure, and cost a pot of money, but it had one slight defect—entrance was to be gained only through the skylight, for the architect had forgotten to provide a door!

On another occasion the commanding Royal Engineer at a certain colonial station was instructed to provide a new system of drainage for the infantry camp. He was a very clever man, but not clever enough to make water run uphill, as he attempted to do. The result was that a neighboring village was converted into a swamp, and an epidemic of enteric ensued among the inhabitants.

The local civil authorities sued the C.R.E. for damages, and were awarded a heavy sum. This he refused to pay, and an order was issued for his arrest for contempt of court, but by this time the genius was on his way home, and took jolly good care never to come back.

If it is difficult to become a R. E. officer, the would-be sapper private has also to pass special tests. Of the ordinary recruit, nothing is required except that he should comply with the age and physical standards, but the R.E. novice must first be able to give references as to character, and next he must be a skilled tradesman, unless he enlists as a driver or laborer; but even then he must have references, while the driver must be accustomed to horses.

The term "tradesman" is elastic, and includes printer, telegraphic, photographer, architect, clerk, electrician, engine-driver, balloonist and sail-maker (for training as kite-maker). In general terms, the sapper recruit must be capable of earning his living in civil life in some skilled occupation.

The sapper private gets only 3 cents a day more than his infantry comrade; but then, as has been mentioned, he draws engineer pay. which ranges from the 8 cents a day of the private to the 60 cents a day extra of the higher grades, while there is also "addition pay" and "working pay" to be earned on special jobs.

In peace the sapper's life is often exceedingly humdrum, but in war he is the first into battle and the last out of it. He goes ahead of the army to build bridges over unfordable rivers, and to remove obstacles of any kind in its path.

If the army is beaten, and retreating, he remains to the last to check the foe's pursuit by destroying bridges, laying mines, throwing up "obstacles," etc.

In the case of a siege, he tunnels up to or under the walls by means of those "saps" or trenches from which he gets his nickname of "sapper," or heads the storming party sent to blow a breach in the defences.

A Hungarian steamer was burned in the Danube off Canavoda with a loss of 25 lives.

IMPROVING THE HOME

MISS LAIRD IS HEAD OF DOMESTIC SCIENCE COLLEGE.

She Started With a Few Classes In Cooking at the Victor Mission In Toronto and Her Work Has Grown Into the Full-Fledged Lillian Massey School of Domestic Science—Works Long Hours.

"Miss Laird, the head of it, is the only person who knows more about the work being done there than anyone else, and has had most to do with its becoming what it is." The speaker was Mrs. Massey-Treble, the woman to whom the University of Toronto is indebted for its new building for the study of domestic science, and her words were in reply to a question as to the plans for the new college.

Miss Laird has for long been a force in the educational world of Toronto. It is more than ten years ago since she came as assistant teacher to the Lillian Massey School of Household Science. The next year she was principal, and has held the position ever since, although after the school's absorption into the university, the title was changed slightly, so that she is now "associate professor." But "what is in a name?" The lady is a Canadian, but her specialized education was received at the Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, since at that time there were no training schools for domestic science in Canada.

This is not the place to dwell on the phenomenal growth of the school which started to teach home cooking to a few classes in the Victor Mission, and ended by having on its roll hundreds of students, some going deep into household science as part of a university course, and others taking only short courses.

The advance has been slow, but steady, and in each step of the upward progress, Miss Laird has been chief counsellor to the founder of the school, and has had a part in all the planning for the beautiful building in Queen's Park. Her time, outside her usual duties, has been given to endless conferences as to the detail of furnishings and equipment. The better to know what were the most up-to-date ideas on the subject, Miss Laird has visited within the last year or two many of the recently-established colleges in the United States, where domestic science is taught, among them being Simmon's College, Boston, and the new Teachers' College, of Columbian University, New York. No slightest detail escaped her notice that could help to realize the ideal held by the generous founder and the faculty.

Miss Laird's days are full ones, full as few people's are.

What do you think of a person who, between beginning work at the usual time in the morning and ten o'clock at night, has not a moment to spare for any interest outside? And this is what frequently happens.

Such unusual hours are owing to the peculiar fact that the class taught by a student in household science for practice may be one of boys at the Broadview Y.M.C.A., or for girls or married women at a settlement house in The Ward, or of young ladies at the Y.W.C.A.

It is more than likely to meet in the evening, so the teacher of the student-teacher must needs be present to "observe."

It seems a long day, but when some asked Miss Laird if she did not get "sick and tired" of it, there was no acquiescence.

"It is such fascinating work, I never tire of it. It is always so full of interest."

Of course, if that is a worker's attitude to what engrosses all her time and attention, that work is sure to be a success.

No one could be more calm and unflurried than this busy woman, more modest about what she has accomplished or diffident about speaking of her successes.—Mignon in Toronto Star Weekly.

COLLEGIATE BOYS MADE GOOD S "COUNTER HOPPERS"

The Sales Manager, Mr. Smith, who is conducting the sale of the Lang stock, reports a big crush on Saturday and big business. The only difficulty that presented itself was that of securing a sufficient number of clerks to handle the sales. Seven or eight of these were required and so many did not present themselves. Mr. Smith then engaged ten youths, for Saturday, principally boys from the Collegiate Institute. To this surprise business ran very smoothly, the boys taking to the duties with alacrity and much good sense. He says that never before has he found so many boys who took up the duty so efficiently, and he did not believe he could have secured the services of an equal number in Hamilton who would have done so well.

REV. G. W. HENDERSON CONCLUDES HIS PASTORATE AT CHARLOTTE STREET METHODIST CHURCH

Rev G. W. Henderson concluded on Sunday his four year term as pastor of the Charlotte street Methodist church. The congregations, morning and evening were exceedingly large, and addresses appropriate and befitting were delivered by the retiring pastor.

During his pastorate of Charlotte street church in Peterborough, Rev. Mr. Henderson has through faithful and energetic efforts witnessed great progress in the affairs of the church.

At the morning service yesterday, the pastor gave a brief resume of the growth o fthe church and its finances, together wtih some statistical information on his pastoral work, during the four years just concluded. The figures will prove interesting inasmuch as they demonstrate beyond question, the extreme measure of success that has crowned his efforts during this ministry in Peterboro.

Approximately, Rev. Mr. Henderson made twenty-five hundred pastoral calls during the four years. He has delivered in the neighborhood of six hundred sermons and addresses, outside of the Sunday school and Epworth League department. He officiated at one hundred and two baptisms, seventy-five marriages and fifty-six burials. The net increase to the membership of the church was ninety-two, and undoubtedly this would have been much larger had it not been for the exodus to St. James Methodist church. The congregation at present, numbers about five hundred and ninety.

Four years ago, the contribution to the general missionary fund was $700. Last year it amounted to $1250, making a net increase of about $525. The grant total of missionary givings aggregated nearly $21,000 in the four gregated nearly $24,000 in the four years. When the size of the congregation is considered, these figures, stated the pastor, compare very favorably with any church that he had ever been connected with.

These figures should prove to the utmost satisfaction, that Charlotte street Methodist church, during Mr. Henderson's pastorate has not retrograded in the least, but has flourished and gone ahead at a highly encouraging rate.

In the evening the pastor dwelt upon the high and holy calling of the ministry, and of the responsibility which rest upon people and pastor or the acceptance and preaching of the gospel.

"The minister is an ambassador in a high and holy calling, a representative of Jehovah himself. He must be true in setting before his people the great issues of life. The minister an this message may be made light of, but God puts upon him pre-eminence. God invests his ministers with almost plenipotentiary powers, and when a minister speaks, he speaks with authority and his message is God speaking. While the minister's opportunities are great, his responsibilitie are also great. There is no danger of a minister becoming inflated with the sense of importance by his pre-eminence, if he thinks upon his responsibilities.

Rev Mr. Henderson leaves the latter part of the week for St. Catharines, his successor, Rev. Mr. Mansell being expected in the city next Thursday.

DEATH OF REV. FATHER CONWAY

Was Rector of St. Peter's From 1882 to 1888.

At the age of 83 years, Rev. Father Patrick Conway passed away at his residence, 311 London street, yesterday morning. He had not been in the best of health for some time, but the illness which brought about his demise was of but one week's duration. Father Conway came from Ireland in 1855, and his first charge after ordination was in St. Catharines. He was rector of St. Peter's Cathedral for six years, from 1882 to 1888, after which he became parish priest of Norwood. He retired in 1910 and came to Peterborough.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at nine o'clock.

THREEPENNY DAY.

A Curious Old Custom That Is Observed at Eton College.

On "threepenny day" a new threepenny piece is presented to each of the pupils in the famous Eton college in England. The custom was founded nearly 400 years ago by Roger Lupton, who was provost of the college from 1502 to 1535. Lupton arranged with the fellows for an annual distribution of money on the anniversary of his death. The provost received 2s. 8d., the fellows, headmaster and Lupton's chaplain 1s. 4d., the other chaplains and usher eightpence, the clerks sixpence and the scholars and choristers a penny each.

The scholars still get this penny in the threepenny pieces distributed to them on Feb. 27, the other twopence being from the gift of Provost Bost, Lupton's successor as provost. There was a tradition at Eton, which has been disproved, but which subsists to the present day, that half a sheep is what the colleger is really entitled to and that the colleges evade their obligation by giving the value of half a sheep in the middle ages. Some time in the middle of the last century a boy named Charles Henry Branwell, on being tendered his threepence by Bethell, one of the fellows, said:

"No, thank you, sir, I want my half sheep."

"Bethell flew into an awful rage," says the late Montagu Williams, who tells the story, "and exclaimed, 'I'll mention this matter to Dr. Hawtrey and have you flogged,' " and flogged the unfortunate youth was.—New York Sun.

School Discipline.

The young teacher should learn and the older teacher remember that for every teacher that fails on account of lax discipline there is another who fails on account of overgovernment. Some teachers assume the same attitude as the policeman who found two men talking on the street corner and ordered them to move on, as there was an ordinance prohibiting crowds gathering on the streets. One man remonstrated, saying that two did not make a crowd. "One makes a crowd if I say so," answered the policeman. A teacher who assumes that whatever he says is law, and it is law because he says it, is making a sad mistake. When the pupils have a definite aim to do and the teacher has a definite aim in what he does there will be no time or occasion to "maintain order." It will maintain itself.—Missouri School Journal.

Origin of the Postmark.

Great Britain, it is said, can without fear of contradiction claim the honor of having originated the postmark. The first one, which was used in London as long ago as 1660, was a very simple affair, consisting of a small circle divided into two parts. In the top portion were two letters indicating the month, while in the lower half the day of the month was shown. No endeavor was made to denote the year, and it is only by the dates of the letters on which the mark is impressed that it is possible to fix the date of its use. The earliest known was on a letter written in 1680.—London Telegraph.

OSBORNE'S CLEVER TWIRLING SHUTOUT THE SAINTS BY 4-0 WHITE CAME INTO HIS OWN

Big Hit of the Day Went to Petes' Left Gardener Who Had a Homer—Manager Stewart Clouted a Lovely Triple—Double Play for the Caps.

Leroy Osborne's all round good twirling and steady fielding by his team, gave the Petes a victory over St. Thomas, by the shutout route at Riverside on Saturday. The score was 4-0.

The tall one had everything from the first innings to the last, and his splendid control, was evidenced in the seventh, when, after handing Graney three straight balls, he retired the batter on strikes.

Both teams hit the ball, but the situation of the first game was reversed, St. Thomas clouting at the fielders, and the Petes where the Saints were not or at least sufficiently to make four tallies. There were no less than seventeen fly balls copped, and Jimmie Beard's work with four of them was pretty to behold.

Byrnes, at short, in the midst of a busy day, contributed a grand catch on Kepp's drive, in the fourth, also getting Stewart off third on the throw to Nasher.

Manager Stewart set a good example for his Saints, in the very first round, by wafting out a lusty triple to right. The hit, however, was wasted, as Powers made the third out, by grounding to Nasher.

The Petes scored a brace in their first. Nasher was safe, when Sweeney threw over first, Rowan followed with a hit and Beard scored Nasher on a two bagger. White was out on a foul fly to the catcher, but Barthold came across with a sacrifice that scored Rowan. Byrne's fly was captured by Graney.

Osborne, first man up in the fifth poked a beautiful hit over second Nasher hit him to second and Wilde's error on Clement's throw to the bag advanced both runners. Rowan dropped a single in left that scored his pitcher. Beard fanned and White grounded out.

The fourth run went to Jack White, who poked out the first ball thrown by Clement and smashed it over the fence for a homer and a box of cigars. White has been hitting the ball in every game played since joining the Petes, but unfortunately for him, at the fielders:

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Jack White, the locals' left-fielder beat out his team-mates for the honor of winning the first box of "Perfection" cigars, kindly donated by S. Davis & Sons Limited, of Montreal to any Peterboro player making a home run at Riverside Park, when he cracked out a beautiful homer against St. Thomas on Saturday afternoon.

◆

The Ottawas introduced their new first baseman, Frank Dolan, the former Peterborough player, and he made a favorable impression. His batting was not so good as it will be when he rounds into shape, but he had one hit, he fielded cleverly and Swartzamier's great catch robbed him of a double at least. Dolan handles himself like a ball player and will evidently be a fixture on the local club.—Evening Citizen.

BAPTISTS DEFEATED THE (SCORE WAS 3-2) CHURCH LEAGUE LEADERS

At the Oval, on Saturday afternoon the Knox eleven, league leaders, went under to the score of 3 goals to two.

This match was of importance, owing to the fact that Park Street's win, probably will figure out a three cornered tie.

The game was fairly fast considering the heat, and as both teams were out to win, a good game was witnessed.

It was only towards the latter end of the first half that either of the teams got really dangerous, and then the play became more interesting when from a well combined rush by the Scotch forwards, first blood was drawn by French. After this reverse, the Baptists came along, and Smith, after a pretty little play of his own, landed Park Street's equalizer, but Knox's being determined, forced a corner, from which Hull scored with a good shot. This left the half time score in favor of the Scotchmen. Knox 2, Park St. 1

SECOND HALF

After the rest, the play was faster, both sides working for a win. Knox's were kept on the defensive for a time, and after some good work, the Baptists were awarded a penalty, with which Mason made no mistake, this equalizing the score again. Midfield play followed and the Scotchmen once more showed a little of what won them their previous games. However, they could not tally again. Foster in goal for the Baptists being very sound. It was some time before the winning goal was landed which came from a well placed free kick from the right wing.

On the day's play Park Street deserved their win, though it was anyone's game till the final whistle blew.

Knox and Park Street are now tied for the leadership, with All Saints at their heels, and whichever team lands the Burnham trophy and the medals will well deserve them.

The game between St. John's and All Saints that was to have followed the Knox and Park Street game, on Oval, was called off.

BASEBALL

Umpire Pearson handled the ball game to-day, Chick Johnson having resigned on Saturday at the request of the League officials and about 99 per cent. of the fans in the Canadian League Circuit.

ANOTHER SIDE TO THE IMMIGRANT QUESTION

High Rates for Lodging and Low Wages do Not Help Him.

A member and former officer of the St. George's Society said to-day that he regrets very much to see politics introduced into that organization, tending, as such a move will, to interfere with the good work the society has been doing among the newly arrived immigrants. He says that very often the source of the trouble exists outside of the province of the department entirely.

CHARGED FIVE DOLLARS.

Recently, he asserts, an immgrant with a wife and three children, arrived in Peterborough and putting up at a private house was charged $5.00 for the night's lodging, or a price about equal to the rates of a first-class hotel. Rather than submit to such charges a majority of the new arrivals prefer to pass the night in the depot or in some equally uncomfortable lodging.

OFFERED LOW WAGES.

This same member of the society added that farmers wishing to secure help are in the habit of offering the immigrants $12 a month, and that a man with a family cannot accept such a scale as it would practically mean starvation when he has to leave his family in the city. That is why so many married immigrants are unable to secure suitable employment and remain idle and consequently in straitened circumstances.

DECORATION OF GRAVES BY THE ODDFELLOWS

The observance of Decoration Day with all its beutiful thoughts and actions by the Independent Order of Oddfellows, at the Little Lake Cemetery, yesterday afternoon, was witnessed by many hundreds of people. Both Otonabee and Peterborough lodges were well represented in the procession, there being about 200 members of the Order on foot and in carriages, and representing both subordinate lodges and the encampment. On the march to the cemetery many people lined the way, and when the procession arrived at Little Lake Cemetery, an immense throng of sympathetic people were there, to witness the beautiful cermony. At the cemetery, conducted by the marshall of the day, Col. W. G. Miller, P. G., a double circle was formed, and from the centre of this the Acting Noble Grand Bro. David Moore, P. G., of Trinity Lodge, 47, delivered the following impressive address:

IN FRIENDSHIP,
LOVE AND TRUTH.

My Brethren,—We are now assembled in the name of "Friendship, Love and Truth," and even were this not the Sabbath Day—coming as we do, with thoughts uplifted, and sympathies aroused by a deep sense of duties before us—the ceremony in which we are to engage, the ceremony of placing these floral tributes above the mortal remains of our departed Brethren, should serve to make this hour sacred. God gave the flowers to beautify the earth, they are one of the gifts of His great love; they are to the earth as the glory of the stars to the firmament, inviting man to a contemplation of the wonderful works of the Great Author of the Universe. Poets have given to flowers a language all their own—roses for love, pansies for thoughts, lilies for purity, rosemary remembrance, all have been given a beautiful symbolism, and they will hold for us a deep significance as lovingly, tenderly we lay them above the resting places of our dead.

I shall not speak to-day of the sadness of death. Sorrow there must be for us as we stand amid these emblems of mortality. And when we consider that some who took part in the decoration ceremony a year ago, are even now resting beneath this verdant sod, those emblems of our Order—the hour-glass, the scythe, and the coffin—are emblems full of meaning to us all. How forcibly they remind us that year by year, day by day, hour by hour, we are passing as the sands of the glass. Yet this is not for us a day of mourning, we bring not dust to dust, ashes to ashes; not the cypress of grief, but flowers of remembrance. Instituted for purposes of self-help, and calculated to aid its members in the struggles incident to life, our Order does not allow death to sever the fraternal relationships formed within our ranks. After the mortal remains of a deceased Brother have been placed within the narrow confines of the grave he still retains a claim on our affections. Through his bereaved and orphaned family he still asks our sympathy and our material aid, and though he has himself passed beyond the need of those kindly benefactions we owe each other in life, he still holds a place in our memory and love. We will stand to-day by the graves of our brethren who have gone to their rest. Some, have reposed beneath the sod for years and their names are almost forgotten by the world. Some have but recently been laid in their lowly bed, and warm hearts are still grieving over their passing away. But for all alike, in sorrow and in love, we have come to awaken tender thoughts of old associations, to call to mind the virtues of the departed, and to lay these flowers on their graves, that shall speak for us better than words can speak. Some verses I was reading recently impressed me very much. They were entitled, "Give them the flowers now." And as we proceed with the ceremony and as we recall this day from time to time, may we remember that flowers to the living are better than flowers to the dead; and there are sweet flowers of kindly word and thoughtful deed that bring no regret.

This is the cruel cross of life, to be Full-visioned only when the ministry
Of death has been fulfilled, and in the place
Of some sweet presence is but empty space.

The Chaplain's prayer followed the address, Bro. T. C. Elliot, P.G., officiating as chaplain.

The ceremony of decoration was then proceeded with, the members dividing into four divisions under the following section leaders: Bros. H. Campbell, Geo. McDonald, T. Duncan and C. Gould.

When the grave of a deceased brother was arrived at, the secretary read the name of deceased and gave a short history of his connection with the Order and the leader read appropriate selections from the book of the ceremony. In this way all of the graves of the deceased members were remembered and decorated, and there having been a general decoration in honor of the day throughout the cemetery, the scene presented at the close of the ceremony was a beautiful one, and calculated to linger long in the thoughts of the many who were present. The following brothers were the committee in charge: Bro. W. S. Robinson, Bro. H. Watts, Bro. T. Sills, Bro. J. Landerville, Bro. R. Craig, Bro. E. Dormer, Bro. R. Hillier, Bro. J. Vallery, Bro. J. Merrett, Bro. G. Gillespie.

NO FAMILIES STRANDED IN PETERBORO FOR WANT OF EITHER MONEY OR WORK

A copy of the following letter was sent to the Examiner to-day by the local Immigration Officer with the request for publication:

Peterborough, 22nd June, 1912.
Editor Peterborough Examiner.

Sir,—Grant me a short space in your paper to refer to some items which appeared in your issue of the 20th, 21st and 22nd inst., regarding immigration and the condition of the immigrants arriving here. I am surprised that you, who always claim to take an interest in the progress and welfare of this city and the country generally, should publish anything so unfounded and absurd, without at least trying to verify the correctness and truth of the statements you were about to publish, which could easily have been done by calling upon the Government Employment Agent here. As a matter of fact some members of your staff did know that what you published was directly opposed to the facts.

There have been no families stranded in Peterborough, for want of either money or work, as states by you. On the contrary, every man, woman, boy and girl, that are able to work, have been given employment immediately upon their arrival. And all parties sent out here by the District Committee of East Ham, and by the Central Body, of London, have been given ample means to pay their way, and keep them for a few days if necessary. The only exception to this, that I know of, is in the case of one family, wherein the father had generously, or foolishly, loaned nearly all he had to some one at Quebec, and as the weather was bad for a few days after his arrival, what little he had was used up before he got settled in his own home, but as I myself paid his bill out of my own, funds, I don't understand why any one has any right to kick about it.

There has been no change made in the regulations regarding immigration. They are the same now as they were last year. And Mr. Burnham is no more responsible for any distress (if there is any) than was Mr. Stratton during the term he represented this city as its member of Parliament. I never heard anyone accuse Mr. Stratton of being responsible for any hardship endured by any immigrant and there was just as much hardship in every other year during the past four years as there has been, or is likely to be, during this year. That being the case, why do you seek to blame Mr. Burnham? Do you think that you are playing the game fairly. If you must oppose Mr. Burnham, please choose some subject, the misrepresentation of which will not have such an evil effect upon the city and country as will the statements you have made regarding the condition of the immigrants in Peterborough.

I may say that I know Mr. Burnham is negotiating for the establishment of a home in this city for the reception of newly arrived immigrants, and I have reason to believe that satisfactory arrangements will soon be completed.

ZADOK THE PRIEST SUNG AT ST. JOHN'S

The famous coronation anthem "Zadok the Priest," was sung at St. John's last night by over 40 voices. This anthem has been sung at the crowning of the monarchs of England for over 150 years, ever since its being composed by the illustrous Handel.

The flowers on the altar yesterday were given by the choir in memory of the late William J. Coleman, who died on the 20th of June, 1911, and was buried on the morning of Coronation Day.

Life Insurance

Marriage is a good thing. It is a part of the duty every young man owes to his race and to the community. And one of the first duties after marriage, is life insurance. The young man of riches may scoff at this, but riches sometimes "take wings" while a life insurance policy in a sound company is something that is not affected by mischance or ill fortune. The young man who depends upon his own efforts for a living, more than any other young man, should follow marriage with life insurance, and thus provide surely for a wife, or for a wife and babies, against the inevitable. Such a young man may demur at this, on the theory that he "can't afford it." But youth is not inclined to consider all possibilities in such a case. Life insurance is one of the things that should be afforded at the expense of something less important. If a young man smokes, he surely can curtail his tobacco supply by one cigar a day, or he can save an equivalent by cutting off something else he does not need. The cost of a single medium price cigar a day will pay the premium on a life-insurance policy, say, for $1,000. And thus, by a slight concession as to a single habit, some necessary provisions may be made for the future.

You will find the most up-to-date policy of to-day issued by the SUN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA,

THE COST OF LIVING.

You Can Easily Keep It Down If You Care to Try This Plan.

In these days of high prices anxious heads of families are eagerly seeking helpful hints for keeping down expenses. As containing such a suggestion the following story of a gormand—and sage—of the sultan's realm, told in Hester Donaldson Jenkins' "Behind Turkish Lattices," is hopefully offered:

It is said there was once a man who so dearly loved his evening meal that every day while he worked he did nothing but plan what it should be. At the thought of the viands his mouth would water and he would rejoice over the food that was coming.

One day it occurred to him that he got more enjoyment from the long anticipation than from the brief realization, and then the thought came to him, Why not have the anticipation without spending the money that the dinner had been costing? So he tried the plan.

"I shall have kibobs and fine pilaff tonight," he would assure himself all day, "and after that wing cake and yogurt."

He would lick his lips in happy anticipation while he worked, and when night came he would eat a simple meal of olives and bread and remark:

"'Tis as if I had eaten."

The plan worked so well that in the course of years he saved enough money to build a mosque, which he called "The 'Tis-as-if-I-had-Eaten Mosque."

Bandits in Canton.

Hong Kong, June 24.—Bandits disguised as soldiers have looted 47 shops in Canton, and a detachment of British troops has been rushed thither from Hong Kong to guard Shameen, the foreign settlement. Reports that foreigners were killed in the fighting following the looting have not been confirmed.

Reserves are being held here to proceed by boat and train to Canton, if their presence is required, and the guns and ammunition of the Hazara artillery also are ready to go forward. It is said that business in Canton is paralyzed. The gates of the city are closed and strong guards patrol the streets.

The British gunboat Rosario left here Saturday for Shameen to strengthen the fleet there. At present there are eleven warships at Shameen.

On the Road to Tientsin

A Manchu and a Chinaman Neutralize Each Other

By MAUD C. WETHERBY

Anarchy reigned in Peking.

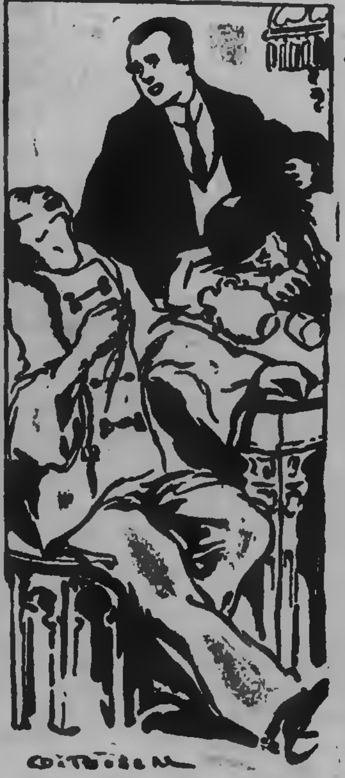
All foreigners knew of and some had passed through the dreadful tragedy of the Boxer uprising about ten years before. Then for months the embassies, protected by the few troops on hand at the time the uprising commenced, waited for the allied European armies to come from Tientsin to their relief. Day after day, week after week passed, while the Chinese were drawing the line ever closer about the embassies, and those belonging to the legations were expecting that the bloodthirsty Mongolians would break down the barricades and murder them.

It looked now as if this former experience were to be repeated. Nevertheless some provision against such a repetition had been made. Before the allies had withdrawn after the Boxer uprising it had been stipulated that the route between Peking and Tientsin on the Yellow sea should be kept open and a sufficient force of European troops maintained at the latter place to be transported in case of danger to the capital.

During this last revolution the American minister, sitting in his office in Peking, came to the decision to wait no longer, but summon troops from Tientsin. Tapping a bell, an attendant entered.

"Tell Mr. Kinworthy that I wish to see him at once," said the minister.

While the attendant was executing the order the minister arose from his desk and walked back and forth on the floor with a troubled countenance. He had the responsibility of the lives of the persons belonging to the embassy, including a number of women and children. Every day the women were becoming more anxious until this anxiety became terror. The yells, the shrieks, the firing in the streets could be heard, and every new sound caused those within the inclosure to give an involuntary start.



"THEY HAVE POISONED EACH OTHER!"

"Mr. Kinworthy," said the minister, when that gentleman entered, "I wish you to go to Tientsin and order forward all the American troops you find there—that is, if you can get through. I fear we have delayed sending for assistance too long and that any messenger we dispatch to Tientsin will be waylaid and murdered. You must therefore know that you go on a dangerous mission."

"I thoroughly understand that."

"I have chosen you for the work rather than any of the soldiers or sailors here because I think you have ingenuity to meet any attempts to get the better of you, whereas a military man would feel it his duty to fight openly and single handed."

"I do not consider myself a match in duplicity with a Chinaman, but I will do my best."

"You have a great advantage in speaking the language. My plan for you is to travel as any other foreign citizen. This movement has not yet turned against us foreigners, but there are those among the Chinese who are awaiting and expecting that result. It is my opinion that any one leaving this embassy will be watched and followed.

"No one will at present dare to attack him openly, but will not hesitate to make away with him secretly. You will be under observation from the moment you depart till you return, if you ever do return. You must therefore be on your guard every moment. This is the order for the commanding officer of the American troops to come at once to our relief and protection."

"I shall do my best to deliver it," said the young man and withdrew.

Within half an hour after this interview Paul Kinworthy strolled out of the legation grounds swinging a cane and, after walking about the city, went toward the road leading to Tientsin. Believing that the safest course for him was to walk to a station below the city and there take a train, he strolled along as though out for a constitutional walk. A couple of hours later he stopped at a railway station, but since a train was not due to take him southward for an hour he went to an inn to await its arival.

Seating himself in a room used for sojourners, he was looking out through a window, idly tapping his boots with a walking stick he carried, when a Chinaman entered and saluted him in the Chinese language. Kinworthy was naturally suspicious of any one who made an advance to him, but answered the salute with civility, as the most politic course to pursue. The man entered upon the subject of the revolution and, being a Manchu, showed plainly that his sympathies were not with the new regime. Kinworthy did what he could to steer clear of any opinion whatever on Chinese affairs. The man insisted on keeping up the conversation long after Kinworthy had ceased to make any response, though he gave the Manchu his full attention.

Presently another native of the country came into the room and, seeing Kinworthy, saluted him by name, asserting that he had seen him quite often in Peking. The Manchu seemed to regard this newcomer with disfavor, which Kinworthy accounted for on the ground that the latter was Chinese. But neither Chinaman seemed inclined to give way to the other in the matter of cultivating Kinworthy's acquaintance. They discussed the revolution in all its aspects, and since they were on opposite sides their arguments grew heated. The Chinaman was in favor of a republic, while the Manchu supported the empire.

Kinworthy feared they would come to blows, with the result of attracting attention to himself. What he most wished for was to travel as inconspicuously as possible. He therefore conceived the idea of proposing some refreshment. Both men agreed with alacrity, and Kinworthy ordered a small bottle of wine that had been imported from France. A waiter brought it in on a tray with three glasses.

Now, Kinworthy had spent ten years in China and never had anything to do with a Chinaman without watching his slightest movement. Kinworthy poured out the wine, and each man was about to take up his glass when the Manchu, hearing a noise outside, ran to the window. Kinworthy turned his glance in that direction, but kept an eye on the Chinaman. A quick movement of the wrist convinced the diplomat that the latter had flirted something into two of the glasses. The Manchu, not having discovered anything of importance outside, returned to the others. All three drank their wine, but Kinworthy held his in his throat and presently, taking out his handkerchief to wipe his mouth, got rid of it in the linen.

The Manchu now produced a cigarette case and absentmindedly put one in his mouth, then, apologizing, offered the case to the others. Kinworthy took one, but instead of lighting it laid it on the table, saying that he never smoked—a rather risky statement since he had cigars in his pocket at the time. The Chinaman and the Manchu both puffed lustily.

From the moment the wine and cigarettes were introduced a drowsiness appeared to be creeping over Kinworthy's two self constituted friends. The Manchu defended the monarchy, and the Chinaman declared a republic was the right form of government for China as it was for America, picturing the great progress in store for his country that had been achieved by the wonderful land lying in the far west. But the more the two talked the thicker grew their tongues. Finally the Manchu leaned back in his chair and snored. The Chinaman endeavored to get to a window, but failed, sinking down on the floor in a heap.

"By Jove," exclaimed Kinworthy, "they've poisoned each other, each intending to poison me! Likely each, unknown to the other, tracked me here to prevent my getting to Tientsin; but, colliding, they destroyed themselves instead of me. I saw the Chinaman drop something in my glass and the glass of the Manchu, and when the Manchu forgot to offer his cigarettes till after he had taken one himself I knew he, too, was up to mischief."

The three men had been left alone in the room together, and Kinworthy, raising the window, stepped outside and, taking a circuitous route to the station, concealed himself in a wood near by, where he waited for the train. He had but ten minutes to wait, but ever afterward declared that it was the longest ten minutes of his life. Then the train arrived, and, leaving his hiding place, he boarded it. As it moved on he kept his eye on the inn where he had left two dying men, and when it was nearly lost to view he saw evidences of a commotion.

Then he drew one long breath of relief.

No one except the two who had neutralized each other was on his track, and he had no more trouble in reaching Tientsin, where he delivered his chief's message to the officer in command.

When Kinworthy got back from Tientsin and reported in person to the minister that gentleman looked at him wonderingly and said:

"I never expected to see you again. One of our Chinese servants told me that he knew of your being followed by a Manchu, and another told of a Chinaman who had gone on the same errand."

"They met me and each other," said Kinworthy, and he told of his adventure.

BRYAN PRESSES THE CROWN OF THORNS UPON THE BROWS OF HIS POLITICAL COHORTS

Opposes the Selection of Judge Parker for Temporary Chairman of the Democratic Convention After National Committee Had Declared for Him by a Vote of 31-32.

Special to the Review.

Baltimore, June 25.—Following the invocation by Cardinal Gibbons in the Democratic National Convention which opened shortly after noon today, Senator Kern, of Indiana, Bryan's candidate for temporary chairman, entered the hall and the galleries at once started wild cheering for Bryan who had entered unobserved, earlier.

Quiet being restored Chairman Mack directed the announcement of the temporary organization. The first name, that of Alton B. Parker, for temporary chairman, was greeted with a deafening demonstration. As the list of names was concluded Bryan rose and was acclaimed with such vigor that he could not be heard for a time. When the demonstration subsided Bryan placed in nomination for temporary chairman, the name of Senator John W. Kern, of Indiana.

In the National Committee earlier in the day Bryan's candidate for chairman was defeated, Judge Parker securing 31 and the Bryan man 22 votes.

Baltimore, June 25.—All hope of averting a fight from the fall of the gavel in the Democratic national convention vanished last night when the national committee approved the selection of former Judge Alton B. Parker of New York as temporary chairman, in defiance of the threat of William Jennings Bryan to make an issue of the alleged conservatism of Judge Parker as opposed to the progressiveism which the distinguished Nebraskan declares should prevail.

An effort was made by the national committee yesterday to placate Mr. Bryan, but a conference resulted in complete failure. Mr. Bryan would not recede from the position he had taken and last night prepared to make his fight from the floor of the convention to-day to rally progressives to his standard in opposition to Judge Parker.

Mr. Bryan announced yesterday that if no other good progressive could be prevailed upon to enter the race, he would enter the field himself as the opponent of Judge Parker.

The Nebraskan, three times the candidate of his party for the Presidency, stood out yesterday as the dominant figure in the convention. All contingencies of the future, including the nomination of a Presidential candidate, seemed to hinge upon what he should do. The impression continued to be more marked that Mr. Bryan might himself be the ultimate Presidential nominee. Some of his friends last night declared that he would be voted for in the convention whether formally placed in nomination or not, and they expressed the belief that he would win if the voting should go to a fourth or fifth ballot.

In the event that Mr. Bryan should not be a candidate himself for temporary chairman, it was said he might urge Senator John W. Kern of Indiana, his running mate of four years ago, for the place. The leaders last night, expected Mr. Bryan to enter the race.

The debate over the temporary chairmanship was not prolonged. Representative Talbot, the Maryland member, severely criticized Mr. Bryan and declared that the Nebraskan has assumed the role of dictator to the Democratic party.

"I, for one," said Mr. Talbot, "do not propose to submit to the dictation of this man or any one man."

Launching New Party.

Cleveland, June 25.—A new political party from the ground up is the Roosevelt program.

After a series of discusions with his lieutenants yesterday before leaving Chicago, in which there were several sharp cleshes, Col. Roosevelt decided to cut entirely away from the party which his whole public career has been identified. His decision was a disappointment to those who favored the organization of what might be considered an independent Republican party with which various state organizations might co-operate and still maintain, it was hoped, a nominal regularity.

"There must be no compromise, no straddle," Col. Roosevelt said. As an indication of his determination, he said that when he returned to Oyster Bay he would communicate with a number of Democrats who, he thought, might wish to join the new party.

When he had left Chicago, with the first plans completed and his leaders scattering to all parts of the country, Col. Roosevelt expressed himself as pleased with the outcome of convention week, although it was unexpected by him.

Roosevelt In to Stay.

Chicago, June 25.—Col. Roosevelt left for New York yesterday afternoon. He was accompanied to the station by Alexander H. Revell and several leaders of the Roosevelt campaign.

A crowd gathered at the station and cheered the colonel. He bowed acknowledgement, and as the train pulled out stood on the back platform and shouted:

"I am in the fight to win."

In answer to a question, "Will your position be influenced by any act of the Baltimore convention?" Col. Roosevelt said:

"It will not be. I shall not depart from what I said on Saturday night. I shall accept the Progressive nomination on a Progressive platform and shall fight the battle through to the end."

Conference at White House.

Chicago, June 25.—The Republican National Committee meeting yesterday was brief and adjourned after the appointment of a committee of nine to confer with President Taft and ascertain his wishes regarding the naming of a chairman and the conduct of the campaign.

The committee of nine decided to meet next Monday at the White House to confer with President Taft.

The national committee authorized a committee of nine to make the selection of the Republican national chairman, and to name the secretary of the national committee after the conference with President Taft.

FIELD MARSHAL WHITE'S RECORD

London, June 25.—Field Marshal Sir George White, best known as the defender of Ladysmith, governor of Chelsea Hospital, London's home for aged soldiers, and one of the most distinguished soldiers in the British army, died yesterday in his 77th year.

Sir George White, who was an Irishman, having been born in County Antrim in 1835, passed through a strenuous life as a soldier, fighting Britain's battles in all parts of the world.

He went through the terrible hardships of the Indian Mutiny in 1857 as a young officer, taking part, in many engagements with the Sepoys. In 1863 he became a captain, and in 1873 a major. It was during the Afghan was in 1879-80 that he made his fame and won the distinction of the Victoria Cross "for valor."

He accompanied Lord Roberts on his march to Candahar, and in the final charge he rode straight up to the muzzles of the Afghan cannon, capturing one with his own hands, and assured the British victory.

He afterwards participated in the Soudanese expedition in 1885 for the relief of General Gordon and became a colonel, and in 1885-6 commanded a brigade in the Burmese war.

He was promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general for distinguished services in the field, and thanked by the Government of India. He conducted an expedition into Zhob, and from 1893-8 commanded the forces in India. He was quartermaster-general to the forces 1898-9, and in 1899-1901 at the outbreak of the South African war, he was in command of the army in Natal. He held Ladysmith against a superior Boer force from Nov. 2 1889, to March 1, 1900, 119 days in all, under conditions which commanded the admiration of the whole world. After the war he was appointed governor of the fortress of Gibraltar.

Thaw Swatted Flies.

White Plains, N.Y., June 25.—Thaw took his own temperature with a thermometer while confined in the tombs John A. Braunpas, an orderly, testified, and on one occasion reported that he had a raging fever. The thermometer registered 109 degrees, he said, but this was because Thaw had held it upside down.

The prison record books, introduced in evidence, contained an entry that Thaw had busied himself in his cell by swatting imaginary flies.

Ship Ashore Off Labrador.

Montreal, June 25.—The signal service report of conditions in the river and Gulf of St. Lawrence, contain the following laconic message from Point Amour:

"Norwegian ship proceeding to Green Bay was driven by ice to Labrador and went ashore at Battle Harbor."

There is no wireless at the latter point, and no word as to the identity of the vessel has been received.

Bank Teller Shoots Himself.

Saskatoon, Sask., June 25.—Frank Gillespie, teller of the local branch of the Dominion Bank, shot himself through the head at 12.40 yesterday. The cause of his act is shrouded in mystery, as the management of the bank refuses to divulge any facts at present. The suicide was committed in the basement of the bank.

PROF. PARKER REACHES PEAK OF LOFTY MOUNT McKINLEY

Special to the Review.

New York, June 25.—A despatch from Seattle says that a letter has been received by Mrs. George Browne, Tacoma, from her son, Belmore Belmore Brown, member of Prof. Herschel Parker's Mount McKinley expedition, stating the party has succeeded in scaling the mountain, which is America's highest peak. This is the first time it has been scaled.

Making a Flat World Round

When Columbus set out to reach India by sailing westward, he met with opposition and ridicule.

He believed the earth to be round.

Wise men held that it was flat—that Columbus was mad—and that he'd fall off somewhere if he departed from established beliefs.

But Columbus' belief found him a continent and made him blessed of memory.

The Business World is flat to some men
Their profit-bearing shores of Opportunity stretch only so far as their grandfathers trod. Custom, superstition and apathy have set them confines which they may not pass.

For instance, they believe the business year is a flat one—not an all-year round of trade, with East joining West, with Spring merging into Autumn—but just two distinct seasons, with sawed-off edges gaping into space.

They confine their activities to a Spring trade and to a Fall trade. To them there is no intervening continent with stores of waiting wealth. Their world is flat. They have not explored the mid-year months of Summer trade. June, July and August are never-never land.

Surely this conception of Summer as a "dull" season is as fallacious as the delusion that the earth was flat. People have just as much money in the hot weather and spend quite as freely as in Spring and Fall. Granted that they are not buying skates and snow shovels in August, yet they are buying staple articles. Furthermore, they have an eye on luxuries and comforts they are counting upon purchasing in the Fall.

The modern Columbus has discovered this Summer trade—this golden West lying between the known continents of old beliefs. Departing from established habit, many have made their energies and their Advertising an all-year-round proposition.

Keeping up Advertising during the Summer months not only links your Spring and Fall, but produces rich harvests from the Summer months themselves.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any recognized Canadian advertising agency, or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503 Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write, if interested.

KNIGHTS OF ST. JOHN ARE 2,500 STRONG IN TORONTO

Toronto, June 25.—The great parade is over, in which 2,500 Knights of St. John marched blithely over a long and hot route through the streets, watched and cheered by the ladies of the auxiliaries of the order and thousands of curious and interested citizens. To-day the big convention gets down to business at St. Mary's Hall, Bathurst and Adelaide street, after attending a solemn requiem mass at St. Michael's Cathedral, to be said for the souls of departed knights.

Yesterday morning the convention was opened by Pontificial High Mass said at the cathedral by Rev. Father Kidd, administrator of the diocese. The great building was crowded. After mass the knights and ladies moved to the Normal School grounds where a photograph was taken, and whence they went to Canadian Foresters' Hall in College street, where they received addresses of welcome. Vicar-General McCann told them that they had a high and exalted work in the betterment of men, wherefore the doors of the church were opened to them. He was followed by Mayor Geary, who made them free of the city, which welcome was endorsed by Ald. McGuire, chairman of the reception committee of the City Council.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the knights, arrayed in full regalia and bearing streaming banners, formed for the great parade at Queen's Park and with each commandery headed by its own or one of the city bands, the procession moved away over its long march. With their smart uniforms they made a most creditable appearance. The men marched with the order and precision of the military.

Judgment Withheld a Month.

Washington, June 25.—After Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, had been sentenced yesterday in the contempt case, he attacked the decision, declaring that while Justice Wright lives in our time, his decision and sentences disclose a mental concept of more than two centuries ago when the workman was either a slave or a serf.

"Information just came to me that the decision was completed more than a month ago, but withheld until after the close of the Chicago Republican National Convention. If true, the inference is obvious."

Gaynor Boom Is On.

New York, June 25.—Gaynor supporters, 200 strong, got away from the Pennsylvania station for Baltimore yesterday morning in a special train of five cars. Four special trains took the Tammany hosts.

Jacob A. Cantor headed the Gaynor delegation, and each member carried a large umbrella bearing a likeness of the mayor. These will be opened when th boomers march from the station to their hotel. Badges with the inscription: For President; he can win," were also conspicuous.

Mrs. Pankhurst Almost Died.

London, June 25.—Mrs. Pethick Lawrence was released from Holloway Jail yesterday afternoon.

Miss Annie Kenny, who has been directing the Women's Social and Political Union during the imprisonment of the suffragist leaders, announces that Mrs. Pankhurst was released because she was found on Sunday night to be at the point of death. All attempts to forcibly feed her had failed.

Reginald McKenna, Home Secretary, admits that Mrs. Pankhurst's heart was too weak to permit of forced feeding.

ROOSEVELT SAYS NOTHING YET

Special to the Review.

New York, June 25.—Theodore Roosevelt reached New York from Chicago this morning and went directly to the editorial offices of the Outlook. He will go to Oyster Bay this afternoon. He said he had no statement to give out to-day, but probably within a week there would be a conference in New York with members of the committee appointed to conduct his third campaign.

Accused Pleads Guilty.

Toronto, June 25.—Pleading guilty to robbing and assaulting Wm. Cale, a drug clerk, in Lambton Mills last Wednesday, Albert Phillips, an employe of the Swift Company, was remanded till Friday by Magistrate Ward in the county police court yesterday. The remand was made for the purpose of allowing the prisoner to produce character evidence. Phillips and Cale had been drinking together in the Lambton Mills Hotel on Wednesday night, after which they walked to a nearby field, where it is alleged, that Phillips turned on his erstwhile pal and assaulted and robbed him of a watch, fob, camera, ring and tie pin. County Constabe Simpson made the arrest.

CONGRESS MEETS IN QUEBEC TO FOSTER FRENCH LANGUAGE

Quebec, June 25.—One of the most unique and possibly one of the most significant events in the history of the French race in North America is taking place in Quebec this week. When Mgr. P. M. Roy declared the Congress of the French Language formally open in the Drill Hall last night he stood on the platform with perhaps the most famous representatives of the French race in America.

Among the distinguished gentlemen who occupied positions on the platform were the following: Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Lomer Gouin, Sir Francois Langelier; Mrs. Stagni, papal ablegate; Mr. Etienne Lamy, member of the French Academy; Mayor Drouin, Rev. A. Casse, rector of Laval University; Archbishop Bruchesi, Sir P. Landry, Archbishop Begin, Archbishop Langevin of Manitoba, and Mgr. Roy.

McGovern Explains.

Madison, Wis., June 25.—Senator La Follette's defeat in the Chicago convention was attributed by Governor F. E. McGovern yesterday afternoon to the 'mismanagement of his campaign—a mismanagement that was well-nigh criminal."

The governor said that Walter L. Houser, La Follette's campaign manager, is "responsible for the election of Senator Root and so of the whole calvacade of calamity that followed."

Governor McGovern, in a long statement in justification of his candidacy for temporary chairman of the national convention, presented figures tending to show that had he been named chairman, the net Taft strength would have been 480, and the net Roosevelt strength 470.

DEATH LIST IN DROWNING DISASTER REACHES FORTY

Twenty-One Bodies Have Thus Far Been Recovered at Eagle Park, Grand Island, and as Many More Are Said to Be Missing — Boats Sent Down the River in the Hope of Finding More Bodies.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 25.—At least forty people were drowned when the pier at Eagle Park, Grand Island, collapsed Saturday night, the authorities believe. The victims were all Buffalo people. Twenty-one bodies have been recovered at latest reports. A close watch is being kept below, as well as above the falls for bodies.

The identified dead are: Mrs. Arthur Mayer, Mrs. John Hayes, Mrs. Lillie Kellogg, Celia Kelly (9 years old), Mrs. Agnes S. Gallagher, Miss Catherine Wolff, Miss Irene Thomas, Miss Alice Griffs (17 years old), Flora A. Helstrom (5 years), Miss Georgie Seeds (28 years), Alfred Finn (23 years), Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Snyder (22 and 21 years), Miss May Gretch (22 years), Clare Schultz (42 years), Miss Annie Fremeng (22 years).

Missing: Mrs. A. L. Helstrom (34 years), Miss Nellie Goodwell (22 years), Edna Leidhisher (15 years), Mrs. George McKee and 10-year-old daughter, Mrs. George Richmeyer, Norman Richmeyer (10 years), Miss Christine Wacker (20 years), Mrs. George Nestor (31 years), Mary Nester (13 years), Miss Violet Senf (16 years), Mrs. Edward Westphal (25 years), Mrs. Grace Heide (26 years), and Nora Meyers (4 years).

Boats were sent down the river from Eagle Park early yesterday to recover bodies. A mile below the landing there is a reef running several hundred feet out into the river, which, with a shore swing of the current, forms a natural basin, and into this it is believed that the bodies will be carried.

There is some difference in the stories of eye-witnesses as to whether the boats contributed to the collapse of th dock by striking it when they came in, or whether it sank under the sheer weight of the people standing on it. Skipper Fix declared yesterday that there was no perceptible jar when he warped in. He had lines over two of the snubbing posts, but the pressure on these was not great, as he was steaming slowly against the current, which was also aiding in the swing toward the shore.

Seven Shot In Strike Trouble.

Hastings-on-the-Hudson, N.Y., June 25.—Seven persons, including a woman and a small boy, were shot yesterday afternoon in a clash between strikers and special deputies guarding the National Conduit & Cable Co.'s works, where a strike has been in progress for some time.

The woman was probably mortally wounded and all the others are in a serious condition.

The others wounded were strikers or sympathizers. So far as could be learned the shots were fired by the guards and not returned by the strikers. The small boy injured was playing in the streets.

HUMBER MURDERER STILL AT LARGE

Toronto, June 25.—The death of Mike Gyrada, the Pole, who was murdered at the Humber Bay Polish colony on Sunday, did not result from his being shot down by Joe Napoli, who is held on a charge of murder. Gyrada was stabbed to death.

Big Frank, alias Frank Napoli, alias Frank Sastito, is likely to be charged with double murder when the findings of the post mortem examinations are made known. Both Masternak and Gyrada died as a result of knife wounds and no bullets struck either of them.

According to the statement of Thos. Masternak, brother of the dead man, Big Frank was the man who did all the stabbing, while Napoli fired the shots from the revolver which residents heard. At the police station, the prisoner stated that he had no knife. The revolver, which he is said to have used, has five chambers loaded and the sixth discharged, so that the wounds that caused death to the two Poles were inflicted in the scuffle with the knife owned by Big Frank.

Napoli maintains that he did not touch the knife, and as there were only the four in the fight the man now sought will be charged with double murder when the autopsy report is made by Dr. Forbes Godfrey.

The doctor has refused to discuss the case, but the information is correct beyond doubt and is the outcome of a careful investigation into the case.

New possibilities are opened up by this view of the crime. John Masternak, the other Pole, died in the Western Hospital from knife wounds. He went to the assistance of his friend, Gyrada, just before Napoli drew the revolver and fired. Only one shot was discharged from the gun which Thos. Masternak, brother of the second murdered man, said he took from Napoli and turned over to the police.

It has been stated by witnesses that Big Frank was the Italian who used the knife, and Joe Napoli had the revolver. Therefore, as both the dead men were stabbed, Big Frank must have inflicted the injuries to both. If the post mortem report shows that death was caused by these knife wounds, then an attempt will be made to fasten the double murder on the foreman.

Joe Napoli, the man now held in custody, says that the Poles fired on him with a small pistol; that he did not have one and did not possess a knife. It has been suggested that the gun turned over to the police was the one the Poles owned, and that they discharged the shot and were then stabbed by either Big Frank or both the Italians.

With a posse of detectives and county constables searching the woods in the vicinity of Humber Bay for him, and circulars bearing his description spread over the neighboring towns and villages, Big Frank still evades the officers. Yesterday's search utterly failed to find him.

CHINA TURNS DOWN THE LOAN

Special to the Review.

Washington, June 25.—Advices received at the State Department today says that China has rejected the three hundred million loan from a banking group of six of the Powers, probably because of the stipulation for foreign supervision of the expenditure. Four cabinet officers of Tong Shao Yo have offered their resignations.

TO REDUCE DEBT.

Lloyd-George Tells How He Will Spend Surplus.

London, June 25.—The rumors that David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, proposed to devote a part of the surplus of $32,500,000 to the reduction of the National debt, which led to an improvement in the price of consols on the market, were confirmed yesterday afternoon, when the Chancellor announced in the House of Commons that $25,000,000 was to be used in the reduction of the debt, and $5,000,000 for the construction of additional ships for the navy in the present year in order to meet Germany's naval increase.

This, he said, would involve heavier changes subsequently. The other $2,500,000 is to be devoted to the development of the committee on resources, etc., of Uganda and British East Africa.

This year the additional sum which Mr. Churchill would ask for, he continued, did not exceed $5,000,000, but further heavy payments would fall due in subsequent years as the result of the British naval program. Mr. Churchill had found it necessary to outline.

That left a balance of over $26,000,000 which was not disposed of. There was, however, a new item of expenditure which he (Lloyd-George) proposed to recommend to the House. It had reference to the expansion and development of the resources of East Africa and Uganda. The Colonial Office was pressing the Exchequer for an advance for the further development of that exceeding rich country. He had recommended a year or two ago a portion of the surplus should be expended in the extension of the railways of Uganda and of the protectorate, and for the construction of a deepwater pier and jetty.

Moonlight Excursion

A congregational moonlight excursion under the auspices of the young men of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, will be held on Thursday evening, June 27th, per steamer Geneva. The boat will leave Wolfe street wharf at 8.15 p.m. sharp.

TOWN OF CHICOUTIMI WAS ALMOST WIPED OUT BY FIRE

Quebec, June 25.—A fire which broke out in Chicoutimi, in the district of Saguenay, yesterday afternoon, destroyed a large number of buildings, including the Chateau Saguenay, the cathedral, Town Hall and the Chicoutimi Hotel, also a number of blocks containing private residences and stores. At 6 p.m. the fire was under control. The loss will be heavy.

The fire broke out at 10 a.m. at the Chateau Saguenay and communicated to the establishment Colozza. In a short time it had ravaged Racine street and Convent street. The cathedral was destroyed, the fire catching in the belfry. The Seminary, convent, school and about twenty stores and shops, as well as many residences, are in ashes. Nearly one thousand people are homeless.

Find of Natural Gas.

Montreal, June 25.—The Grand Trunk officials announced yesterday morning that word had been received from Tofield, a point on the Grand Trunk Pacific forty-one miles from Edmonton, that natural gas in large quantities had been found there. Recently coal was discovered in this locality.

Canada Was Fourth.

London, June 25.—At the London Horse Show, Russia was winner of the Edward VII. Cup, France was second, England third and Canada fourth.

THE GARBAGE QUESTION AGAIN

Once more, the question of collecting the city's garbage is in a muddle as Mr. Downey has refused to go on with the work, claiming that the by-law does not compel citizens to leave their garbage in convenient places, and consequently he cannot do the work at the figure originally agreed upon As no contract has been signed with the council, Mr. Downey can drop out without penalty to himself.

In the meantime garbage is piling up especially in the outlying districts of the city. Twice, the Council has essayed to have the work done by private contract, and twice they have failed. In one case, the plea was made that the compensation was inadequate, and in the other, the reason for abandoning the work is a defective by-law with regard to the placing of garbage receptacles. On the other hand, citizens complain that even garbage cans left near the sidewalk have not been collected. Very naturally, the residents of Peterboro are disposed to insist that a work for the payment of which they are taxed should be faithfully performed.

It is up to the Council to have the garbage of the city collected. If it cannot be done by contract, then the only alternative is to have it performed by city employees and it seems that this is the course which the aldermen will finally adopt. All that is required now is a dumping ground for the refuse and this will be secured in North Monaghan, the purchase to be sanctioned at the next meeting of the City Council.

HIGHWAY FOR MOTOR TRUCKS

The meeting held at Oakville the other day marks a new era in the transportation problem of the country and indicates the part the motor truck is likely to play in competition with the steam and radial railways in the handling of local freight. It was a representative gathering attended by civic officials from Toronto and Hamilton, local representatives in parliament and by reeves and councillors from the municipalities interested. One of the moving spirits in the assemblage was A. S Foster, editor of the Oakville Star and reeve of his town, who never neglects an opportunity to support the movement for good roads in the rural districts.

The proposition is to build a concrete roadway from Toronto to Hamilton, along the Lake Shore, through one of the richest market gardening districts in the country. Over such a highway the products of these gardens could be sent either to Hamilton or Toronto by motor truck every day in season, and other farm products such as milk, butter and eggs, could be sent over the same route throughout the entire year. This would not only afford the farmers a ready market but would ensure the consumers in the cities fresh supplies and lower prices.

W. A. McLean, Provincial Highway Engineer, estimated that the proposed roadway would cost $600,000, and it was figured by those at the meeting that this could be realized in five years by the increased taxes due to the enhanced value of property adjacent to the highway, so that the investment was regarded as a good business venture. A strong and representative committee, made up of Toronto and Hamilton public men and local municipal officers was appointed to wait upon the Government and have the cost apportioned among the towns and townships to be benefited. The Federal Government will also be asked for aid, and it was the sense of the meeting that at least one-third of the cost should be derived from this source.

Dissatisfaction with the railways was responsible for the inception of this movement. Sometimes freight shipped from points between Hamilton and Toronto for either of the cities does not reach its destination for over a week and the cost of transportation not only lessens the profits of the producer but increases the cost to the consumer and this circumstance is regarded as an important factor in the high cost of living. Peterborough has the same cause for complaint with regard to railway transportation of freight between this city and Toronto.

The Oakville meeting was not a gathering of a few fanatics to advocate impracticable and visionary schemes. It was an assemblage of hard headed business men who decided to push a public utility as something not only likely to relieve a congested business situation but one that is sure to yield quick and adequate returns. And the movement just inaugurated is likely to become general throughout the country.

Phillip Martin, aged 23, convicted at Hamilton of burglary, was sentenced to five years. He has served seven terms already.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Guelph can no longer hog the whole show. Peterboro now has a fire department shake up of its own.

The number of Liberals in the New Brunswick Legislature, has been reduced from two to one. There should be no difficulty in an opposition of that size agreeing upon a policy and presenting a solid front to the Government.

The protective policy endorsed by the Republican convention and which makes the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad the basis for the imposition of duty is the same old plank which Roosevelt himself placed in the platform four years ago. Progressive Republicans stand for the recall of judges, but the Chicago platform declares against that menace to the independence of the bench.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 24.—Business in all lines of grain over the cable continues very quiet, but there was a fairly good enquiry for oats on spot, for which sellers were asking more money for round lots to arrive, which buyers did not feel disposed to pay, consequently no sales were made. The domestic and export demand for flour continues quiet, but the undertone to the market is strong. Demand for millfeed limited, but a fair trade is passing in rolled oats. Butter is quiet, but the feeling in the market is better. There was an increased demand from English buyers for cheese, but as the prices bid were in many cases below exporters' views, the volume of business done was small. Eggs fairly active. Provisions steady.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 85½c to 86c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, June 24.—The following prices were paid at the Union Stock Yards to-day:

Choice Exports.

The choice exports ruled the market yesterday at figures from $7.90 to $8.40, 300 being sold to Swift & Co. of Chicago for London and Liverpool markets.

Choice Butchers.

Prime to Fair.

Dealers were paying readily from $7.10 to $7.85 for handsome steers and heifers of grass-fed class, and were eager to take them at this range.

Medium to Common.

All in this class went without parleying at prices from $6 to $6.85, and the entire bunch was cleaned up by noon. The market demands a large number of the cheaper grades every day and at ruling figure yesterday no chance on losing an early bargain was passed.

Cows.

Good, heavy cows were sold at from $5.75 to $6.90, and there was no gnarling at the old ones. Canners even humped along at the rapid pace of from $3 to $3.50.

Butcher Bulls.

Altho the market was nearly stalled with old and discarded bulls, the price was not prevented from rising steadily, and figures of from $5.25 to $6.50 were paid.

Sheep and Lambs.

The supply was low, but being up to the usual number offered, and prices stiffened. Parcels that weighed, individually, around 120 lbs., went from $4.75 to $5.50. Lambs carried the high figures up to $10 in several instances, with a range of from $9 to $9.60 being recorded.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 24.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending June 22 were 1900 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 1200 calves. The offerings on the market to-day were 1000 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 500 calves.

The bulk of the cattle offered were grass-fed, as all the stall-fed stock thru-out the country are about exhausted, and as the former have not been feeding long enough to be well finished, the quality was generally poorer than it has been of late. Consequently really choice steers and heifers were scarce and prices ruled firm, but as there was an increased supply of stock the tone of the market was weaker and prices declined 25c to 35c per cwt. A few full car loads of choice grass-fed steers and heifers weighing 1200 pounds each, were bought by local packers at $8.25, and in small lots sales were made as high as $8.50 per cwt. Common cows in full carloads sold at $4.50 to $5 and the top price realized for bulls was $6.50 per cwt.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for hogs, prices being firmly maintained on account of the small offerings, with some drovers asking an advance of 15c per cwt., which packers would not pay. The demand was good and finally the market was cleaned up of all the selected lots at $9 to $9.25 per cwt., weighed off cars.

Supplies of small meats were larger than usual and the tone of the market was easier, common calves being $1.50 to $2 per head cheaper, but choice stock was scarce and in demand at full values. Sheep were lower, the top price paid for ewes being $5 per cwt., and spring lambs were unchanged.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.25 to $8.60, medium, $6.50 to $7.50; common, $5 to $6; choice cows, $6 to $6.50; medium, $4.50 to $5.80; bulls, $4.50 to $6.50; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90; common and medium, $65 to $75; springers, $50 to $60.

Sheep—Ewes, $5; bucks and culls, $4 to $4.50; lambs, $6 to $6.50.

Hogs—F.o.b., $9 to $9.25.

Calves—$1.50 to $8.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, June 24.—Cattle—Receipts, 2500; active, 15c to 25c higher; prime steers, $9.25 to $9.50; shipping, $8.25 to $9; butchers, $6 to $8.50; heifers, $6 to $8.25; cows, $3 to $7; bulls, $4 to $7; stockers and feeders, $4 to $6; stock heifers, $4 to $4.65; fresh cows and springers, active, strong to $2 higher; $30 to $70.

Hogs—Receipts, 14,000; active and strong; heavy, $8 to $8.05; mixed and yorkers, $7.75 to $8; pigs, $7.50 to $7.60; roughs, $6.90 to $7; stags, $5 to $6; dairies, $7.50 to $7.90.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 6400; active; lambs and ewes, steady; others, 15c to 25c lower; lambs, $5 to $9.50; yearlings, $7.50 to $8; wethers, $5.25 to $5.65; ewes, $3 to $4.75; sheep, mixed, $3.50 to $5.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years, was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The DIAMOND CIPHER

A Baseball Romance

By W. A. PHELON

(Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman. Copyright in Canada and Great Britain)

"Mr. Yazimoto, you have been misinformed. I cannot imagine where you gained your information, but it is wrong, completely wrong. I have no cipher for sale, and am sorry that I cannot oblige you."

Mr. Yazimoto sighed as he replaced the portly pocketbook.

"I am deeply sorry, Mr. Brockett, that you should lose the opportunity for enlargement of fortunes. Perhaps you will reconsider. Maybe I call upon you another time. I will bid you the honorable good evening."

The Japanese had hardly departed when Ramon Solano put in an appearance, much to the delight of the Brockett family, with whom the Cuban was a prime favorite. Greetings exchanged, the boys plunged promptly into the subject of mutual interest, Solano firing the first gun.

"No message yet from General Cole?"

"Not yet. Just had an odd caller, though."

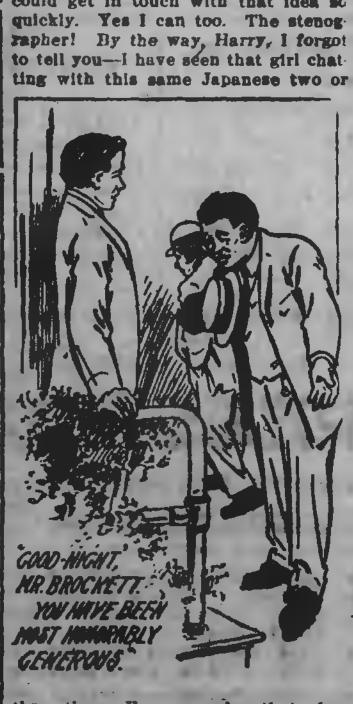
"The Jap we saw talking with that stenographer last night? I passed him as I came in. Curious thing; when I cabled to Havana this afternoon, he was beside me at the Western Union office, and loaned me an ink-pencil."

"He did? Was there anything specially important in the message?"

"Nothing at all aside from informing my father that I would take an extra month for my vacation, beginning now. Even if he could have read it—it was in Spanish, too—that wouldn't be of much value to him."

"Hardly. I am beginning to do some extensive thinking about that Jap though. Listen to the proposition he made me ten minutes ago." And Brockett rapidly outlined the tempting offer made by Mr. Yazimoto.

"Something doing, sure," commented Solano. "I can see one thing clearly. He fancied that you would sell him a dpulicate of your diamond cipher—though I cannot figure out how he could get in touch with that idea so quickly. Yes I can too. The stenographer! By the way, Harry, I forgot to tell you—I have seen that girl chatting with this same Japanese two or three times. You remember that when we saw them together I was trying to recall some place, some occasion, when I had noticed one or both of them?"



"GOOD-NIGHT, MR. BROCKETT. YOU HAVE BEEN MOST HONORABLY GENEROUS."

"Looks as if we would have to watch out for Mr. Yazimoto. He may try some jiu jitsu tricks if he really wants to get that cipher."

"Quite likely, Harry. Do you know anything about jiu jitsu?"

"Only what I have read. I have always believed that a good American swing to the jaw would discount all the jiu jitsu in the world, and, if that wouldn't be enough, I learned a few wrestling tricks from an old grappler some months ago. Nevertheless, I will watch out for the Yazimoto man. He must mean trouble."

The bell rang, and Harry, eagerly responding, welcomed a sturdy, redheaded cherub of fifteen—Mike McKane, a well-liked, much-trusted department messenger, and an especial favorite with General Cole. The boy held, in a boa-constrictor clutch, a thick envelope, which he surrendered to Brockett with a grunt of satisfaction.

"The old man," explained the messenger, "told me to give this to you yerself, and nobody else. You didn't tell no Japanese guy to relay the letter to youse, did you?"

"Why, no—not in a hundred years. What do you mean, Mickey?"

"Tell youse just how it was, Harry. I'm just comin' up yer steps, when a Japanese guy stops me. 'Ah, boy,' says he, 'have you a message for Mr. Brockett? He has asked me to receive it for him.'

"'He gits it himself, an' no one else can horn in,' says I, an' hurried on quick. I thought he was goin' ter make a jump fer me, but mebbe I was mistakened. Anyhow, here's yer letter."

Brockett and Solano exchanged glances.

"This Japanese gentleman is certainly in search of trouble," exclaimed Harry. "I'll look out of the front door and see if he is lingering around."

Brockett opened the door, and stepped out into the darkness. As he left the threshold, he noted, with surprise, that the city lamp which was supposed to burn directly in front of the building was unlighted. His eyes had not yet accustomed themselves to the unexpected gloom, when something seemed to snap and whirr in the wide of his head, his feet were struck from under him, and he sank in a helpless heap upon his own doorsill.

CHAPTER IV.

When Brockett's senses returned, his head was humming and buzzing, while strange, confused noises seemed to struggle with one another for the right to add extra discomfort to his dazed and throbbing brain. He pulled himself to his knees, and was immediately tumbled down again by the fall of some heavy body across his back. A vigorously kicking foot, attached to a squirming leg, caught him in the side, and helped to drive the dizziness away. A twisting mass, jerking and heaving spasmodically, carromed against him, upsetting him for the third time just as he was regaining his balance. Part of the mass came almost under his own face as he struck the walk, and, even in the darkness, he could recognize the features of Mr. Yazimoto, distorted with fury and with pain. Brockett reached over, clutched the throat of the little man with fast-returning strength, and strangled grimly, mercilessly, till the Japanese lay limp and motionless, all the fight choked out of him. Then a small, solid figure climbed off the legs of the prostrate prisoner, and scurried in the direction of the street-lamp. A moment later the light gleamed out in all its pristine radiance, giving the bewildered Brockett a chance to survey the scene of battle.

Mr. Yazimoto, very limp and very inoffensive, was stretched out under Brockett's knees. Ten feet away Ramon Solano was viciously kicking a man who was still fighting, although down and at an overpowering disadvantage. Evidently badly hurt, and hardly able to drag himself along the ground, this dauntless warrior was trying to crawl to closer quarters with the Cuban, who stepped lightly backward, waited till his victim came in range, and then drove his foot crashing into the body of his enemy. The small figure which had vanished towards the street-lamp reappeared, flung itself upon Solano's adversary and pinned him down. Aside from making captives of the beaten assailants, the fight was over.

Brockett and Solano tried to help their prisoners to an upright position, but neither Mr. Yazimoto nor his ally seemed to have as much strength as a limp rag. Aided ably by Mike McKane—the small but active partisan in the recent struggle—the boys managed to drag the captives inside the parlor, and placed them side by side upon a sofa. Mrs. Brockett and Bertha, after assuring themselves that none of the three champions had received serious injury, sat fluttering and wide-eyed near the door, while Brockett interrogated the badly damaged Yazimoto.

"Seems to me, Mr. Yazimoto," Brockett began, "that you owe me quite an explanation. What's the meaning of all this excitement, anyhow?"

Mr. Yazimoto looked up at his jailer, and then at his fellow-captive—a dark little man, as plainly Oriental as Yazimoto himself, but as plainly neither a Japanese nor a Chinaman. Then a smile, a really pleasant, amiable smile, overspread his bruised visage.

"I make mistake, Mr. Brockett. Most misfortunate error. I plan honorably well, but this boy, this small fellow, disarrange plans excellently executed."

"Surest thing you know, pal," approved Mike McKane, gleefully. "I'm the disarranging kid when I get started."

NOW ENJOYING SPLENDID HEALTH

Nervousness And Dyspepsia Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

WALKERTON, ONT., MAY 9TH 1911

"My trouble was extreme Nervousness, brought on by Indigestion or Dyspepsia, from which I suffered in its worst form.

I asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, about "Fruit-a-tives" and he advised me to try them.

I took several boxes and am pleased to say I am now enjoying fine health.

I honestly believe I owe my health to "Fruit-a-tives" and strongly advise anyone suffering from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Nervousness or Sleeplessness, to commence using "Fruit-a-tives" and continue this remedy until a cure is accomplished".

The Beauty Sufferer.

A Parisian lady's maid has been revealing the secrets of her mistress' boudoir and the arts, or, rather, tortures, by which beauty is attained. There is a French saying that you must suffer to be beautiful, and in this instance it seems to have been accepted literally.

For months the poor lady lay flat on her back on the floor motionless, with her arms close to her sides, during several hours a day. This was, it appears, to improve her figure. During the rest of the day for the same period of time she sat on a high stool rocking the upper part of her body backward and forward and from side to side onceasingly. By this process she is said to have acquired a statuesque throat and a sylph's waist.

The lady's nose, having a soaring nature, was corrected and made Grecian by constant application day and night for months of a spring bandage. One nostril being larger than the other, she wore a small sponge in it for a year.

Her cheeks have been filled out and rounded by injections of paraffin. Her ears for months were compressed against the sides of her head by springs, while heavy weights were attached to the lobes to produce the required elongated shape, which has been successfully achieved.

Having suffered this complicated martyrdom for a year, the poor lady has become satisfied that she is sufficiently beautiful.

She has not set much value by the theory that beauty is only skin deep, although she has proved that the theory is correct. What she values is beauty, even if it is only skin deep. Undoubtedly beauty is an asset for woman, but it is not her most desirable gift.

For an Oily Scalp.

An excessively oily scalp cannot be cured at once. Slow treatment is best. Shake a cake of pine tar soap into three quarts of water and set it on the stove, where it will slowly melt. When it is all dissolved allow it to cool and bottle for use. It takes about half a pint for a good shampoo. Into this amount put about six drops of ammonia. Wet the entire head and hair first, then shampoo well with the soap jelly, then rinse well in several waters, making sure all soap has been removed.
